Anticipation is often necessary in magazine journalism. Parade, in an article on Page 28, anticipated President Carter's global trip, set to start Tuesday. # Sadat begins 'sacred' mission

Receives emotional welcome from Israeli leaders

By Marcus Eliason
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Israel on a "sacred" mission of peace and prayed for success in a famous Moslem mosque in Arab Jerusalem today.

The Egyptian president, first Arab leader to visit the Jewish state in its 29-year existence, was welcomed Saturday in an emotional gathering of Israeli leaders and then rode in the evening darkness to Jerusalem, the ancient Holy City and symbol of centuries of strife between Arab and Jew.

Within three hours, he had his first private meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

"I had a personal, warm talk with President Sadat, and I may say that we like each other," Begin said afterward.

After spending the night in a Jewish hotel, Sadat drove to the silver-domed Al Aqsa mosque, took off his shoes in keeping with Moslem ritual and went inside to worship.

The mosque was packed with more than 5,000 worshippers, a normal crowd since today is the day of the Adha feast, commemorating God's command to Abraham to sacrifice his son Isaac. Moslems worship Abraham as Ibrahim.

The 1,000-year-old mosque is the third holiest shrine of Islam after Mecca and Medina. Al Aqsa means "the farthest," signifying the farthest place from Mecca that the Prophet Mohammed reached before making his legendary leap to heaven.

Escorted by Moslem clerics and dressed in suit and tie, Sadat entered the shrine to applause from the worshippers. He sat cross-legged on a flowered carpet, perspiring under the glare of television lights.

Security authorities wanted Sadat to pray privately in the mosque, fearing a threat to his life by Arab dissidents who oppose his visit to Israel.

Few have forgotten that the last Arab leader to try and make peace with Israel, King Abdullah of Jordan, was assassinated by a Palestinian extremist in 1951 outside the mosque. The mosque was then under Arab control.

Arab fury erupts as Sadat arrives in Israel

Associated Press

Libyan envoys burned Egyptian flags Saturday and Palestinian radicals called for an all-out attack on Israel in a wave of Arab fury as President Anwar Sadat arrived for his visit to Jerusalem.

In Jordan, however, the government broke its silence on the trip and appealed to Arabs to "stop pouring oil on the fire" now that Sadat is in Israel.

The Jordanian cabinet issued a statement in Amman, the capital, calling for cooperation and coordination of efforts to preserve Arab unity. It said unilateral reactions to the trip by Arab governments were weakening Arab ranks and yielding "negative results."

At flag-burning ceremonies in Washington and in capitals around the world, Libyan ambassadors declared that Libyan-Egyptian relations had come to an end the moment Sadat stepped onto Israeli soil.

"This flag is now flying in Tel Aviv and has become a symbol of surrender and treachery," Libyan Charge d'Affaires Hassan Sadiq declared as he burned the joint flag of Egypt, Libya and Syria in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Egypt flags burned at capitals around world

Sadiq said Libya would adopt a new flag and would ask the Arab League to expel Egypt and transfer its headquarters from Cairo, its traditional seat and capital of Egypt.

Only Morocco and Sudan voiced support for Sadat. Conservative regimes in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area were largely silent, but Saudi Arabia — the major financial backer of Sadat's impoverished country — criticized the voyage as "inconsistent" with the overall Arab stand.

Syria declared an official day of mourning. At mid-day, all traffic in Damascus stopped for five minutes of silence. Flags were lowered to half-staff and bells tolled as they do for the dead, while prayers droned from minarets of mosques.

The official Iraqi news agency reported massive anti-Egyptian demonstrations in Baghdad and other Iraqi cities. It also said Egyptian students in Iraqi universities occupied the Baghdad offices of the Egyptian airline.

Palestinian refugees burned portraits of Sadat in their camps in Lebanon, and a mass Palestinian demonstration in Beirut heard speeches branding Sadat a traitor and a spy.

Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat met with top military commanders to re-examine policy.

Countless ordinary Arabs huddled by radios to hear news of the Egyptian president's arrival in Israel. Some were opposed and some favored the trip, but all were intrigued.

"I'm speechless. My brain just cannot function," said Maissa Nassar, a Lebanese housewife. Palestinians in Lebanon also gathered to listen to the news over Arab radio stations. In a cafe near the Sabra refugee camp, shouts of "traitor" erupted from one listening group.

Just as Sadat's plane was landing at Tel Aviv, the Voice of Palestine program on Damascus Radio broadcast an order by a Marxist Palestinian guerrilla group for its men to launch an all-out attack on Israeli targets today and to prevent the Egyptian president from praying in the Al-Aqsa mosque.

"Go to Jerusalem... and burn Al-Aqsa with your bodies," the radical Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine said in the broadcast.

But in Egypt, the Arab world's most populous nation, newspapers, radio and television called the visit a "historic event" and hope was high that the trip would open the way to lasting peace in the Middle East.

"If other Arab countries want to fight, let them do it," said a low-salaried government employee. "They have oil billions. We are begging. We want to raise our children and live a decent life."

The buoyant Egyptian mood, however, was tempered by the realization that failure of Sadat's mission could threaten the tenuous truce between Arabs and the Israelis.

Immediately after Sadat's touchdown, gunfire erupted in parts of Beirut's Moslem sector. Palestinians and leftists were shooting into the air to protest.

"The most horrifying disaster in the modern political history of the Arab world has taken place," said the Voice of Palestine broadcast from Damascus. "The president of one-third of the Arab world population is in enemy territory."

Still, many Lebanese, whose country has been victimized for three decades by the Arab-Israeli feud, were excited and pleased by the Sadat trip.

"There is no doubt that President Sadat is a very courageous man," said a 58-year-old Moslem lawyer.

The visit has "broken the ice," said a Lebanese oil executive, a Druze Moslem. "Let's get it over with."

Women back ERA in one-sided vote

By Peggy Simpson
Associated Press

HOUSTON — By an overwhelmingly standing vote, delegates to the first National Women's Conference approved a recommendation Saturday night calling for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Approval of the ERA is considered the core of the 26-point plan of action before the convention, the purpose of which is to map out and submit to Congress a strategy to guarantee women equality in the decades to come.

The delegates debated the motion for 50 minutes, with the grand niece of suffragist Susan B. Anthony appealing for passage. After the vote, nearly all the 2,000 delegates stood and chanted repeatedly, "ERA, ERA."

Opponents to the amendment attempted twice to weaken the resolution, but the first effort was easily defeated and the second was ruled of order.

Earlier, Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., appealing for an end to feuding among factions, told the conference that the battle for women's rights needs "foot soldiers, not kamikaze pilots."

"We will have wasted much more than money" if the federally financed conference ends without resolving differences between factions, she said.

Similar calls for unity came from first lady Rosalynn Carter and former first ladies Betty Ford and Lady Bird Johnson.

The delegates also approved several other items on the 26-point agenda, despite predictions that conservatives would try to amend recommendations as a delaying tactic.

The items approved call for federal support for child care centers, prevention of child abuse, availability of consumer credit for women regardless of marital status, and support for emergency shelters for battered women.

Conservatives attempted and failed three times to define abortion as child abuse.

Hustler's Flynt turns to Jesus

Combined News Services

Accompanied by Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, Ruth Carter Stapleton whisked through Montgomery, Ala. Saturday, preaching a gospel of forgiveness and love to a businessmen's fellowship society.

According to a reliable source, Flynt, who has been convicted in Cincinnati on state obscenity charges, has "converted to Christ" with the assistance of the president's sister, a charismatic faith healer.

Describing himself as the "most misunderstood man in the world," the 41-year-old Flynt told reporters he was traveling with Mrs. Stapleton in "search of social vindication."

Asked if his religious beliefs coincided with those of Mrs. Stapleton, he replied: "I believe in the same way she does, but no one would ever believe that."

The source said Flynt, who is appealing his 7-to-25-year prison sentence, recently had a conversion experience.

When asked about the publisher's presence in her entourage, Mrs. Stapleton's only comment was, "His life is changing more towards Jesus."

Flynt said he has no intention of stopping the publication of Hustler. At the same time, he said, he's interested in putting out a weekly news magazine.

During her hour-long address, Mrs. Stapleton urged members of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International to practice "unconditional love" and avoid judging others.

Alice ducks drunk center for day as guru

Rock music's resident ghoul, Alice Cooper, took leave from an alcoholic treatment center Saturday for a day's shooting in Hollywood on the surreal Beatles-tribute film "Sgt. Pepper."

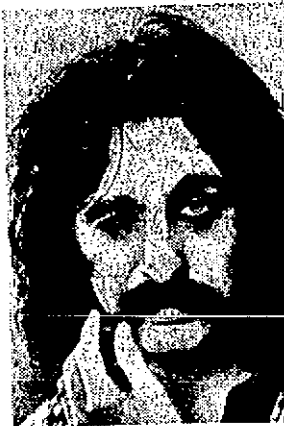

Cooper, 30, who outraged his way to fame with such on-stage antics as choking chickens and tossing watermelons at his audience, admitted himself to an upstate New York alcoholic treatment facility four weeks ago. He said he would return to the hospital after scenes are shot, within two days.

Cooper is playing a money-grubbing religious cult leader in the Robert Stigwood film, which also stars Peter Frampton and the Bee Gees. The film is a rock opera using 23 Beatles songs, telling the story of how the mythical town of Heartland was saved from doom by a group of local troubadours, Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.

Cooper said he decided to quit drinking because, "I felt it was starting to get in the way."

Cooper's wife, Sheryl, said Cooper "really didn't drink all that much, but you just never saw him without a drink in his hand."

"I'm addicted to ginger ale now," Cooper said with a laugh.

Huston ends 2 months in hospital

Actor-director John Huston was released from Los Angeles Cedars-Sinai Hospital Saturday after a two-month stay following heart surgery, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Huston, 71, who has worked on more than 50 motion pictures since 1930 and is the winner of two Academy Awards, entered the hospital Sept. 25 for the elective surgery. A month later, another operation was performed to relieve complications resulting from the original surgery.

A citizen of Ireland, Huston is expected to remain in the Los Angeles area for follow-up care, the hospital spokeswoman said.

The actor won his two Oscars in 1948 for writing and directing "Treasure of Sierra Madre," starring Humphrey Bogart and Huston's father Walter. More recently, he played the incestuous tycoon in "Chinatown."

Ned Beatty

Actor Ned Beatty has been sued for divorce by his wife Belinda, who cited irreconcilable differences in her Los Angeles Superior Court suit.

Mrs. Beatty, married to the 40-year-old actor for six years, filed the suit Friday. The couple has two children.

Beatty was nominated for an Academy Award as best supporting actor earlier this year.

Key Bay of Pigs figure dead

Dr. Manuel Artime, a former officer in Fidel Castro's revolutionary army who turned against Castro and helped launch the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion, is dead at the age of 45.

He died of liver cancer Thursday at Miami's American Hospital.

Artime defected from Castro's forces in 1964, then served as a leader of Brigade 2506 in the Bay of Pigs invasion on April 17, 1961.

He was taken prisoner. He was freed in 1963 along with 1,100 prisoners in exchange for $53 million in food and medicine demanded by Castro and paid by the U.S. government.

Included in the total was $500,000 for Artime's life. The same was demanded and paid in exchange for Jose San Roman, the military leader of the invasion, and Ernesto Oliva, the second-in-command of the invading forces.

Fire deaths toll hits 17 in strike

Combined News Services

LONDON — Two more elderly fire victims died in Britain Saturday, the sixth day of a national firemen's strike. There was no end to the walkout in sight.

The deaths brought to 17 the number killed in fires since the country's 33,000 full-time firemen went on strike last Monday morning.

Volunteer firemen and 9,500 soldiers, airmen, marines and seamen tried to fill the breach by tackling fires wherever they broke out.

Gandhi party ploy fizzles

NEW DELHI, India — Supporters of Indira Gandhi retreated anew Saturday from efforts to install the former prime minister as head of her defeated Congress party. A Gandhi-faction leader, Kamalapati Tripathi, announced abandonment of a campaign to oust party president K.B. Reddy in favor of Mrs. Gandhi, who was 60 years old Saturday. Mrs. Gandhi has insisted throughout recent party maneuvering she was not interested in the party presidency. She did not dissociate herself from it, however, and was active in intraparty wrangling behind the scenes.

Greeks go to polls today

ATHENS — Greece's 70-year-old Premier Constantine Karamanlis was expected to win a strong mandate in nationwide elections today for his efforts to mend fences with the United States and to get Greece into the Common Market. The key contest was expected to be for second place between George Mavros' moderate United Democratic Center and the anti-NATO Panhellenic Socialist Party of Andreas Papandreu. The winner was expected to determine how rapidly Karamanlis could proceed with his pro-Western policies.

Rightists attack leftists

OPORTO, Portugal — Right-wing protesters, some tossing bombs and swinging chains and metal bars, attacked leftist offices in this northern Portuguese city Saturday, causing substantial damage and injuring several persons, police reported. The violence was an offshoot of a massive rally in a central city square by tens of thousands of rightists denouncing the removal of anti-Communist Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso from his post as northern military commander. Veloso was dismissed because of his reported political commitment to the right-of-center Social Democratic party.

Blast hits German center

MADRID, Spain — An explosion rocked the West German Institute of Culture here Saturday. Authorities said no one was in the building and no casualties were reported. The blast was believed connected to a recent chain of attacks on West German property in Europe that followed the deaths in jail of three German terrorists last month.

Another royal baby

LONDON — The Duchess of Gloucester gave birth Saturday to a 7-pound, 11-ounce baby girl—Britain's second royal baby this week. The baby was born at the same West London hospital where Princess Anne gave birth last Tuesday to the first grandchild of Queen Elizabeth II.

Unlike Princess Anne's child, born a commoner, the duchess' daughter automatically takes the title Lady Windsor. The duchess is married to the queen's first cousin, 33-year-old Prince Richard, Duke of Gloucester, ninth in line of succession to the throne.

What are the laws regarding overtime pay? I'd also like to know if the regulations require that a person be paid time and a half or double time. W.H., Los Alamitos.

In California, most employees are covered by overtime laws, but there are separate regulations for each different industry. In some occupations, an employee must be paid time and half if he works more than eight hours a day or 40 hours a week, and double time if he works more than 12 hours a day.

In other industries, however, overtime pay isn't required unless an employee works more than 48 hours a week. The state has been temporarily restrained from enforcing overtime laws for amusement and transportation workers because of lawsuits filed by companies involved in those industries.

The state does not require workers to be paid extra for working on holidays. Fringe benefits such as paid holidays, vacations or sick leave are not required by law. If a company has a union contract requiring overtime pay for holidays, however, such an agreement is legally binding.

A person can find out if he's eligible for overtime pay and under what circumstances by contacting the California Labor Standards Division office at 230 E. Fourth St. or 28 Civic Center Plaza, Santa Ana.

Sew and reap

I'd like to know how I can find out which manufacturers of sewing machines have the best reputation for standing behind their advertising claims. R.B., Long Beach.

Consumer Reports rated 22 portable and console models in its May 1975 issue and printed the results of a reader survey on the repair records of the major sewing machine manufacturers in the magazine's "1975 Buyer's Guide." These are the latest studies Action Line could find and we've sent copies of the articles to you.

Among machines that can be used as portables or with consoles, the Viking 1030 scored the highest overall in the magazine's 1975 study. It was followed by the Pfaff 1196, the Bernina 808 and the Elna 2322. Singer's Stylist 513 and its Touch and Sew 758 model both ranked fifth overall.

Sears' Kenmore 1814 was sixth, Montgomery Ward's Signature 286 was 10th and Penney's 6900 was 15th. Of the four strictly portable models tested, Elna's Lotus 35 was rated first, followed by the Singer Genie 354, Sears' Kenmore 1040 and Penney's Swing and Sew 6550.

On the repair survey, 75 percent of the 275,000 readers responding to the questionnaire in 1974 said their sewing machines had never needed repairs. In the frequency-of-repairs category, the readers rated Bernina, Brother, Elna and Sears as better than average; Neclo, New Home, Pfaff, Viking, Ward's and White makes as average, and Norge, Riccar, Necchi and Singer as worse than average.

On readers' satisfaction with repairs by the manufacturer or an authorized service center, Bernina, Elna and Viking were rated better than average. Brother, Ward's, Morse, Riccar and Necchi were rated less than average, and all the other models studied got an average rating for satisfaction with repairs.

Watson says he's still assessor

Associated Press

Former Los Angeles County Assessor Philip Watson, who was retired last month by the county Retirement Board but was refused a service-connected disability pension, said Saturday that legally he should still be the assessor.

"I think that the Retirement Board did not legally retire me on Oct. 5," Watson said.

"I'm entitled to have my job and my pay pending a decision on my application."

Watson, 53, said that since he specifically applied for retirement with a $24,750 yearly service-connected disability pension, the board's decision to retire him on a straight $20,172 pension was illegal.

5 held in 'plot' aimed at Briggs

FBI jails 'bomb ring'

Associated Press

An FBI search following the arrest of five persons charged with a bombing plan turned up 100-150 pounds of "what appears to be explosives," an FBI spokesman said Saturday.

Agents searched five Los Angeles area locations where they had seen the people prior to their arrest Saturday. The five — at least one of them identified as a Weather Underground organizer — were arrested in connection with an alleged plan to bomb the office of state Sen. John Briggs, R-Fullerton, the FBI said.

Two persons were arrested in Los Angeles and three in Houston, said Ted Gunderson, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles office.

Gunderson said agents and Los Angeles police uncovered numerous weapons.

In Los Angeles agents arrested Thomas Michael Justesen, 27, and a man identified only as Vince, also known as Paul Daly, who is between 27 and 32 years old, Gunderson said.

Those arrested in Houston were identified as Clayton Van Lydegraf, 62, Judith Emily Bissell, 33, and a woman named Esther, 28 to 32 years old, who used the name Grace Fortner.

All five were charged with conspiracy to violate the federal firearms act and possession of an unregistered explosive device, Gunderson said.

Ms. Bissell and Esther were arrested at the Astro Arena, a hall adjacent to the Astrodome, where a rally was being held in opposition to the International Women's Year Conference.

Agents followed the women to the hall, waited several hours and arrested them as they were getting into a car to leave, said agent Robert Franck.

He said they had been in Houston for several days and were staying at a motel. Van Lydegraf was staying at another motel.

On Oct. 25, Van Lydegraf and Ms. Bissell told an FBI undercover agent that Briggs' office in Fullerton had been "targeted for violent action," Gunderson said.

Gunderson said they told the agent that a bomb constructed at the home of Ms. Bissell would be planted under the porch of the office.

The complaint also stated that all five arrested made trips to the desert near Barstow for firearms training.

Gunderson said Ms. Bissell and Esther several times gave undercover agents detailed instructions on how to build an explosive device.

In the complaint, Van Lydegraf was identified as head of the Prairie Fire organizing committee of the Weather Underground.

He was accused of directing Ms. Bissell, Esther, Justesen and Daly to recruit individuals for an underground group whose primary objectives were the assassinations of public figures and bombings of public buildings to advance the goal of revolution against the government.

Van Lydegraf is alleged to have told an undercover FBI special agent last May that Ms. Bissell and Esther were leaders of the revolutionary committee of the Weather Underground in Los Angeles.

Ms. Bissell had been sought by the FBI since June 9, 1970, when a federal warrant in Seattle charged her with conspiracy to destroy government property and possession of an illegal destructive device.

All five are scheduled to appear before U.S. magistrates Monday.

Skeleton found, may be kidnapped youth

Associated Press

The skeletal remains believed to be those of a 16-year-old youth kidnapped more than three years ago were unearthed Saturday in a remote desert area near Palm Springs, the FBI reported.

Ted Gunderson, special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI office, tentatively identified the skeleton as that of Lawrence Raymond Adell, a high school sophomore last seen alive in Palm Springs on the night of June 1, 1974.

The Riverside County coroner's office was examining the remains to confirm identification, Gunderson said.

Acting on information from the U.S. Attorney's office, Gunderson said, authorities uncovered the skeleton near the Desert Hot Springs Country Club after four days of digging. Riverside County district attorney and sheriff's office and Palm Springs police also were involved in the search.

Beating death case reward

Donald David Downs, 43, was beaten to death during a robbery on a downtown Long Beach street last Sept. 11.

Witnesses who called police said they saw the victim down in front of 441 Linden Ave. at 12:40 a.m. with a man savagely beating and kicking him. No one was able to give a description of the street robber, who fled on foot as others started toward the scene. Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Downs.

EXCLUSIVE

Kissinger says mission mustn't fail

By James Reston
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Henry A. Kissinger, who talked by phone this weekend with both Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, said in an interview Saturday that Sadat's mission "is one of those historic events that cannot be permitted to fail."

Nothing will be quite the same again in Middle East diplomacy, the former secretary of state observed. The mission will lead either to progress toward peace or to war. Both the prospects and the dangers are monumental, he said, adding:

"I think the big issue of Sunday is whether they can find words equal to the spiritual quality of the occasion."

Kissinger's assessment of the reasons for and possible consequences of the developments was as follows:

In personal terms, Sadat has got beyond the military mathematics and political squabbles of the Middle East crisis and wants to discuss the philosophy of the problem.

IN DIPLOMATIC TERMS, the Egyptian leader concluded that the proposed Geneva conference would put him at the mercy of extremists unless he knew ahead of time what would come out of it. Also, the Russians would probably maneuver at Geneva to keep him at a disadvantage so that he could not act independently. Accordingly, he thought events were drifting into a crisis beyond anyone's control, and he decided to act.

Kissinger said he had nothing to do with Sadat's initiative and was surprised, not that the Egyptian president had acted, but that he had taken such a spectacular course.

The visit by itself will probably not produce any formula for a general settlement, but "it will change the moral landscape of the Middle East," Kissinger said.

On the prospects, he said that once an Arab leader had set foot in Jerusalem and talked with Begin privately about the dreams and realities of the region and their impact on the rest of the world, the arguments of the past could never be quite the same.

On the dangers, Kissinger said that both sides, with their own peoples and a world audience looking and listening on television, were bound to put forward their strongest national arguments and demands.

THE FIRST DANGER is that if no progress is made in their private talks, the stalemate will become unbearable and both sides will give up on a negotiated settlement, Kissinger said.

The second is that Sadat, the most moderate of the Arab leaders, could be destroyed, not in Israel but by what Kissinger called "the sequence of political events" in case of failure.

Kissinger said it would be a mistake to keep talking about a "comprehensive Middle East settlement" at a Geneva conference as a preferable alternative to the Begin-Sadat meeting. If the two could not agree on a philosophic basis for compromise, Kissinger observed, the bureaucrats at Geneva could certainly not agree on boundaries or any other points of difference, and "Geneva would become irrelevant."

"For the first time," Kissinger said, "these leaders are talking together and in Jerusalem, with Sadat going to the most sacred religious and historical shrines of Israel. Let them decide what the requirements for the future are. A Geneva conference is not an end in itself. If this mission doesn't succeed, how can Geneva succeed when you're dealing with bureaucrats?"

IN HIS TELEPHONE conversations with Begin and Sadat, the former secretary of state said, he did not presume to discuss specific issues but stressed the "human aspects" and "historic possibilities" of the talks. He added that he hoped all responsible leaders would do the same.

It is evident, Kissinger said, that the two leaders faced opposition within their own countries and among their allies, but he stressed that they were aware of the ironies of history in this meeting and of the larger philosophic and religious traditions of their peoples.

In defining his view of Sadat's reasons for going to Israel, Kissinger made the following observations:

"I think he is trying to get at where the fundamentals are. He wants to move beyond the rhetoric of a generation to a place where people can talk about the fundamentals of their anguish and their aspirations. And I think he wants it to be said as his lasting testimonial. In a funny way it may be that he can find a common ground with the anguish of the Israelis, and they can talk about their deepest anguish, rather than about some line on the desert and how you can find security where there cannot be any physical security."

"AND I MUST SAY, from my brief conversation with Begin, I think he also understood the historic nature of the moment."

"Are they really religious men?" he was asked.

Sadat is religious in a non-liturgical sense, Kissinger replied. He is also influenced by his wife and family, and by the sufferings of the Egyptian people. Begin is more religious in a liturgical sense, the former secretary of state added, noting that a year ago Begin never thought he would become prime minister, and here he was involved in one of the biggest events in recent Israeli history.

"I have the impression," Kissinger said, "that Begin understands the human possibilities of this occasion, but he has difficult problems, and everything depends on how he responds in private to this historic opportunity."

Sadat's warm reception in Israel Saturday dramatizes Kissinger's main point — that this is a time for a different and more human dialogue between the two countries after two generations of separation and strife.

"Why didn't you think of such a dramatic occasion when you were in charge?" Kissinger was asked.

"In another day," he replied, "I'll probably convince myself that I did, but the truth is I wasn't that smart."

Egyptian meets Israeli — unbelievable

By Elias Antar
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — "Okay Nabil, Aron will take you and bring you back in my car," the Israeli said. "Thanks Zev, see you after lunch," the Egyptian replied.

It was a routine enough exchange between two men — except that it took place in Jerusalem between an Egyptian and an Israeli and was, therefore, unbelievable.

In the dining room of a Jerusalem hotel, a top Egyptian official politely heaped eggplant salad onto the plate of his Israeli counterpart. "Please have some of the rice, it's very good," the Israeli replied.

It's unbelievable. For the Egyptian officials and journalists here to work on or cover Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Israel, being in this ancient city is like a dream, a mind-bending experience they cannot fully comprehend even as they live it.

"Can you believe we are doing what we are doing here and now?" an Arab asked Sadat's press adviser, Saad Zaghloul Nassar, as they shook hands in the lobby of the King David Hotel.

"No, of course not," Nassar replied, with a laugh.

It's unbelievable. "I'm just sitting here trying to let it all sink in," said an Egyptian official, staring from a sidewalk cafe at Saturday crowds strolling through the sun-bathed streets of Jerusalem.

Many of the Egyptian officials and journalists agreed to discuss their feelings on condition their names not be used.

All are having to undergo a sort of de-brainwashing operation in the space of a few eventful days. Psychological roadblocks and myths are being torn down even as some doubts persist over whether Sadat is following the right path — a path that has brought him into conflict with most of the Arab world. Grasping the fact that Sadat is in effect opening at least limited ties with the Jewish state virtually overnight is a wrenching experience for the Egyptians.

"Suddenly, black has become white," said one Egyptian journalist. The Star of David flag, long viewed by the Arabs as a symbol of Israeli expansionism, now is fluttering alongside the red, white and black Egyptian banner everywhere in the city.

"If someone had told me two weeks ago that I would be in Israel today, I would have told him he was absolutely mad," said another Egyptian.

Most of the Egyptians have been busy preparing for the Sadat visit from the moment they arrived on a special flight Friday. Several who were asked said they had not had time to collect their impressions of Israel and the Israelis.

"We see the reality of it. They are people like normal people and Jerusalem looks clean," said one.

Record security screen for Sadat

By Arthur Max
Associated Press

JERUSALEM (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is in range of hundreds of Israeli guns throughout his visit this weekend as Israel mounts its largest peacetime security operation.

Guarding visiting VIPs has become routine in a nation that has received Pope Paul VI, former President Nixon and U.S. secretaries of state Henry A. Kissinger and Cyrus R. Vance.

The job of creating an impenetrable shield for the first Arab head of state openly to visit Israel staggered even veteran police.

Sadat's decision to come "as soon as possible" meant police had only two days' notice.

Police are reluctant to say much about the massive operation but admit that precautions for the 1974 Nixon visit paled by comparison.

They must watch for attacks from all sides — from extremist Palestinians enraged by Sadat's peace gesture, to embittered families of slain Israeli soldiers, to elated Israelis wanting to overexpress their thanks.

Israeli airspace was closed five hours before Sadat's scheduled arrival. Police barricades shut off the approaches to Ben-Gurion Airport for an 8-mile radius 12 hours in advance. Those entering the security net were subject to special checks.

Jerusalem's road link with Tel Aviv, the country's most traveled highway, also was sealed off.

The shield around Sadat began the instant his jet touched down. Infantry troops surrounded the jet at a distance as it rolled to a stop.

Jeeps mounted with .30-caliber machine guns were assigned to escort Sadat's motorcades, with dozens of green-beret border police carrying M-16 rifles following the jeeps.

The King David Hotel, Sadat's Jerusalem headquarters, was emptied of other guests and closed to journalists even before the arrival of an advance Egyptian party Friday. Israeli and Egyptian security agents were seen chatting inside.

Border police camped outside the hotel and the Jerusalem Theater, which has been converted into an international press center, far from Sadat's route.

Military and police helicopters began patrolling the skies long before Sadat left Egypt.

Sadat's decision to pray at East Jerusalem's Al-Aqsa mosque today was a security nightmare. In 1951, when the mosque still was in Arab territory, King Abdullah of Jordan was assassinated there by a Palestinian angry at the monarch's acceptance of Israel.

From the mosque, Sadat will walk to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, traditional burial place of Jesus.

Egyptian security agents flew here Friday to inspect the arrangements and see the sites Sadat will visit. They declined to speak to reporters.

Sadat talks as Arab military power at ebb

By Drew Middleton
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Egypt's current military weakness and the unevenness of weaponry and training in other Arab countries are reflected in President Anwar Sadat's willingness to visit Israel.

American and West European analysts said that now and perhaps for 18 months to come, Israel will be stronger than any combination of Arab countries.

From the Arab standpoint, they argued, this is the time to talk and temporize.

These sources were not impressed by the statement by Gen. Mordechai Gur, the Israeli chief of staff, that the Egyptian forces have been ordered to prepare for war in 1978 and could "unleash hostilities before then."

THE FEELING in Washington and at the Brussels headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was that Gur was crying wolf when the Egyptian wolf has lost some of its teeth and its claws are dulled.

Egypt, the most populous of the Arab countries, is the vital element in Arab military strength, these sources said. Egyptian ground, air and sea forces played the major Arab role in the four Middle East wars, and without an effective Egyptian fighting force, an Arab attack on Israel is not likely to have any success.

Gur emphasized that in recent months, the Egyptian Army has carried out extensive exercises in Sinai, has reinforced its troops there, has set up new gun emplacements and has built facilities to accommodate "at least five extra divisions."

Balancing these assertions, which may reflect the Israelis' fear of surprise attack, are the weaknesses of the Egyptian forces and of the other Arab countries that would be allied with Egypt in any new war.

ON PAPER, Egypt has an active armed force of 345,000 men. But two factors limit their combat effectiveness. There is an acute shortage of spare parts, especially for the Soviet bombers, fighter-bombers and interceptors that are the cutting edge of the air force and for Soviet antitank and anti-aircraft missile systems.

Fighter pilots at the major air base at Matruh were flying an average of only four hours each month last summer as a result of the chronic shortage of spare parts.

The second factor is that the West European military industry has not fulfilled Egyptian military orders. Forty-four Mirage F1's and an unannounced number of Crotale surface-to-air missiles are on order from France. The Egyptians have been prodding the British to sell them the Swingfire antitank missile.

Aside from 38 old Mirage IIIE fighters in the air force, Egypt's armament remains predominantly of Soviet origin. Since early 1974, the Russians have shut off the flow of spare parts.

Last spring, Sadat addressed several meetings of air force and naval officers who had complained of the government's failure to obtain spare parts either from the Soviet Union or the West. According to a Western military source, he did not calm their fears.

AMERICAN SOURCES emphasized that even if the Egyptian forces were to get European-made arms, a considerable period — some put it at three years — would be required before the Egyptian soldiers and airmen could be trained in the use of the unfamiliar weapons.

The sources pointed out that until now, General Gur and other senior Israeli officers had been emphasizing the danger of an "eastern front" composed of Syria, Iraq and Jordan.

They also stress that Egypt could not fight an effective war against Israel on her own, and that prompt and vigorous military operations by these three countries would be required for a campaign with any prospect of even limited success.

The Syrian Army and Air Force matched Egypt's in effectiveness in the 1973 war. Since then a dispersal of forces and Russian coolness have reduced the importance of the Syrian threat to northern Israel.

The Russians, affronted by the deployment in Lebanon of 30,000 Syrian troops in 1976, cut off arms aid. When the supply line was reopened in 1977, the Soviet Union did not include any of the new weapons developed since 1973.

SYRIA, CONSEQUENTLY, would have to enter a new war with aircraft and missiles less modern than those developed by Israel or bought from the United States.

"You can't expect Syrian MIG-21's to make much impact on the American F-15's of the Israeli Air Force," one source said.

Since 1973, Iraq has been favored by Soviet arms shipments, receiving large numbers of T-62 tanks, armored personnel carriers, surface-to-surface missiles and 90 MIG-23B interceptors. But geography and politics combine to lessen Iraq's importance as an intervening power in any new war.

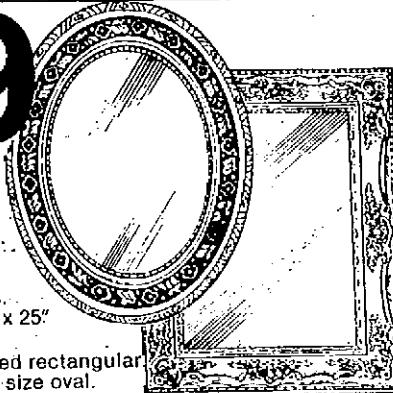

The main bases of Iraqi military power are well over 100 miles from a fighting front on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Moreover, the longstanding feud between the Baath Socialist parties of Iraq and Syria would seem to preclude close cooperation, although Western and Israeli sources agree that a war against Israel would be a powerful if temporary unifying factor.

Jordan's army is acknowledged by the Israelis as the best trained and led of any Arab force.

Sadat begins 'sacred' Israeli peace mission

But Sadat insisted on "praying with his people," his aides said. He was guarded by his own security men inside the mosque.

A group of worshippers shouted "ya'ish al rais" (long live the president).

The nasal chant of "Allah Akbar" (Allah is Great), reverberated among the marble pillars and stone walls of the mosque.

Major Arab notables from the occupied West Bank, such as the mayor of the town of Hebron, Faded Qawasmeh, were in the mosque. Worshippers strained for a glimpse of Sadat.

There was no sign of hostility to reflect the widespread outrage in the Arab world that has greeted Sadat's bold decision to visit Israel.

Dozens of armed security men strolled about the mosque's exterior.

ON SADAT'S arrival in Jerusalem Saturday, some of the thousands of jubilant, applauding Israelis shouted, "shalom" — peace. The Egyptian president was accompanied by Israeli President Ephraim Katzir and the two rode in a U.S.-supplied, bullet-proof black limousine.

Some in the crowd flourished red, white and black Egyptian flags. Parents held their children aloft to see the Egyptian leader. An old man in a prayer shawl chanted psalms.

TV will carry Sadat's speech

NEW YORK (AP) — All three major television networks planned live coverage of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's speech today before the Israeli Parliament in Jerusalem, in addition to several special programs.

The speech was scheduled to begin about 6 a.m. PST. All three networks said they would stay with the speech until its conclusion, estimated about 7 a.m.

CBS said it would continue coverage with a six-minute report during half-time in today's football game.

The CBS news magazine "60 Minutes," which begins at 7 p.m. PST, also will include a 10-minute segment on Sadat and there will be a 30-minute wrapup aired at 11:30 Eastern and Pacific time, 10:30 Central.

The "NBC Nightly News" will be expanded from 30 to 60 minutes to allow for extensive coverage on Sadat. It will air at 6 p.m. Eastern and Western and 5 p.m. Central time.

ABC News has scheduled an hour-long special tonight on the entire weekend in Israel at 10:45 p.m. Eastern and Pacific times, 9:45 p.m. Central.

NBC's "Today Show" on Monday will be an hour longer than usual to include a final Sadat news conference and his departure from Israel.

linians. Begin will follow him to the Knesset rostrum.

Sadat also is scheduled to make a formal call on President Katzir.

The Egyptian president, wearing a pale suit, at first appeared stern-faced and uneasy as he walked down the airplane ramp. But he relaxed visibly when Begin met him at the foot of the ramp and the two men talked and laughed together.

AS SADAT moved into the waiting crowd shaking hands, Egyptian security men stood at his back, sweeping the scene.

Security for the visit was the tightest in Israeli history.

Police sealed off all roads to Jerusalem two hours before Sadat's arrival. And access to Jerusalem from the Israeli-occupied, Arab-populated West Bank of the Jordan River was closed even earlier to prevent possible infiltration of anti-Sadat militants.

Sadat's trip to Israel completes his transformation from a hardliner opposing any diplomatic ties with the Jewish state to an outspoken moderate urging the Arab world to reach a negotiated peace with Israel.

It was not known whether the visit would bring any tangible breakthrough toward a Middle East peace. But it is seen as a gamble to break the psychological barriers now standing in the way of reconvening a Geneva peace conference before the end of the year.

The visit is full of political risks. At best, he could achieve significant progress toward Geneva. At worst, Egypt will be cut off from an outraged Arab world politically, economically and militarily.

Mideast news draws ire of TV grid fans

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC-TV network affiliates received thousands of phone calls Saturday from viewers concerned that coverage of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's arrival in Israel would cause them to miss the Michigan-Ohio State football game, the network said.

ABC's coverage of Sadat's historic visit ran from 9 a.m. PST to 10:12 a.m. Its telecast of the football game began about seven minutes after the kickoff at Ann Arbor, Mich. Viewers did not miss any scoring.

"We had to lose our pre-game show, but we cut in three separate times with pre-game reports," said ABC Sports liaison Don Bernstein in Ann Arbor. "There were eight minutes remaining in the first period when we went on the air, and we picked up the action on the play prior to Ohio State's field goal."

Women at conference pass pro-ERA plank

The delegates also recommended that more women be named to federally funded cultural institutions such as libraries and museums, and that women who own businesses receive the same government aid as minority-owned businesses.

In addition, they approved recommendations for enforcing anti-discrimination laws in education, for seeking an increase in the number of women in political office and waging war on discrimination in hiring and promotions.

OUTSIDE the coliseum, a minor clash occurred when whites began yelling "white power." One observer said men shouted to the women: "Why don't you go home and take care of your families."

About 20 women surrounded them and exchanged words.

Ms. Jordan, who gave the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention last summer, spoke to some 13,000 women in the Albert Thomas Convention Center. Five miles away, other groups of women, contending their views weren't being represented, held a protest rally.

The congresswoman cautioned conference delegates that if the session ends without healing having occurred, "we will have wasted, lost, negated an opportunity to do something for ourselves and for generations that are not here. Not making a difference is a cost we cannot afford."

"In all women's movements, racism must be replaced by interdependence and mutual respect," Ms. Jordan said, declaring, "This is the time for foot soldiers, not kamikaze pilots."

Dr. Gloria Scott, president of the National Girl Scouts, opened the conference by calling it "the most significant and far-reaching event in this century... We are in passage and our fates are bound together."

MRS. CARTER, who has carried President Carter's human rights campaign to South America, said the goal of U.S. women is "equal participation."

There have been and will be "a lot of disagreements and conflicts," she said. "But I agree with my daughter-in-law Judy that we must guard against obscuring valid issues with defensiveness and anger."

Mrs. Ford said women "must keep focused on our goals — in business, education, employment, politics or in the home."

She said women can have different interests, "but we shouldn't be dismayed by the clash of

Soviet 'monitoring' in 3 U.S. cities bared

By David Burnham
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter has approved a broad government program to make it more difficult for the spies of the Soviet Union, other nations and businesses to eavesdrop on telephone communications in the United States.

The program was approved last week when Carter signed a secret directive, some parts of which were described Friday in a background briefing by two high-ranking government officials who requested anonymity.

UNDER THE program, federal research on how to improve telephone security will be increased. Virtually all government telephone messages in Washington, New York and San Francisco are being routed through underground cables, and private industry is being actively encouraged to develop and use more secure telephone equipment.

The officials also said the United States has made a direct diplomatic approach to the Soviet Union about its eavesdropping here in connection with the discussions of the high levels of microwave radiation that have been discovered in the vicinity of the American embassy in Moscow.

The program disclosed Friday is the result of more than four years of highly secret deliberation at the highest level of the government. Because of the nature of the communications industry, the program could have significant effects on the American economy and ultimately on many other aspects of American life.

THE OFFICIALS, who for security reasons declined to describe "how we know what we know," said that at the present time, the "Soviet Union is conducting surveillance from four sites in three cities."

They said that the "targets of concern are clearly the government itself and business," particularly in the defense area, but also other economic areas."

The officials insisted that the general public should not be concerned about eavesdropping by the Soviet Union and other nations. "To the best of our knowledge the public at large is not really a target," one of the experts said.

The two officials declined to make any more precise estimate of the extent of the eavesdropping on the United States telephone system. But just last week in Chicago, the head of the Central Intelligence Agency, Adm. Stansfield Turner, warned that "hijackers, gangsters, foreign intelligence operatives and industrial spies" could all be involved in such operations.

WITH MORE than two-thirds of domestic long-distance calls being transmitted by microwaves, or ultra high-frequency radio signals, knowledgeable sources say, transmissions can be plucked from the air and then "sorted" for sensitive material by massive high-speed computers.

Former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, in a speech on June 9, 1976, charged that the Soviet bloc nations "invest large sums of money, personnel and sophisticated technology in collecting information within the United States and throughout the world on our military capabilities, our weapon systems, our defense structure, our American enterprise system and our social divisions."

Rockefeller, who led the Ford administration's investigation of the domestic operations of the CIA, said foreign eavesdropping was not limited to government targets "but also electronic surveillance in the business and private lives of American citizens. This is not only possible, it is being done."

One expert who is not in government said in an interview Saturday that other nations who may be conducting electronic surveillance of the U.S. telephone system, in addition to the Soviet Union, were East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia. The expert, who also requested that he not be identified, said there was some concern that China also might be eavesdropping but that because of the small number of Chinese government establishments, this threat was believed to be minimal.

EXCLUSIVE

The decision of the Carter administration to make public even some aspects of its program to limit eavesdropping represents a shift in U.S. policy. In the past, the National Security Agency, which is responsible for communications security, always has prevailed in its view that the less said about eavesdropping the better. One probable reason for the secrecy of Carter's actual directive may be that some parts of it touch on the work of the NSA.

The partially muffled disclosure of the program, on the other hand, may have been required to encourage industry to take security measures Carter apparently has decided are required by the potential hazards of Russian eavesdropping.

Another factor in the decision to unveil the program may have been the political need to meet the charge of inactivity on this issue that has been made by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

The officials disclosed that the federal government already has held briefing sessions with a total of 28 corporations about the possibility that their telephone links may not be secure. Many of these companies have begun changing their telephone procedures.

One official said that one of the most difficult decisions involved in the deliberations was deciding who would be responsible for carrying out the government program. Carter's decision was to establish a special committee headed by Dr. Frank Press, his science adviser, to monitor the various parts of the program to be carried out by the Defense Department and a recently created office to be headed by an assistant secretary of commerce for communications and information policy.

"We didn't think it appropriate to have the Department of Defense controlling the civilian sector," the official said. The officials said that several technological changes now being adopted by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. within several years would increase the difficulty of eavesdropping. By 1981, for example, a significant part of the country will have what is called "common channel interoffice signaling," a technical system that will make it almost impossible to identify who is making individual long distance calls.

Navy acts to get fleet shipshape

By Fred S. Hoffman
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The Navy has proposed to cut its program for building new warships by one-third over the next five years so more money can be spent on overhauling the current fleet.

Pentagon sources say the Navy wants to shift $5 billion to $7 billion in future spending to improve the readiness of existing vessels, many of which have fallen into disrepair.

If carried out, the decision will mean a reduction from 160 to 101 in the number of new warships and support vessels funded for construction over the five-year period. For some time the Navy has sought to eliminate a backlog in vital ship overhauls and aircraft maintenance.

A major cutback in new ship construction, however, would force abandonment of the Pentagon's goal of increasing the present fleet of around 460 vessels to 600 by the mid-1980s.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown is expected to reach a final decision in early December. At that time he will be completing the overall military budget for the 1979 fiscal year and a five-year defense program through 1983.

The ultimate decision will rest with President Carter, who is scheduled to submit his budget to Congress early next year.

The problem involves choosing how best to spend available dollars. And the Carter administration has shown from the outset that it places urgent priority on upgrading the readiness of the vessels already in service.

While the Carter administration trimmed then-President Ford's fiscal 1978 defense budget by about $2.8 billion, it added about $280 million to pay for delayed maintenance on ships, planes, and other equipment of all the armed services.

Sources said there is no major controversy over the new direction of the shipbuilding program. They noted that Adm. James Holloway, chief of naval operations, has strongly urged measures to correct the ravages caused by late overhauls, spare parts shortages and the backlog of warplane maintenance.

Navy officials have blamed the situation on unanticipated inflation which ate away funds previously approved for maintenance and upkeep of major equipment.

The Navy is proposing a budget that will include nearly $7 billion for 19 new ships, including nine frigates, a new class of guided missile cruiser, two nuclear-powered attack submarines, a Trident missile-firing submarine and six support vessels, such as tenders.

The proposed five-year program totaling 101 ships would include 74 war vessels. The plan also calls for modernization of 26 ships to extend their operating lives.

The reduction of nearly 60 ships in the previous program will bear heavily on ocean escorts and other surface warships.

U.S.-Soviet naval agreement eyed

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The administration is hoping to reach agreement soon with the Soviet Union on general terms of an accord limiting naval activity in the Indian Ocean.

American and Soviet negotiators are scheduled to meet in Bern, Switzerland, on Dec. 1 for 10 days of talks aiming at an agreement that would limit the size of the two nation's fleets in the region and would also forbid construction of new bases.

What is now envisioned, officials said, is an accord that would stabilize the existing situation but would not lay down precise limits on numbers of ships or deployment patterns.

Because of major differences in American and Soviet naval operations in the area, officials indicated that an accord placing strict ceilings on fleet size is not attainable now. Instead, it is thought that a more vaguely worded accord will serve to prevent a naval arms race in the Indian Ocean.

Officials acknowledge that this question could become much more important as a result of the decision last week by President Mohammed Siad Barre of Somalia to renounce a friendship treaty with Moscow and oust the Soviet fleet from Berbera.

Some officials fear now that the Soviet fleet has lost its access to Berbera, Moscow may be unwilling to a freeze until the Soviet navy has found a replacement.

Vance sets Latin tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance takes off Sunday on a three-nation trip to South America to discuss three dominant foreign policy themes of the Carter administration — human rights, nuclear non-proliferation and oil prices.

The four-day trip, which will take Vance to Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela, is in keeping with the administration's emphasis on "personal diplomacy" with hemispheric nations. A steady stream of top officials have toured the region since Carter took office 10 months ago.

Vance will be carrying to Argentina a list of 7,600 names of people who allegedly are either in jail or missing. The list was compiled by several groups which accuse Argentina's military government of human rights violations.

As of Saturday, no final decision had been made on whether Vance would present the list to Argentine President Jorge Rafael Videla. The indecision on this issue reflects a continuing struggle within the administration on how to deal with nations where human rights problems exist and where the United States has other competing interests.

Some officials believe the time has come for the administration to confront Argentina vigorously on the human rights issue. Others, citing Argentina's status as Latin America's most advanced nuclear power, feel a more cautious approach on human rights will help promote U.S. interests in the area of nuclear non-proliferation.

U.S. RELATIONS WITH Brazil, Vance's second stop, have deteriorated sharply this year. In contrast to former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who lavished praise on the Brazilians, the Carter administration has, according to one specialist, left some Brazilians wondering "whether we really take them seriously."

The Brazilians were outraged last January when they learned from newspaper reports that Vice President Walter F. Mondale had gone to West Germany to seek revision of an agreement to sell Brazil nuclear power facilities that would give it a nuclear weapons capability.

Bell reported against prosecuting FBI men

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell is expected to recommend shortly that the government not prosecute FBI agents reported to have indulged in corrupt practices in the past, Justice Department officials said Saturday.

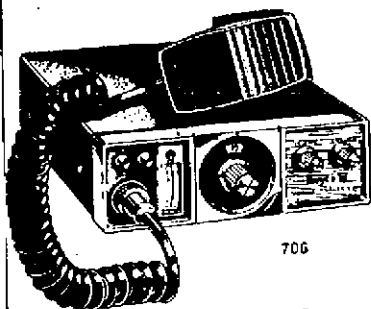

The officials said Bell reviewed earlier last week a report on corruption in the FBI.

An issue were allegations concerning theft of government property by some bureau officials and former officials, diversion of funds for unauthorized purposes, such as the entertainment of government officials, and possible kickbacks from private companies to FBI purchasing agents.

The recommendations accepted by the attorney general, according to the officials, include dropping all consideration of prosecuting bureau members on criminal charges, imposing administrative penalties on some agents who are still active and were found to have done something corrupt in the past, and issuance of a public report on the whole matter.

TV porn via cassette

Mobsters will cash in on new technology

"Naked Nymphs on the Ranch," "Hot Buns," "Paris No. 7" and "I Love Shoes."

Skinflicks. With the aid of the new home videotape recorder and an assist from organized crime, they are headed for your television set.

By Robert Gore
Staff Writer

Porno movies began with flickering, hand-cranked peep shows hidden in small shops behind dusty curtains.

They shifted to grainy films shown in rowdy, smoke-filled rooms.

Then came adult theaters. Quality got better. Color arrived; the distinctive grain vanished. Scenes become more explicit.

Straining for encores, porno producers recruited children for "chicken flicks," staged supposedly real killings of unsuspecting actresses and screened other perverted exhibitions.

Now there are cassettes for videotape recorders, a move that will bring skinflicks to your living room, according to people on both sides of the porno battle.

As usual, organized crime will be reaping the enormous profits, law enforcement authorities and pornographers agree.

(The FBI estimates Southern California porno operators gross a minimum of $70 million annually.)

Meanwhile, the home videotape recorder, hailed as an entertainment revolution, is being marketed in a big way for the first time this holiday season.

Neither of the two types of recorders is cheap—prices range from $900 to $1,100. Industry officials, quoted in an Oct. 31 Newsweek story, expect the price to drop to $500 by 1979. Tapes, in two or four-hour lengths, are about $20.

Why are videotape cassettes expected to provide a good market for porn?

No projector, no screen, no large reels. Just a device resembling a tape recorder, a small cassette and a television set.

Why is organized crime attracted to the home-viewed skinflick?

Money. The classic Deep Throat cost $25,000 to produce and made $10 million, according to its press notices. A hard-core magazine may cost $1 a copy to produce and distribute. Asking price: from $6 to $12.

A pornographer agreed to provide the Independent Press-Telegram with information on organized crime and pornography. Because of the personal danger, the man insisted on anonymity.

He is well-known to the Los Angeles Police Department, and his identity and occupation were verified by detectives.

"I couldn't sell without their (Mafia) cooperation," he said. "But this business is not monopolized more than any other business."

"There is absolutely no question about it: Cassettes are going to bring a war," he continued. "It's more than pornography—the cassettes are going to be used for education, regular movies."

Asked about Mafia involvement, he replied, "How many other outfits have the financing? You're talking about big money to get set up."

He gave organized crime some credit for predicting future trends. "Stockpiling (of pornographic cassette tapes) began two years ago. I could show you warehouses full of tapes," he said.

"If I had the financial strength, I would still not get involved. I would say out of it—the boys from New York will control it."

He said several Eastern Mafia families, including those of Carlo Gambino and Carmine Galante, are active in pornography.

"Videotape cassettes are going to replace books," he said. "Think about it this way:

"A guy is sitting in his living room. He sends his wife out for some beer, and he slips the cassette into the recorder. He watches whatever he wants on his television set. When he hears the car in the driveway, he shuts off the machine and pockets the cassette."

Pornographic videotape cassettes currently are priced at about $200, he said. The price will eventually go down to about $10, he speculated.

David Schacter, a new Long Beach deputy city attorney who just finished five years working as the legal adviser to LAPD's vice and intelligence operations, said police information supported the pornographer's remarks.

"There will be killings over territory," Schacter said. "With the tremendous ease in copying, bootlegging (of legitimate productions and pornographic movies) is going to be a horrendous problem."

"A number of known organized crime figures have recently been spotted, over the last five years, on the West Coast. One of their activities has been lining up markets for their cassettes, which are all ready and waiting."

Soft core movies eventually will be retailed openly at higher line stores, Schacter said. The hard core tapes should surface in adult bookstores, he said.

"You'll be able to get a little of everything you can imagine for your television—right down to the grossest pornography," said Sgt. Joe Ganley from LAPD's administrative vice intelligence section.

"Organized crime is definitely involved in distribution," Ganley noted. These rings also do some production, but most of that is left to the independents.

Any independent who attempts to market his own videotape or film is faced with violence, extortion and financial blackmail. Suddenly an area will be saturated with bootlegged copies of his film being sold below his price, Ganley said.

The independent gets the message and signs up with a Mafia-backed distributor. The distribution operations are not small-time outfits, according to Ganley. They run from coast to coast, he said.

"We could go out weekly and seize evidence," Ganley said, "but we want a meaningful defendant, not a warehouse worker, to stand trial."

Schacter explained why it is so hard to nail the true owners of a pornography operation. "First someone sets up 'Dirt Corp.," he said, "and they pay three people to be the corporate directors—and to be arrested."

Authorities trace ownership of a bookstore or other facility purveying pornography back through a dizzying chain of leases and dummy corporations to get to the final company, "Dirt Corp.," Schacter said.

All the officers in this last corporation are paid employees of the real owner, who is usually listed as a consultant and is drawing a large salary, Schacter said.

Since he is not listed as part of the firm, the "consultant" is not liable, and his flunkies go to jail, Schacter said. The front people will receive a bonus for time served, he added.

In another case last year, Cella was convicted in federal district court in Los Angeles on 22 counts of income tax fraud and evasion and Medicare fraud, and is appealing a five-year sentence.

Stephen Robert Evans, 34, administrator of one of the hospitals involved in the alleged falsifications of claims, who faces similar counts with Dr. Cella, won continuance of his case until Feb. 24.

Evans also had been convicted in federal court in Los Angeles and is under a one-year prison term; he has appealed this sentence.

Diego County Superior Court Dec. 6 to receive a trial date.

Cella, 51, had negotiated with the district attorney's office for weeks to reduce the number of counts against him in connection with his alleged skimming of at least $2 million from two hospitals he controlled to use for personal and political ventures.

On Friday, Cella offered no defense to four counts of conspiracy, six of theft and one of forgery. The court's refusal to consider his plea means that he must stand trial in San Diego on all 127 counts.

100 feared dead as plane skids off island runway

FUNCHAL, Madeira (AP) — A Portuguese jetliner carrying 164 persons skidded off the runway and exploded while landing during a storm Saturday at this Atlantic island, officials reported.

They said 86 persons were killed, but Virgilio Pereira, Funchal City Council president, said the death toll could exceed 100.

Police reported 80 bodies were found in and near the wreckage on the runway and the beach and six other persons were dead on arrival at a hospital.

Medical authorities said some 50 persons were hospitalized and the search continued for survivors.

Witnesses at Santa Cruz Airport said the Boeing 727 skidded off the end of the runway and a series of explosions blew it apart. They said the tail section remained on land while the forward portion of the fuselage hurtled forward and stopped partially in the pounding surf.

Wind-swept seas around this Portuguese island hampered search and rescue efforts by police, firemen and two navy patrol boats.

Some bodies were laid out on the rocky beach under the glare of emergency lights and later were moved to a chapel in the village of Santa Cruz.

Portuguese Premier Mario

Soares cabled a message to the island expressing his sorrow.

A spokesman at the district hospital in Funchal said "many severely wounded" persons were admitted.

Flight controllers said rain and 12-mph winds had cut visibility to 2½ miles when the jet of Portugal's national airline TAP tried to land at 10 p.m. (2 p.m. PST). They said the airport had been closed earlier in the day because of the storm but later reopened.

TAP officials in Lisbon said the plane carried 156 passengers and eight crew members.

They reported all 110 passengers who boarded the flight in Lisbon were believed to be Portuguese, but they did not know the nationalities of the others. They said the flight, No. 425, originated in Brussels, Belgium.

Funchal is the administrative capital of this island 600 miles southwest of Lisbon and 400 miles off the coast of Morocco.

Madeira lies 300 miles north of the Spanish Canary Islands, where the worst disaster in aviation history occurred March 27 on Tenerife. In that tragedy, two Boeing 747s of the Dutch KLM line and Pan American World Airways collided at Los Rodeos Airport, killing or fatally injuring 581 persons. Burning debris littered the runway after Saturday's crash, and the airport was closed.

Curious motorists clogged the 15 miles of highway from Funchal to the airport. The government appealed to them to clear it for emergency vehicles.

A spokesman for TAP — Transportes Aereos Portugueses — said it was the first fatal crash in the airline's history.

'Safe' radiation levels seen unsafe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government researchers are trying to determine if exposure to levels of radiation well below what are now considered safe can cause leukemia.

The study stems from the discovery of an unexpected high incidence of leukemia among a portion of soldiers who may have witnessed a nuclear bomb test 20 years ago.

If a link is found between low-level radiation and leukemia, a form of cancer, it could have a profound impact on government standards regulating everything from nuclear power plants to X-ray treatments.

Court spurns Cella no-contest plea

Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr., once an influential contributor to Orange County political campaigns, failed in a bid to persuade a judge to accept a plea of no contest to a number of conspiracy, fraud and embezzlement counts filed against him.

Cella offered Friday to plead no contest to 11 of 127 charges, but Superior Court Judge Robert E. Rickles turned him down.

Rickles reaffirmed a change of venue ordered by now-ailing Judge H. Warren Knight, who usually presides in Santa Ana criminal court. Cella was ordered to appear in San

Cross-country cab rider — is she eccentric or plain crazy?

By Barbara Riegelhaupt
Associated Press

By some accounts, Jean Caren is an eccentric 55-year-old California woman who wants to bring Christmas presents to a daughter living on Long Island but is afraid to fly.

So she's taking a cab. But another daughter insists Mrs. Caren is a diagnosed schizophrenic who should not be allowed to ride a taxi 3,000 miles and is being taken by the cab company for the $4,000 round-trip fare.

You talk to her for 30 seconds and you're aware something is wrong," Diane Bernal said Saturday from the home she shares with her mother in Santa Maria. "She's a sick person and they're going to charge her more or less her life savings."

Mrs. Bernal said her mother, who left Santa Maria Thursday without her knowledge, was under a doctor's care in New York before the family moved to California in May and has spent time in a mental institution.

Mrs. Bernal obtained a conservatorship order in Santa Barbara Superior Court shortly after her mother left with her pet poodle Dutchess.

Police in Blythe stopped the taxi cab, informed

Mrs. Caren of the court order, but allowed her to continue on.

"The officer who talked to her said she seemed a little eccentric, but in control of her mental faculties," said police spokesman Thomas Thompson. "So he figured if she wanted to go across country in a taxi, that was up to her."

Sally Chavez, whose husband and brother-in-law own the Black & White Cab Co., said Saturday that a driver tried to talk Mrs. Caren out of making the expensive trip.

But Mrs. Caren was determined. She didn't want to fly and had been told by train and bus companies that she could not carry her dog with her, said her daughter.

"As long as she had the money, we had to service her," said Mrs. Chavez, who said Mrs. Caren was a regular customer and did not seem mentally ill.

The cab driver hasn't contacted the company since Thursday night. But because of the legal complications, he'll be told to turn around when he calls again. If Mrs. Caren won't return, too, he'll be told to leave her at a police station, the dispatcher on duty Saturday morning said.

In Bacteria Bowl People—4, Germs—0

By Alton Blakeslee
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — There are new successes in the continuing human struggle against bacteria and viruses.

Four examples, from a recent scientific conference:

— A new antibiotic is overcoming gonorrhea infections that have become resistant to the old standby, penicillin.

— An antibiotic is proving effective in preventing most episodes of "travelers' diarrhea," sometimes called "Montezuma's Revenge" by visitors to Mexico.

— Children with leukemia are living longer because of drugs which, along with beneficial effects, also lower resistance to infections. Ordinarily mild chickenpox becomes deadly in about 7 percent of such infected children. But a "memory protein" from human white blood cells promises to protect them.

— A limited human study indicates a new antiviral drug may help control nasty effects from flu, such as fever, headache and runny nose.

These were among some 500 reports or papers presented to the 17th Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy in New York, attended by nearly 3,000 persons. It brought together microbiologists, chemists, biochemists, pharmacologists, clinicians and pathologists, including foreign specialists.

To amplify: — "One shot" penicillin once knocked out gonorrhea. But some strains became able to secrete an enzyme that destroys that antibiotic, hence they resist it.

Dr. William Fowler of Birmingham, England, told of cure rates of 98 percent in 320 men and 97 percent in 182 women with a new antibiotic, Cefuroxime, all given a single intramuscular injection. He calls the drug very effective against gonorrhea, one of the world's most common infections.

Three West London Hospital researchers, J.D. Price, F.L. Fluker and Miranda M.C. Rees, reported similar good results in treating 79 women with Cefuroxime. About half the women had symptoms of gonorrhea; the rest — like so many women — had the infection but no apparent signs.

— Doxycycline, derived from tetracycline, showed high effectiveness in protecting Peace Corps volunteers from travelers' diarrhea when they went to Kenya last November, said Dr. David A. Sack of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

The antibiotic seems to prevent formation of the intestines of colonies of the main type of bacteria, from the Escherichia coli family, that causes the diarrhea he said.

Only one of 18 volunteers given the drug daily in the first three weeks of their visit came down with diarrhea, compared with 13 of 21 given a look-alike sugar pill, or placebo.

— To protect leukemic children from chickenpox, Dr. Russell W. Steele of the University of Arkansas, Little Rock, used human transfer factor — the "memory protein," as he calls it — that prevents people from getting diseases like chickenpox or measles more than once. Purified from human white blood cells, it has been used to treat numerous infectious diseases.

In his tests, with transfer factor from adults who recently had chickenpox, Steele found that "memory for this virus was transferred to children, thereby theoretically offering them protection" against chickenpox. Later, three children were accidentally exposed to chickenpox from brothers or sisters or playmates, but none developed the disease. A larger study of the expected protective effect is underway.

— The trial of the antiviral drug inosiplex, whose trade name is Iso-primosine, was conducted with 41 healthy volunteers given either inosiplex or placebo tablets, with the experimenters not knowing who received which until the trial was over.

One strain of Type A flu virus was introduced through the nose to infect the volunteers. Results indicate the inosiplex given as both treatment and preventive "is effective against symptoms of influenza," said a research team from West Virginia University, Morgantown.

Next they suggest a field trial or studies of humans if and when they are exposed to, or come down with, flu naturally. That might tell how useful the drug could be after you catch flu.

Pinching or patting is a crime

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Pinching or touching the buttocks of a person without that person's consent is a crime in New York and punishable by a jail term, a Manhattan Criminal court judge has ruled.

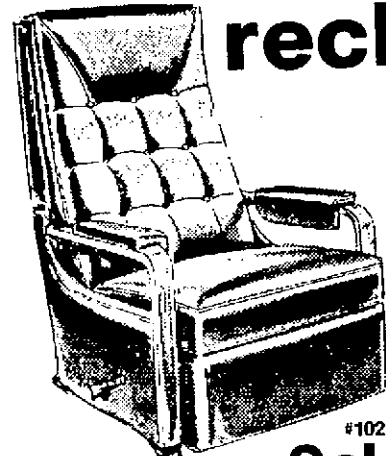

Citing the dictionary and a few cases presenting similar, but not identical issues, Judge Benjamin Altman said that the "buttock is an 'intimate part' of a person" as stated within the section of the state's penal law that prohibits sexual abuse.

In the case before the judge, a man had been charged with touching the buttocks of a woman, without her consent, while they were riding the subway during a rush hour two months ago.

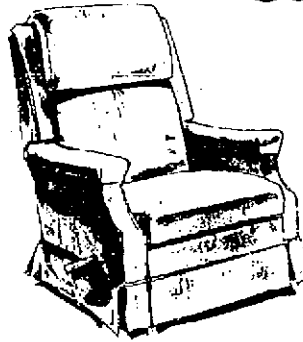

The defendant moved to have the charges dropped, claiming that what he was accused of did not constitute a crime. But the judge refused to have the charges dropped, saying:

"If the alleged occurrence had in fact taken place in an area where the social mores condone the unconsented touching or pinching of the buttocks — rumor has it that Italy may be such an area — perhaps the defendant's position could be sustained. However, here the touching of a woman's buttocks without her consent is not treated so cavalierly as in some environments."

It's rather like giving up your belief in Santa Claus when you accept the idea that the traditional image of Thanksgiving is something of a mirage.

But, says Judith Ingram at the historical recreation of Plymouth Plantation in Massachusetts, Thanksgiving as we know it evolved only around the turn of this century.

"For years tourists have been coming here in November to see the pilgrims and Indians sitting down to a table with lace tablecloth and soup tureen," she says with some sympathy for the unsuspecting. "And that's just not so."

What has come to be called "the first Thanksgiving" was really just an extension of ancient harvest celebrations.

"Early October was the time of that harvest festival," says Ms. Ingram, who describes it as a kick-up-your-heels, Saturday night sort of thing with sports and entertainment that probably happened spontaneously.

That was in 1621. The first winter, 1620, had been hard. Nearly half the settlers had perished.

But crops were planted, houses were built, the Indians were won over and the remaining settlers had a harvest of plenty.

They did not, however, have a Thanksgiving, historians say. Thanksgiving days of that period were solemn religious observances combining prayer and fasting and could be held at any time.

These two separate "holidays"—along with a third, the commemoration of the landing of the pilgrims, called Forefathers Day and celebrated on Dec. 21 by the Old Colony Club in Plymouth and later in Boston and New York until 1850—began to merge late in the 19th century.

As the importance of Thanksgiving grew, the popularity of Forefathers Day faded, and representations of the pilgrims began to reflect the shift of interest to the 1621 harvest festival, eventually transforming it into the legendary "first Thanksgiving."

The first Thanksgiving might be just as properly

Thanksgiving turkey would have surprised the pilgrims

identified as:

—That day proclaimed by the Continental Congress in 1777 when it recommended "that servile labor and such recreation as, though at other times innocent, may be unbecoming the purpose of this appointment, be omitted on so solemn an occasion."

—Or our first Thanksgiving as a nation—proclaimed by President Washington on Nov. 26, 1789, in gratitude for the establishment of the Constitution of the United States.

Presidents John Adams and Monroe proclaimed their own Thanksgivings until the custom fell out of use after 1815.

It was in 1827 that Sara Josepha Hale, writer and editor of Godey's Lady's Book in Philadelphia, began her campaign to make Thanksgiving a national holiday.

President Lincoln called for a national day of Thanksgiving in April 1862 and in 1863 on the more familiar last Thursday in November. From that time on, a Thursday in autumn was annually declared a national Thanksgiving day by each successive president, with the last Thursday in November becoming the traditional date. In 1939 President Franklin D. Roosevelt set it one week earlier in order to help business. After that, in 1941, Congress chose the fourth Thursday as Thanksgiving by federal statute.

to be a legal holiday.

Throughout its evolution as a holiday, the foods of Thanksgiving were undergoing some change as well.

What would the pilgrims really have eaten at their first harvest celebration?

"The meats they would have used would be sheep, probably roasted on an open spit, and possibly pig," Judith Ingram says. Such preparation is demonstrated by guides at Plymouth Plantation, along with other cooking, gardening, sewing, cutting of planks and thatching of roofs.

"These would be accompanied by squash, pickled beets (a lot of vegetables would be pickled for preservation over the winter), cabbages, pumpkin, apples and other fruits that would have been dried and reconstituted," she continues.

"Pumpkin pie is something that became associated with Thanksgiving in the 19th century. And it is only in the 20th century that turkey has become symbolic of the holiday, although you would see 'turkey shoots' occasionally in the 19th century.

"Yes, it's possible that when the pilgrims went out 'fowling' they might have gotten some wild turkey, but it would have been poached or boiled because turkey then would be scrawny, tough and stringy. It would not have been a main dish."

And at the time we celebrate Thanksgiving—November—the pilgrims would be settling in for the winter. They would slaughter all but the essential animals, the breeders and milkers, salting the meat. Similarly, fish caught over the summer would be salted and dried for use in the winter.

"And they used lots of bread and cereal products like porridge and mush, sweetened with fruit or honey when they had it, and made meat pies," Ms. Ingram says.

Among the dishes that the researchers at Plymouth Plantation recognize as authentic to the period and quite possibly as having been on the pilgrims' menu is a casserole of sweet potatoes and baked apples.

Another dish, unique to Plymouth, is Plymouth succotash. It is made with soaked white beans, hulled corn or hominy, corned beef, chicken, white turnips and potatoes and flavored with salt pork. This early "boiled dinner" requires a day of cooking.

If sweetener causes cancer, so do bananas

By Jon Van
Chicago Tribune Service

If the sweetener xylitol really causes cancer in humans, it would indicate that bananas, strawberries, and prunes are dangerous as well.

The human body itself produces some xylitol, so banning it would pose an interesting problem, a Chicago scientist said.

Last week's announcement of the xylitol mice tests and the subsequent reaction is viewed by several scientists as the latest in a series of exaggerations that is leaving the public with the muddled impression that almost everything causes cancer.

"THERE'S NOTHING wrong with xylitol at all, but this kind of news destroys our research," said Dr. Thomas Graber, chairman of orthodontics at the University of Chicago, heading studies of xylitol's effects on tooth decay.

Graber said he is frustrated because, on the face of it, the xylitol study in mice does not seem to have applicability to humans. The study, sponsored by Hoffman-LaRoche, the firm in New Jersey that makes xylitol, fed mice the equivalent of 200,000 sticks of gum a year.

This massive dosage, Graber said, caused severe diarrhea in the mice followed by dehydration and then intestinal stones which irritated bladder walls, producing tumors. When dosage was reduced to the equivalent of 36,000 sticks of gum annually, the mice did not get tumors. Also, tests in dogs and rats failed to produce tumors.

"Xylitol is natural," said Dr. Krik Hoerman of Loyola University's dental school where other xylitol studies have been made. "It's in bananas, strawberries, prunes and even metabolized in the human body. If indeed it caused cancer, we'd have found the universal cause of cancer."

THOUGH IT HAS BEEN stressed that the mice studies were tentative and that the Food and Drug Administration still regards xylitol as safe, public reaction was significant. The news helped depress prices in the stock of the Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co., a major user of the sweetener in chewing gum.

It also threatened Graber's research work. "We have 140 children in our test due to start chewing this (xylitol-sweetened) gum next month," Graber said, "and this kind of news raises Ned with those tests."

Xylitol is widely used in Finland to sweeten chewing gum and candy. Tests there indicate that it counteracts acid in the mouth, reducing tooth decay in some children by as much as 90 percent.

Graber does not expect such dramatic results here because fluoridated water already makes Americans less cavity-prone than Finnish children, but pilot studies have shown some benefits from chewing xylitol gum.

AT THE VERY LEAST, it has been shown that xylitol does not cause as many cavities as common sugar does.

"We think we're on the threshold of what causes dental caries and how to prevent it," Graber said.

There are many parallels between the xylitol study on mice in England and earlier animal studies linking such sweeteners as saccharin and cyclamates to cancer. The major difference is that the other sweeteners are artificial substances and xylitol occurs naturally.

As a natural sweetener that does not promote cavities, xylitol has been a likely candidate for a sugar substitute. Agriculture researchers in Peoria, Ill., have been working on a process to extract xylitol from corn husks, peanut hulls, and wheat straw, converting waste products into a cash producer for farmers.

"What effect does a cancer scare like this have on the incentive for researchers working on things to make life more enjoyable and safer?" asks Dr. Elizabeth Whelan, executive director of the American Council on Science and Health, an independent group of scientists based in New York.

"I HAVEN'T SEEN the xylitol studies, but this kind of thing could be expected after the scares with saccharin and cyclamates," she said. "All the sweeteners seem to be vulnerable these days."

Cancer scares discourage scientists and mislead the public into a resignation that everything they touch causes cancer, Dr. Whelan said. In reality, most things do not cause cancer.

Tobacco use and the typical American high-fat diet probably cause about two-thirds of all the environmentally linked cancers, excluding skin cancer, she said.

The great danger of overreaction to tentative results in animal testing, Dr. Whelan said, is that people will become apathetic about adopting lifestyles to avoid cancer.

Dr. Graber said that "all these scare stories add up to the same thing as the story of the little boy who cried 'wolf' too often. When the real wolf really comes, nobody will listen to the warnings."

Laetrile scientist acknowledges tests lack corroboration

NEW YORK (AP) — A Loyola University biologist who says he has cured breast cancer in mice using Laetrile, vitamins and enzymes acknowledged Saturday that the results of his treatment "are worthless until some other laboratory reproduces them."

Harold Manner addressed a news conference here at a meeting of the National Health Federation, which describes itself as a consumer group concerned with freedom of choice in matters of health.

Manner, chairman of the biology department at the Chicago school, said at another meeting of the federation in Chicago last September that his treatment had caused complete regression of breast tumors in 90 percent of 84 mice and partial regression in the remaining 10 percent.

At the time, Manner said he had not done any microscopic cell studies to confirm the regression which he had seen and felt. But Saturday the biologist said cell studies have since confirmed the absence of tumors in 100 percent of the treated mice.

Taking battered children away from parents 'can be harmful'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social workers who separate battered children from their abusive parents may be doing the family more harm than good, according to several experts.

Specialists attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Psychiatric Services for Children, which ends here today, said separation can be traumatic for children, who probably would choose to stay with their parents despite abuse.

Dr. Andre P. Derdeyn of the University of Virginia Medical School said removing children from their homes may leave them feeling rejected by their parents. Separation also fails to solve the underlying problems that led to the abuse.

"Many workers dealing with abuse breathe a sigh of relief when the child is taken away, but this is no time to relax," Derdeyn said at a news briefing.

"This is a critical time for the child and we have to be careful the child isn't just forgotten and allowed to drift into the foster home situation," he said.

Odd Hughes sale bared

By Wallace Turner
New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — As the tropic dawn was breaking over Managua, Nicaragua, on Sept. 24, 1972, a gaunt, bearded, disheveled man, one of the world's wealthiest and most eccentric, took a heroic dose of 70 milligrams of Valium and told his staff, "Let me sleep as long as I want to."

Howard R. Hughes slept 4 hours 20 minutes. He spent 50 minutes in the bathroom. He slept another 5 hours 40 minutes. Then he alternated between sitting quietly in a chair in deep thought (1 hour 20 minutes) and long periods in the bathroom (2 hours 45 minutes).

At 12:50 a.m. Monday, Sept. 25, he began to watch a film, "Man in the Middle," but broke off after two reels to summon his personal barber.

MEL STUART came into the room with his shears at 3:45 a.m. and left at 5:30. It had been six months since the previous clipping, and would be four months before the next one. The log that aides kept of Hughes' actions, unearthed in legal actions over his estate, said, "Light trim on beard only."

The log for that day is of particular interest because within the hour, Hughes would complete one of the most puzzling transactions of his last decade: the sale of the company on which his fortune was based for what seemed to be a fraction of its value.

At 5:40 a.m. a group of nervous men assembled in two rooms of the Hughes suite in the Intercontinental Hotel. Hughes and two aides met in the bedroom with two representatives of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Julius H. Sedlmayr and J. Courtney Ivey, who watched as Hughes signed documents authorizing the division of his holding company, then called Hughes Tool, into two concerns. Merrill Lynch was to handle the sale of stock in one of them, the Oil Tool Division, whose new name would be the Hughes Tool Co.

THOSE TWO MEN joined a select group of a half-dozen or so, outside the Hughes personal entourage, who saw Hughes in his last decade of life.

Outside in the sitting room, Raymond M. Holliday and Milton H. West waited. Holliday, who had been executive vice president of Hughes Tool since 1959, could not see Hughes but heard the familiar voice for the last time. He was leaving to take charge of the Hughes Tool Co., clearing the way for R. W. Gay to succeed him as head of the Hughes holding company which would take the name Summa Corp. West would remain as tax counsel.

The reason for the sale of the Oil Tool Division is a mystery. It was the only property Hughes owned that made money. It was the foundation of his fortune.

Of the holdings retained by Summa, the Nevada gambling and hotel investments were losing money; the Aircraft Division's helicopter manufacturing company was losing well over $10 million; Hughes Productions, remnant of the movie-making days, drained off $2 million or so a year.

BUT THE PROSPECTUS for sale of the stock in the new Hughes Tool Co. said that the Oil Tool Division had earned $35.5 million in 43 months.

Gay, now president of Summa, has said that the sale was to raise the money for a $145.5 million payment to Trans World Airlines in case the Hughes appeal of an antitrust judgement failed in the U.S. Supreme Court.

New ideas on assassinations still coming up

By Jim Adams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The years have never softened the lingering suspicion among many Americans that somehow there was a conspiracy involved in the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr.

So when the House of Representatives launched its own investigation into the political murders of the 1960s, it ordered its Committee on Assassinations to conduct "a full and complete" study.

Whether the panel has been successful in finding new evidence about the murders is undetermined so far, but the investigation has reached into apparently new and startling areas.

For instance, in its investigation of President Kennedy's murder, the House Committee on Assassinations says it plans to subpoena dozens of mobsters, mercenaries and anti-Castro Cubans.

THE COMMITTEE already has questioned the first of them, soldier of fortune Loran Hall, who several times claimed he was offered $50,000 to kill Kennedy. Hall also was involved in confusing and contradictory reports about Lee Harvey Oswald's supposed association with anti-Castro Cubans.

The Warren Commission, which conducted the initial and until now only major government inquiry into the murder, decided it was Oswald, acting alone, who killed Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

The committee also is investigating whether the FBI's admitted activities against King are linked in any manner to the assassination of the civil rights leader, a congressional source disclosed last week.

King was shot to death by a sniper in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968, and James Earl Ray was convicted of the slaying.

The congressional source said the possibility that FBI harassment of King might have had something to do with his death led the House committee to move immediately to subpoena the files of William C. Sullivan, an FBI agent killed in a hunting accident in New Hampshire two weeks ago.

SULLIVAN HAD BEEN the No. 3 man in the FBI and he ran Comintpro, the agency program aimed at discrediting King and others considered by the FBI to be political radicals.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee has been holding secret hearings on the Warren Commission's investigation, looking particularly into the question of whether the FBI, CIA and other agencies cooperated fully with the commission at the time of its investigation.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., chairman of the subcommittee, says the hearings have not yet produced the answer to that question.

He said witnesses at the hearings included present and former FBI and CIA employees and former Warren Commission staff members.

These developments are among the few to become public since last June when the assassinations committee imposed a near total news blackout on its $2.5 million inquiry.

The committee imposed the blackout at least partly to try to restore credibility following efforts to build interest in its work by publicizing the investigation's most sensational possibilities.

WHEN IT WAS FORMED, the committee was told to "conduct a full and complete" investigation of both the Kennedy and King murders and as investigators understood that, it means they are to try to resolve the lingering question of whether the assassinations were conspiracies and whether federal investigators held back or distorted information on either of them.

As for their investigation so far, committee members and staff employees refuse to give any indication whether present evidence suggests the murder of either man was the result of a conspiracy.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the assassinations panel, had to reveal his plan to parade underworld figures through his committee room in order to get House approval to grant some witnesses immunity so they would talk.

Stokes told the House he needed to be able to assure immunity from prosecution particularly for mobsters and soldiers of fortune. Those were the people, he said, whose testimony was essential for investigating "allegations of conspiracy."

HE SAID the committee might need to grant immunity to 150 witnesses in the Kennedy assassination alone but sources say the committee probably will not have time to call that many.

The major conspiracy theories the committee was investigating before the news blackout was imposed are these:

- Anti-Castro Cubans conspired to assassinate President Kennedy because he refused to commit U.S. military airplanes for the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion, and because the Cubans felt he stood in the way of any new effort to wrest Cuba from Fidel Castro.
- Organized crime conspired to assassinate Kennedy because he and his brother, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, were campaigning against criminal organizations and had jailed then-Teamsters President James R. Hoffa.
- The Warren Commission is deciding Oswald acted alone, discounted some of the same information on which those theories are based.

Loran Hall led the Warren Commission away from testimony that placed Oswald with two anti-Castro Cubans two months before the Kennedy assassination. Hall said he was there with the Cubans and that the one who other witnesses described as Oswald only looked like Oswald.

But later, Hall changed his mind and said he was not there at all, leaving open the possibility that Oswald was in fact seen meeting with the anti-Castro Cubans before the murder.

Hall also has said in at least four interviews in which details varied that Texas businessmen offered him $50,000 to kill Kennedy.

Proxmire 'Fleece' awards bring bleats of protest

By Lawrence Knutson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Taxpayer-financed studies on why men and women fall in love, are rude on tennis courts, or want to escape from jail, are the steady fare of a new Washington institution — Sen. William Proxmire's "Golden Fleece of the Month."

The Golden Fleece award is Proxmire's way of pointing out what he sees as abuses in federal spending. Those who agree with his efforts praise him for that.

BUT HE also has been subjected to suggestions that he give himself a Golden Fleece for the time and money he spends ferreting out colorful and amusing but relatively trivial examples of government mispending.

The Wisconsin Democrat has been accused of cheap shots and of displaying an anti-intellectual, anti-science bias.

And he was formally censured by the faculty of the University of Wisconsin after Proxmire awarded the Fleece to the National Science Foundation for funding a study of romantic love. The faculty voted when Proxmire discovered the university had a similar research project and said it was an example of silly science.

One researcher who was the target of a Proxmire

SEN. WILLIAM PROXMIRE
Awards Get Mixed Reviews

Fleece sued the senator for libel, but lost.

Over the past 33 months, 26 federal agencies, departments, military branches, commissions and boards have felt the sting of Proxmire's well-honed sarcasm in receiving the citation for "the biggest or most ironic or most ridiculous waste of the taxpayers' money."

FOR INSTANCE, the National Endowment of the Arts got the Fleece for granting an artist public money to throw rolls of crepe paper from a flying airplane to create "cracks in the sky."

He cited the Air Force for keeping some of its pilots so busy flying generals and civilian VIPs on non-essential or low-priority trips that they didn't have time for required combat readiness training.

The Department of Agriculture was named for publishing a $40,000 study on how long it takes to cook breakfast in time measurement units of .36 of a second.

And the Federal Aviation Administration got its Fleece for spending $57,900 to study the body measurements of one airline's stewardess trainees while at the same time noting the results were useless for safety purposes because each airline has its own employment standards.

The fleeces have ranged widely across the government, not missing either the White House or Congress itself.

PROXMIRE cited the White House under former President Gerald R. Ford for allegedly expanding its "empire" of personnel and perquisites while preaching austerity to the rest of the government. Congress was named for "living high off the hog" with pay increases and amenities "while much of the rest of the country is suffering economic disaster."

Although Proxmire's citations for waste have been wide-ranging, the ones that have drawn the most publicity and criticism have been those focusing on government contracts with the academic community for social science research.

Crises claim that Proxmire attacks on research into why monkeys or humans clench their jaws, or whether drunk fish are more aggressive than sober fish, take advantage of a funny title and ignore the underlying real or potential value.

MOREOVER, they say the Proxmire attacks have cast a chill on a research community already upset about decreasing federal support.

The National Science Foundation, the object of four fleeces to date, is said to have renamed many of its ongoing research projects in the hope of heading off further Proxmire attacks.

But the Proxmire staff says a Fleece never is awarded on the basis of a funny name alone, but because of an informed judgment that the research is "ridiculous, useless, mindless or silly."

"It is an amazing phenomenon that while the intellectual and academic communities have cheered my attacks on waste in the military or public works programs they cry academic freedom, yahoosism or anti-intellectualism when their own bungles come under fire," Proxmire says.

An average of 40 hours is spent researching and preparing each Fleece, but some awards require "much more" time from Proxmire's office staff, according to Howard Shuman, the senator's administrative assistant.

SEVERAL suggestions for future fleeces reach the Proxmire office each week for evaluation, but many don't check out or are the products of office feuds, or self-promotion efforts.

Three or four proposals are presented to Proxmire each month. Once a proposal is selected, a press release is written, a process Shuman said can consume several drafts because of efforts to be accurate.

"People try to argue that we are wrong about the facts," Shuman said. "But our research is thorough and our error rate is low."

Proxmire comes by many candidates for the monthly award through tips as well as in his capacity as chairman of an appropriations subcommittee. He contends that during the time he has had jurisdiction over the National Science Foundation's budget, funds for basic research have increased.

And he notes that along with criticism, he has formally commended the foundation for success in guiding serious research.

BUT HE objects to expensive studies by one agency that duplicate studies already done by another. He says he would like to change the system, which he says sends a large percentage of government research funds to "establishment" universities on the East and West coasts.

He objects also to "mindless" funneling of federal funds to states and cities with no federal voice in how it is spent.

"I find that the Fleece of the Month is the most effective single way I have of drawing attention to these practices in the hopes that pressure from public opinion or the unpleasantness of exposure will bring a change in priorities," Proxmire says.

He insists that in many cases he has been successful.

Shuman rejects criticism from those who say some fleeces are trivial.

"People are able to comprehend specific, sometimes relatively small things in a way that they cannot focus on a $100 billion defense budget that they cannot see, touch, feel smell or hear," Shuman says.

SOME OTHER fleeces have gone to the National Endowment for the Humanities for subsidizing high-income professionals at education retreats, to the U.S. Navy for running the costs of refurbishing the vice-president's house to more than a half million dollars, to the treasury for failing to tax the imputed value of limousine service for government VIPs while doing so for other citizens, and to the Department of Labor for a $384,948 contract to hire 101 persons to count dogs, cats and horses in Ventura County, Calif.

Others have gone to the Army Corps of Engineers for billions of dollars of cost overruns, to NASA for awarding $140,000 to an unpublished author to write a 6,000 word article and a book-length history of the Viking Mars landing projects, and to the Department of Transportation for spending $225,000 on what the nation's transportation needs would be in 2025 if the United States experienced an ice age, had hippy culture, or had become a dictatorship.

U.S. firms act against terror

By Bill Hendrick
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — American business is beefing up efforts to protect its executives from domestic terrorist attacks, but should beware that there is "no such thing" as a foolproof security system, says the head of a political research firm.

"If a terrorist group targets an American company, there is not much the company can do to keep from being hit," said Benjamin Weiner, a former State Department diplomat and now president of Probe International Inc. of Stamford, Conn.

"There is no perfect security system, and if anybody goes around selling one, they are not being honest," Weiner said. "You hear talk about defensive driving courses. What these fail to point out is that these people have one home and one place of business, and although there may be a dozen ways to go from home to work, you're going to end up at the same house and the same business."

"THE MAIN THING to point out is this: It is dangerous to get a security system that is said to be foolproof. There is no such thing. The key is to reduce visibility."

Weiner, whose firm does political research for companies both in the United States and abroad, said that, according to the Central Intelligence Agency, attacks against American businessmen both in this country and abroad are expected to increase.

He said attendance at Probe seminars in this country on corporate terrorism has increased dramatically in recent years. "Ten years ago," he said, "most companies wouldn't pay any attention to political issues. Now we are constantly approached."

Most companies are reluctant to reveal terrorist activities against them, such as threats or kidnapping incidents or bombings, for fear of adverse publicity, which could trigger further acts, Weiner said. They also don't like to talk about security measures, some of which are "elaborate."

Sun Belt unity campaign on

By Bob Houser
Political Editor

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, Friday took his campaign for a Sun Belt congressional coalition into Arizona where he warned that the Frost Belt of Northeast and Midwest states "has plans for some of our tax dollars."

Hannaford said he intends to organize a coalition of House members from the South and West when Congress reconvenes in January, suggesting that these Sun Belt regions are now "being taken to the cleaners."

His push for the new bloc began earlier this year after he fought a community development grant formula which he said was "heavily biased against the West, the South, and the suburbs."

Hannaford's Frost Belt designation refers to an existing congressional caucus headed by Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., and called the Northeast-Midwest Coalition. That group, Hannaford said, "has demonstrated how regional solidarity can produce fruitful results."

Recent Washington reports have shown, in Hannaford's view, "that federal spending and economic development programs have been based on factors that change when it is in the regional interest of the Frost Belt to change them."

Per capita income in the Sun Belt was about 11 percent below the national average in 1974 and is growing at rates markedly below the national average, he said, "a surprising finding since these (Southwest) counties are part of the presumably booming Sun Belt. This certainly offers no evidence that the Northeast is in greater need of federal dollars than the Sun Belt."

Speaking before a statewide Democratic Party group in Tucson, Hannaford also scored "the fallacy of using population growth measures as an index of economic growth," pointing out that although 62 percent of low-growth counties are in the Frost Belt, 62 percent of all high-growth counties are there also.

Among issues likely to spark debate between the two coalitions next year, the congressman said, are the future of the highway trust fund, increased veterans' benefits in states with high-tuition colleges and adequate housing for senior citizens.

Hannaford is secretary-treasurer of the newly organized House Suburban Caucus.

Court bars L.A. taxi driving suspensions

Associated Press

A restraining order has been issued against the Los Angeles Board of Public Utilities and Transportation, enjoining suspension of 50 taxi drivers' licenses unless they are given prior notice and an opportunity for a hearing.

'Bionic Woman' is no 'Bio Baby'

Associated Press

A Superior Court judge has ordered a printing firm to stop selling or distributing posters depicting television's Lindsay "Bionic Woman" Wagner as the "Bio Baby."

Judge George M. Dell granted the injunction Friday in Los Angeles against Trade Printing Co. at the request of Universal Studios.

Superior Court Judge Charles H. Phillips granted the order Friday for the United Independent taxi firm after the PUT suspended the licenses, claiming the drivers did not have adequate proof of insurance as required by the city code.

The 50 drivers obtained insurance from an agent who was not qualified to write casualty insurance policies, said PUT General Manager Robert Russell. But United maintained its drivers have proper insurance.

Phillips said Friday the suspensions were an unconstitutional denial of due process of the law since the drivers lost their licenses with neither notice nor a chance to state their cases.

However, the judge ruled that the $20,000 bond

New mayors go back to school to learn their trade

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — An insurance man, a retired librarian and a certified public accountant are among the two women and 16 men who sit around a long green felt table in a 10th-floor penthouse overlooking Harvard University.

Together they represent nearly 11 million Americans from Seattle to Springfield, Mass., and they've gone back to school to help serve them better.

They are newly elected mayors of 18 cities who accepted Harvard invitations to attend five days of classroom lectures on how to run their cities. The smallest city represented is Utica, N.Y., its population dwindling below the 100,000 mark; the largest is New York City, with more than seven million people.

The insurance man is Ken Harris, who says he is the first Republican mayor in Charlotte, N.C., this century.

In a robin's egg-blue T-shirt depicting a cannon firing flowers from its mouth is Isabella Cannon, the retired librarian. Running as a "little old lady," she upset the incumbent to become, at 73, mayor of Raleigh, N.C.

Better known pros include Edward I. Koch of New York, who says: "I'm a competent public servant, and I'm very proud of that"; James F. Conway of St. Louis, a Democrat, but proud the Democratic organization opposed him, and Ernest Morial, a judge who quit his job to become the first black elected mayor of New Orleans.

Besides Harris, the only mayor-elect who lists himself as a Republican is Charles E. Whitlock, the certified public accountant from Lakewood, Colo. Four call themselves independent and 12 are Democrats.

"The only thing bigger on the ballot than the candidate's name in Toledo is the word Democrat," said Doug DeGood. At 30, he is the youngest in the group.

"What we should be getting into is the cities' relationship with the federal government," said Morial.

Starlet Tim Conway is watching his figure

NEW YORK — "We starlets have got to watch our figures," said Tim Conway, whom some regard as the funniest man in America, and, as Tim would add, "when I say 'some,' I mean my manager, Phil Weltman."

He pushed back the calories recommended to him by the captain at the Plaza Oak Room and settled for a bisque and a salad. He borrowed a cigarette from a table companion. "I don't really smoke; I borrow," he said. He is becoming a male non-porno movie star playing to G-rated audiences, which will add to his fame as a continuing comedian on the Carol Burnett show, where he already won an Emmy. In fact, Tim is already a Disney star but is branching out and will be seen more on the big screen in pictures he has written himself.

I asked him about Phil Weltman's allegation that he's the country's greatest clown.

"Mr. Weltman found me on the streets of Cleveland. I was directing a TV show. Steve Allen said I was such a lousy director I had to be punished by being made a performer. I am the funniest man in America — after 1,100 other comedians I know personally."

Who are the funniest? "Well, I like Steve Allen, Johnny Carson and Pinky Lee. Steve Allen is a great comedian because of the things he has brought to TV. Do you know Steve writes five songs every day? He always leaves his secretary about two hours of dictation."

Tim undertook to explain his next movie, "Billion Dollar Hobo," playing the would-be recipient of a Howard Hughes-type inheritance. He is required to be a hobo to learn what life is like. Will Geer plays the gentleman leaving the billion.

It's made by International Picture Show Inc., based in Atlanta. He has five other stories the company will film. He plans to direct, too, despite what Steve Allen said about his directing.

Tim at 43 has been called "a bumbling genius." In his pictures there are many adventures. He gets involved with talking dogs, for example, and can almost make you believe that a German shepherd named Bo can really read lines.

"The dog got so human to me that he put his hand on my shirt. I mean he put his paw on my shirt — you see what I mean."

"You have six children?" I asked Tim.

"To the best of my knowledge."

Don Tabor left the Drake Room to open his own garden restaurant, the Friory. . . . Xaviera Hollander keeps saying that she's coming back to N.Y. to testify in a court hearing. . . . Janis Paige is coming back to Broadway. . . . Russell Nype's shaping a new nightclub act. . . . "Looking Good" by Charles Hix, a men's beauty book, tells you how to shave: Splash your face with hot water for two minutes, apply film moisturizer, apply shaving film on top of that, wait two minutes, then shave. Takes four minutes to get you ready. . . . DeLaurentis' movie about the Brinks robbery, which had been shelved, will be done in N.Y. . . . The ultra-elegant Greentrees coffee house in the RCA Building draws such notables as Dr. Frank Field and Tom Snyder. . . . David Bowie at Chaz turned down an autograph request from a blonde — she wanted it imprinted on her bosom. . . . Benny Goodman came in to see trumpeter Doc Cheatham at Crawdaddy.

EARL'S PEARLS: "He's a self-made man, and he worships his cross."

Nat Sherman's 22-inch cigar will smoke for eight hours, 18 minutes — "and that's longer than some marriages last these days." That's Earl's brother.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This year you make opportunity for yourself where none existed, at least not for your type. The way is steep, awkward, always uphill, so any positive effort pays off promptly. Your evaluation of yourself, life in general, changes. Relationships are challenging, sensitive to the slightest move or failure to act on touchy issues. Today's natives are industrious, persistent, have missions that once in awhile drive them to extremes or to adopt strange companions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may wake up with vague memories of a strange dream. Try to remember: it's important. Nobody seems to take business seriously. Try hard to get your point across.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The path of least resistance is favored. A word too many can cause arguments, bad feelings. Be mature: accept the responsibility you may be given. Avoid games.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have to rearrange appointments, schedule around others. Big social gatherings cause confusion. Stick with a number of close friends. Don't overspend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't leave out the people you love most. Ask about the situation before accepting any invitations, offers. Spur of the moment ideas won't work out to your benefit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid business, commerce; concentrate on higher values, spiritual principles. You can take a chance now, do something a bit rash, have it work out in your favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People try to pressure you, force issues even if you aren't prepared to respond. Don't react to wisecracks, practical jokes. Avoid temper, be serene as possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Think big, seek the long-range point of view. Conservative people, older folk give you support. Bickering among youngsters means that you have a fight to mediate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A desire to resurrect a dead project may cause loss of capital. Suspend judgment on matters of major importance — advice received isn't too sound, but don't argue.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put aside personal plans for the needs of others. You are creative, but impulsive, cause something to be taken out of context. Handle all obligations promptly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People pick fights over trivial matters. Don't rise to the bait. Avoid travel, protect your interests close to home. Follow the rules, at least in public.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be above gossip, criticism of your actions. Things will calm down in due time. Family experiences tension which you aren't to blame for, but must deal with.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be yourself and keep on working to improve conditions despite hysteria, games. Your plans may have to be adjusted to fit someone else's. Co-operate: no complaints!

'Cabaret'

That's the hit musical where Mary Ann Dunroe, Brian Fowler and Patti Hubler live it up like this on stage currently at Sebastian's Dinner Playhouse, Grand Hotel, Anaheim.

Children's play due at LBSU

"Trudi and the Minstrel" by Allen Cullen, a holiday treat for the entire family, will open at Long Beach State University Dec. 2 at 8 p.m. in the Studio Theater. Additional performances are scheduled for Dec. 3, 4, 7, 8, 9 and 10.

The English fantasy, written for children of all ages, transports the audience from innocent countryside where all is beautiful to the depths of Baroness Von Brubelstein's castle, where dragons, trolls, mermaids and gypsies conspire to keep viewers on the edge of their seats.

Shingeru Yaji, costume and makeup designer, says: "There are many problems in designing for 'Trudi.' I must constantly keep in mind the construction process and how costumes for imaginative characters can be transported to fit the human body."

The story centers around Trudi, a pretty country girl who leaves home, meets Peter, a minstrel, and journeys to Castle Seeblick. At the castle Trudi and Peter fall afoul of the plots and curses of the baroness, whose magic book foretells the marriage of her son Siegfried to Trudi.

"Trudi and the Minstrel" is directed by Kenneth W. Rugg, director of the LBSU Children's Theater. Set designer for the production is John Story, lighting designer Bernard J. Skalka and assistant director Debbie Seitz.

Rick Maxson is cast as Peter, Gloria Morgan as Trudi, Kevin Brief as Sentry, Tally Briggs as Rothbart, Kahlei Slick as the Baroness, and Michael Lyman as the Baron.

Other cast members include Diane Miller, Julie Bloomfield, Lisa Sloan, Cynthia Negri, Linda Morgan, Bonnie Kalisher, Rick Corwin, Christine Dinabulo, Nancy D'Aleo, Roger Michelson, Brian Segraves and Wendy Wessberg.

Tickets are on sale at the Fine Arts Ticket Office, where the phone number is (213) 498-4540, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. They will also be available the evenings of performance.

Simon's 17th play his 'best'

Associated Press

On Dec. 5, Neil Simon's 17th Broadway show opens in New York. He says it's his best.

That's quite an admission from the mild-mannered playwright, who is not prone to hyperbole. Perhaps one reason he is so fond of "Chapter Two" is because it is so close to him. The comedy-drama concerns a writer who goes into an emotional tailspin after the death of the wife.

Since its opening at the Ahmanson Theater in Los Angeles Oct. 7, "Chapter Two" has been drawing capacity crowds.

Durants share lifetime of ideas

'All in all, despite some stimulating setbacks, we have been among fortune's favorites. Through 60 years, we have earned our bread by celebrating the creative men and women who made history forgivable by enriching our heritage and lives.'

— Will and Ariel Durant

She is small and birdlike, with quick, fluttery movements and a bright, intense gaze; testimony to her deep intelligence and passion for learning.

He is tiny, wiry and pensive, with a penetrating mind and incisive wit, undiminished by his 92 years spent in pursuit of knowledge and ideas.

Theirs is a true love story. For 64 years, Will and Ariel Durant have lived, worked and studied together, often with the affectionate rivalry of two gifted people who find it difficult to brook opposition, but always with deep admiration and respect for each other.

The harvest of their collaboration has been bountiful. An 11-volume, popularly (if not always critically) acclaimed Story of Civilization, was completed in 1975.

They have just completed a dual autobiography (Simon & Schuster) recounting their accomplishments, travails, unorthodox lives and experiences as members of an intellectual, humanistic circle which included Clarence Darrow, Theodore Dreiser, Arnold Toynbee and Bertrand Russell, among others.

Scholarly critics have occasionally attacked them for catering to popular tastes, for their failure to expand the field of existing knowledge and their use of too many secondary sources in their works.

The Durants however, are unmoved.

"OUR AIM HAS not been to add to knowledge, but to promote better and wider understanding of existing knowledge," says Will.

"Through 60 years," says Ariel, "we have earned our bread by celebrating the creative men and women who made history forgivable by enriching our heritage and our lives."

In a recent interview, they shared thoughts and, occasionally, differing opinions, about the state of American society, religion, philosophy, politics and love.

Their Hollywood Hills home of 30 years is spacious and filled with memorabilia — pictures, books and remembrances of some of the 20th century's most luminous figures. Their own works occupy an unobtrusive spot in their high-ceilinged, comfortably-cluttered study.

The rocking chair in which Will sits has a detachable board the size of a large poster affixed to its arms. On this board, he has done much of his writing. Situated on either side of his rocker are tables laden with reference and research materials.

"When people ask where I got my reference material," he says with a wink, "I tell them I borrowed right and left."

Ariel sits by the large fireplace mostly in a contemplative mood. When she wishes to differ or make a point, however, her demeanor changes dramatically and she gestures emphatically with her walking stick.

"IF I HAD BEEN asked to predict how long our marriage would last at the beginning," says Ariel, "I would have said two weeks — at the outside. I didn't realize I was married to a philosopher husband who could see far into the future and into human hearts as well. I forgot that he was steering the ship and, as a good mariner, he would steer us away from the shoals."

"Very well put, Ariel," says Will with a nod. "Whenever we would fight, when we were younger, I would be the one to make up, because I couldn't go to bed angry. When we woke up in the morning she would see things my way."

Doctor eyes specialty

By Ben Zinser
Medical Science Editor

At Dartmouth, she recalls, they didn't even ask her to sit down.

The admissions representative, male, and military in manner, let it be known to Mary Catherine Michelis that she would not be admitted to medical school.

"Too disturbing for the class," she was told.

They kept telling her the same thing at other places. Still other schools insisted she sign a waiver saying she would quit if she should marry. She refused to sign.

But Kay Michelis, as the saying goes, showed 'em.

She became a physician — a doctor of medicine.

She became a military officer — which entitled HER to sit down on occasion behind a desk.

She became an eye surgeon.

She became a specialty surgeon within that specialty.

She has been written up in the Ladies Home Journal. Now, People magazine is preparing a story.

She is performing relatively new cataract surgery — the type involving plastic lens implants. She recently was the main-spring of a weeklong medical seminar on lens implants.

Oh, one more item. She drives a Citroen Masserati.

YOU MAY SEE the car around because Dr. Michelis practices medicine in Long Beach and lives in Seal Beach. She operates at Pacific Hospital. If you see her farther north, it's because the best mechanic for her car is in Van Nuys, she says.

Things are getting better, but it wasn't always that way.

In Pittsburgh, where she was reared, she went to see a friend scheduled to have surgery very early in the morning. It was 3 a.m.

"They wouldn't believe I was a physician," she recalls. "Even with license in hand, they wouldn't believe me. They called the guards."

There has been no discrimination in recent years.

"I'm accepted on my accomplishments by my peers," she says.

According to Dr. Michelis, there's no drawback in being a woman physician nowadays. Quite the contrary.

"There's a tremendous advantage in being a woman," she insists. "When someone meets you, that person remembers you if you make an impression. It's advantageous. The women's movement has brought to the forefront equality for women."

She adds that it takes a strong woman to achieve.

"WOMAN'S PLACE has always been second rate in society," she continues. "I'm helping to change this. A woman can do anything she wants to do. With a fight she can reach the top."

From the start, Dr. Michelis wanted to be a physician.

Well, almost.

Actually her first choice was a career as an archeologist.

But she changed her mind and here's her explanation:

"When I found out I couldn't keep the jewels I expected to find in Egypt, I decided on medicine."

She chose ophthalmology because of two persons — a sister who had a chronic eye problem and Dr. Murray McCaslin, a professor of ophthalmology at the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. McCaslin was also the sister's physician.

She took her medical degree at Medical College of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and her residency in ophthalmology at the University of Pittsburgh.

She specialized in cataract surgery employing implants after studying with Dr. Henry Hirschman of Long Beach, Dr. C. D. Binkhorst of Holland and Mr. Peter Choyce of England.

EYE SURGERY is one of the two most exciting things she's ever done, she says. The other? "Delivering a baby."

Cataract surgery, she says, is like giving "rebirth to an elderly population." It's

JAZZ trumpeter Miles Davis — in seclusion while recuperating from hip operation.

Q: Is it true that Miles Davis is getting a new band together to go into jazz-rock?

A: The jazz trumpeter, who has been in the forefront of jazz since his days with Charlie Parker, has not played in public in two years and will neither confirm nor deny the rumor. Nearly as reclusive as the late Howard Hughes, Davis has squirmed up in his Moorish town house on New York's West Side and communicates with the outside world by telephone.

"I haven't been out of the house more than seven times in the last two years," he says. Still recovering from a hip operation, he adds: "When I can stand on my leg I'll play again. I don't turn the other cheek and I don't give up either."

Q: What does Carrie Snodgrass have to say about her breakup with rock star Neil Young?

A: Back from the remote ranch where she spent six years with Young and gave birth to his son, Zeke, the star of "Diary of a Mad Housewife" says she's not mad, but she's glad that her time as a housewife is over.

"We always had a theory," she says, "that if we wanted to end a relationship it would be so. No judge or jury is going to tell Neil when he can visit his son. I am not sorry I did it, but I am happy to be working again." Carrie is back before the cameras, starring in "The Fury."

Q: Wasn't "liberated" actress Vanessa Redgrave once married? Whatever happened to her husband?

A: British movie director Tony Richardson, 49, was married to Ms. Redgrave for five years, and is currently dating author Brooke Hayward, 39, who was at one time married to "Easy Rider" Dennis Hopper.

Both have current successes — Richardson with his new Ann-Margret movie, "Joseph Andrews," and Brooke with "Haywire," a biography of her producer-father Leland Hayward and her actress-mother Margaret Sullavan. Richardson seems intent on spending a long time in Hollywood — he recently moved into a house off the Sunset Strip which was once owned by "Deep Throat" star, Linda Lovelace.

Q: Tina Louise has always been one of my favorite actresses — what's she doing now?

A: Stranded for years on "Gilligan's Island," Tina will be seen in the forthcoming movie, "Mean Dog Blues." She dropped out of sight six years ago when her daughter, Caprice, was born shortly after Tina had divorced the baby's father, Les Crane.

Incidentally, the red-haired actress also has signed a four-year contract, worth at least $1 million, to do TV commercials for beauty products.

Q: We had a terrible scare from rabies in Texas this year and I wonder if it's a threat all over the country?

A: Always lurking as a potential killer, the disease has been reported in 1,700 animals this year in the United States. Skunks seem to be the predominant carriers and efforts are under way to vaccinate animals in the wild.

BRITISH director Tony Richardson, above center, and the two women in his life, ex-wife Vanessa Redgrave, left, and current interest, author Brooke Hayward — seems intent on calling Hollywood home.

ACTRESS Carrie Snodgrass and rock singer Neil Young, the father of her baby — returning to films after stint as a housewife.

ACTRESS Shirley MacLaine — she's credited by others with helping career of ex-beau Pete Hamill, who's now dating Jackie Onassis.

Q: After all Shirley MacLaine did for Pete Hamill, how could he leave her for Jackie O.?

A: The newspaper columnist, who makes more headlines than he writes these days, is rather miffed at the notion that Shirley helped his career.

"Look," he says gruffly, "I was writing screenplays before I ever started seeing Shirley MacLaine. I wasn't hanging out on a street corner ... Shirley didn't come along and whisk me anywhere. But my time with Shirley did coincide with a growing-up period in my life ... It was good for me and for my work."

New book tells true story of Monty

Some weeks ago I had the dismal task of reading and reviewing "Monty," an alleged biography of Montgomery Clift, by a hack named Robert LaGuardia. The book was so trashy that I feared its seamy and repulsive gossip would sell like space shoes.

A soap opera of pills, booze and perversion, it's an extended nightmare in which Monty passes out on every page. Predictably, it has slithered onto the best-seller list, despite a barrage of protests from friends and associates of the late Mr. Clift that the book is a fraud.

The fact that such a work of fiction could be a publishing success is discouraging, but to be expected — like muggings in New York and corruption in government.

To sweeten the bitter aftertaste of this bile, a copy of Patricia Bosworth's "Montgomery Clift" (to be published in March by Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich) has just arrived on my desk. I read it with fascination, delight and immense relief.

A definitive work on Montgomery Clift, Ms. Bosworth's book is intelligent, readable and ultimately moving. This is the distinguished book Clift's fans deserve and will cherish.

MS. BOSWORTH manages, through diligent and accurate research and through her consistent and often thrilling insight, to bring both the man and the actor to life. This is especially admirable when you consider how self-contained and introspective he was. As one director pointed out, it was part of his secret technique to always hold back vital information while acting.

This contributed to his mysterious screen presence, making him a more fascinating and dramatic character, but as a person he remained inscrutable.

Ms. Bosworth presents a compassionate, keenly-shaped portrait of a brilliant and complex personality. He was extraordinarily handsome, but his most attractive trait was an intense personal vision that drew people like magnets. His friends say they felt more alive when they were with Monty, more aware of life's magic. His gift was a unique vitality, a sensitivity that made him different and kept him dancing on the tip of a volcano.

Physically, he exuded masculinity. Pitted against John Wayne in his first film, "Red River," he displayed a vulnerable, androgynous quality that drove bobby soxers wild, paving the way for other sensitive male rebels as Brando and Dean. His sexuality, which set him apart from others, worked to both his advantage and disadvantage.

He was forced to lead an impossibly fragmented life; striving to maintain his screen image of male sex symbol, he kept his struggle with homosexuality from some of his closest friends. It became increasingly impossible to sustain one lasting, fulfilling relationship. Monty summed it up himself: "I don't understand it. I'm attracted to men, but I really love women." He knew the dilemma of being bisexual while simultaneously distrusting both sexes.

Ms. Bosworth has uncovered the story of Sunny Clift, Monty's driven, possessive and domineering mother, and the reasons behind her foolish, mentally unbalanced behavior — contributing factors in Monty's own rebellious life.

THE REAL STORY — not even mentioned in LaGuardia's cheap saga — is that after a childhood of torment and shame at being an orphan, Monty's mother discovered she was actually an Anderson-Blair, one of the bluest of blue-blood American families. (Anderson defended Fort Sumter in the Civil War. Blair was in Lincoln's cabinet. Ever heard of Blair House?)

Her life's quest was to regain her birthright and be acknowledged formally as the "thoroughbred" she knew she was. Sophia Anderson, her aunt, admitted that Sunny's claim was true and promised to present her and the children to the rest of their aristocratic kin as soon as Monty, his twin sister, and brother Brooks could be polished up with enough cultural sheen.

They were forced to endure private tutoring, endless tramping through galleries, and relentless drilling in foreign languages. After several trips to Europe, Aunt Sophie assessed their progress as "still rough around the edges," so they were whisked away on yet another whirlwind tour.

They never did get the acknowledgment Sunny craved, and in the process her children never got even a whiff of fun, freedom or childhood. At the age of 8½, she was still trying unsuccessfully to get legal recognition by the social register. In piecing together the true story of how Monty came to be the insecure social misfit he was, Ms. Bosworth is the only writer who had the assistance and cooperation of the Clift family.

Without flinching from the more sensational aspects of Clift's homosexual persona, the author also gives an intelligent account of his intense relationships with women: Elizabeth Taylor, Myrna Loy, Libby Holman, Mira Rostova, Nancy Walker and Ann Lincoln. But in the final analysis, his most enduring love was his work.

HE WANTED to be the world's greatest actor, and for a while nothing stood in his way. He gave everything to his film work, to his own roles as well as the overall concepts of the pictures themselves.

Often he rewrote clumsy scripts until they worked. On "The Search," the producer fought him all the way, until it became obvious from the rushes that Monty's improvements were saving the picture, and then two other writers walked off with Oscars for "best screenplay." He rewrote "Raintree County" at Elizabeth Taylor's insistence, cut unnecessary dialogue from "Freud," shaped up Irwin Shaw's "The Young Lions."

Nominated twice for Oscars ("Raintree County" and "From Here to Eternity") he never got one because he so totally immersed himself in the characters he played that nobody could see him "acting." Yet he remained an inspiration to other actors with more synthetic techniques while they stole votes from him.

He taught Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra how to act. (Though poles apart in every way, he idolized Sinatra, who befriended him until one night Sinatra saw him make a drunken pass at another male at one of Sinatra's parties, whereupon the "pint-sized Crosby" instructed his bodyguards to toss Monty out on his face.)

Elizabeth Taylor, whom he called "Bessie Mae," says she started acting with soul when she worked with Monty in "A Place in the Sun." In his attention to detail, he would open a door 50 different ways until he found the one that suited the moment perfectly.

When his work slipped away, Monty's life turned on itself like a cat eating its young. Enthusiasm turned to dissipation, ambition was replaced with self-hate. The famous car accident that destroyed his face threatened to put him out of business. Alcoholism made him uninsurable. Success became excess. If you've read LaGuardia's book, you know the lurid details.

BUT IF YOU'RE really interested in the man behind the mask, if you care about the human being and the artist, you must read Patricia Bosworth's masterful work. It's the difference between a file index and a complete library.

Her book, which should be in the bookstores after Christmas, is the professional, analytical biography of a brilliant, gifted wunderkind who refused to accept his own limitations, whose self-deception brought perfection within reach, with the saddest of consequences.

Reading the dossier Ms. Bosworth has compiled, it is impossible to believe Clift could have been so many things to so many people yet such an enigma to all. There are fresh anecdotes about Marilyn Monroe, who regarded him as a fellow lost orphan in more trouble than she was; Clark Gable, who, in spite of his longevity, was reduced to being an insecure bigot in his presence; and a galaxy of supporting players who willingly formed the commedia dell'arte for his Scaramouche.

The section on legendary Libby Holman is, by itself, a movie. She was the decadent Auntie Mame that his mother never was. Together, they would fly to the brothers of Cuba for a weekend; so Svengali-like was her hold over him that he turned down "Sunset Boulevard" because he felt it was too much like his own life.

As a former actress (I still remember the delicate but profound impression she made in Fred Zinnemann's "Nun's Story"), Patricia Bosworth has the knowledge and feeling to make the life of a hero throb with realism. As a professional, craftsman-like writer whose credentials are impeccable, she has the ability to sculpt a myriad of details into a rich fabric of writing that reads more like a work of literary merit than just another typed manuscript.

LaGuardia's current best-seller is recycled fan magazine junk for beauty parlor reading. Ms. Bosworth's biography is an inquiry into the desperate hope that lies fallow in the hearts of great artists, without which there is no meaning in moonlight, no music in the wind.

Advice to the Taxlorn

Changes in IRS report forms cause confusion

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have been using the short form 1040A to make out my taxes. However, this year we will receive more than $400 in interest payments from our savings accounts.

On the instruction sheet it says those who earn more than $400 in interest may not use the short form. I'm confused. Does this mean I must use the long form and not take the standard deduction? Since I have been using the short form, this is all I receive. — G.A.N.

In January, 1978, you will find that there are banks and various other places that can supply you with the regular 1977 Form 1040 and instructions. You will be able to claim the standard deduction, just as you did on Form 1040A. You see, the short form that we used to call short form, is not the same short form that we call short form today.

I would caution you that I.R.S. may come up with different instructions for 1977. Those are the ones to follow, not the ones for 1976. It used to be, a long time ago, that tax forms and rules didn't change every single year. Oh, for the good old days!

DEAR MR. SMITH: My wife and I are both 65 and have lived in our home for 30 years. Our cost including improvements is $25,000. If we sold now for $85,000 and bought a mobile home for $40,000, how much would our federal and state income taxes be? — W.G.B.

When you completely fill out I.R.S. Form 2119 you will find that your $85,000 sales price is reduced (down to $75,000 possibly) by an estimated $7,000 for sales commissions, title insurance, legal and other fees, and perhaps $3,000 for painting, lawn and other fix-up expenses. Your one-time exclusion of $35,000 is 47 percent of $75,000. Your gain, at this point, is $50,000, ($75,000 minus $25,000). That exclusion of 47 percent is now applied to the $50,000 gain so that $23,500 is non-taxable.

Finally, the adjusted sales price of $75,000 is reduced by $23,500 and the $40,000 for the new mobile home. Your net long-term gain is $11,500 which is further reduced by the 50 percent capital gain deduction. Subject to the actual selling price and expenses, you would now add $5,750 to the federal and state (California) taxable income that you figured in the usual way, and then compute the tax due. You can also use income averaging if beneficial, and installment reporting on the sale if you are to receive no more than 30 percent of the selling price in the year of sale.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1956 and 1962, my wife inherited a 15 percent equity in family farmlands, operated as one enterprise. Based on current land values, her annual income is negligible. All these years futile attempts were made, always with legal counseling, to partition the property. Additional deaths, new heirs, new lawyers, and changing conditions, were always there to offset any progress. My wife finally brought suit to either divide the property or liquidate. Legal expenses have been enormous. How are these deducted? — F.C.E.

Legal expenses that are fully deductible include, 1) determination, collection, advice, refund, etc., of any tax, 2) to carry on a trade or business, 3) for production of income, 4) for management, conservation or maintenance of investment property, 5) sale of property, if ordinary income is derived.

Legal expenses that are added to tax basis (cost) of property include, 1) recovery of property or perfecting title, unless ordinary income results, which makes related expenses fully deductible, 2) capital expenditures. Those that are not deductible or added to tax basis include expenses to protect or assert rights to property as an heir, or as a beneficiary under a testamentary trust. This would not appear to apply to your wife.

I believe, therefore, that all your legal costs are either fully deductible, or additions to the cost of property. Your attorneys should provide enough detail.

Aces on bridge

By Ira Corn
Team Captain

Dear Mr. Corn: I have an unusual question, "Is an eight bid legal?" Suppose, for example, each player was dealt a 13-card suit. Could someone legally bid eight clubs rather than pay off to a grand slam in spades?

All in Angles, Houston
Answer: No, the only legal bids are from one through seven, plus the denomination. Agreed that an eight-club bid might possibly be a good save. Nevertheless, eight bids cannot be made under the current laws.

Dear Mr. Corn: My right hand opponent opened three hearts and I helped this hand. What should I have done? I doubled and we played in five diamonds, down.

Two Way Double, Garden City, N.Y.

Answer: In standard methods, the double is for takeout. Therefore, I would rule out the double since I have little support for unbid suits. The choices are between a pass, three no trump and some number of clubs.

I would bid clubs if I knew how many, but since this is impossible to determine, I would bid three no trump with a pass a close second choice.

If opponents were vulnerable, I would pass and collect my penalty.

Dear Mr. Corn: This was our bidding and this was my hand (South). I intended my three no trump bid as the unusual no trump; partner thought otherwise. We missed a cold slam in diamonds for the privilege of going set in three no trump.

Answer: It's possible but unlikely that the three no trump bid might have been interpreted as unusual. However, normal use of the convention stipulates that you should have jumped to two no trump directly over the opening one-heart bid.

Dear Mr. Corn: Partner opens one spade, next hand doubles and I jump to three spades. How much strength do I show? Wrong Contract, San Francisco

Answer: The jump bid is used in this particular instance as a barricade bid. It promises long trumps, little defensive values and good distribution and playing strength. I would say eight points or less, otherwise a redouble might be more descriptive.

Police offer advice on how to prevent crime

"I went to a convention in Hays, Kan.," a woman said. "What a delightful experience. Hays is a little city, about 15,000, on the Great Plains. One evening I decided to take a long walk and see the town. I felt perfectly safe. The people I met wished me a cheery good evening. They saw nothing strange about a strange woman strolling around in their town in the moonlight. I'm not about to take such a hike in Long Beach."

Long Beach is trying to become a bit more like Hays, said Frank Castillo, a public affairs officer of the Long Beach Police Department. "There are thousands of towns in America like Hays," Castillo said. "The people trust each other because they know each other."

They are neighbors. Many of them don't even bother to lock their doors.

"If something should go wrong, the police and many other citizens will know about it in minutes. They have community spirit."

Many citizens, especially older ones, came here from places like Hays, he pointed out. They bring their carefree ways with them. They learn better, often the hard way.

MANY WILL not venture outdoors after sundown. Many churches have discontinued evening meetings. Prayers can be dangerous in Long Beach. Some neighborhood bars close early because patrons are afraid to venture out at night.

"The police department helps people of all ages with problems of security, but much of our work involves older citizens because there are so many of them and they do have special problems."

The Public Affairs Office gives advice to both individuals and groups, preferably groups. Some of the advice may surprise laypersons. For example: "What is the first thing an elderly woman should do when approached by a purse snatcher?" The answer: "Sit down!"

"There is nothing she can do to save the purse," Castillo explained. "Any resistance is futile and dangerous. Often a purse-snatch victim is knocked to the sidewalk. A broken hip may be the result since older women are most liable to this injury. If she just sits down and lets him have the purse she may escape injury."

Other advice includes walking in company, avoiding shortcuts and never carrying much money in a purse.

Adequate locks are a necessary defense against burglaries and break-ins. Any person who wonders if his house is adequately locked can request an inspection. A civilian expert will be sent to inspect the place and make recommendations.

ONE OF THE best things any senior citizen can do, said Castillo, is to get and study a book called "Resource Guide for Senior Citizens." This is published by the City of Long Beach and may be obtained without cost from the Division of Senior Citizens Affairs Information and Referral Center, 201 E. Broadway.

The center will also help individuals with their problems. The book contains a listing of emergency organizations. It also lists many other services for seniors, including health, education, employment and recreation. A worthwhile book to have on hand.

The department emphasizes the importance of group meetings. Organizations can request that an officer be sent to lecture on law enforcement and crime prevention. There is also the system of block meetings in which neighbors are taught how they can help each other in crime prevention.

The block meetings are now being held in the Westside. Plans call for eventual coverage of the entire city.

Block meetings have proved enormously effective. A small suburban neighbor of Long Beach conducted block meetings on a saturation basis. Often they were "kaffee klatches" of neighborhood women. A well-trained officer would explain to them how they could help protect each other's property and children.

The program was so successful that in one year the town almost eliminated crime although neighboring towns had a high incidence of offenses.

LONG BEACH is a bilingual town and is becoming more so. There are four public affairs officers who speak fluent Spanish. Translators are available for several other languages.

A recent department statement says: "Turning the tide of rising crime is the responsibility of every citizen. The Meet Your Police concept seeks to emphasize the important role every citizen can play in the fight against lawlessness."

"The program is designed to increase cooperation, respect and understanding between the citizen and the police."

"The police need your help. You can act as the eyes and ears of the police officer. Criminals cannot and will not operate in areas where citizens are alert."

"Become involved! Here are a few steps which may prevent you from becoming a crime statistic. Learn to know your neighbors by assisting and by watching their property; ask your neighbor to watch your property; implement home security measures; utilizing deadbolt locks; and mark your property with an engraver, with your driver's license number. (The Public Affairs Office loans engraving tools for marking property.)"

Senior citizens have the same problems as others, but they may be more acute, Castillo said.

FOR EXAMPLE, it is folly to attempt self-defense. The assailant is stronger. But it is folly at any age to attempt self-defense against overwhelming odds.

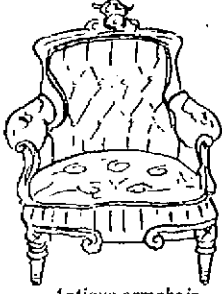

Women should not carry important sums of money in handbags. Such money should be in a secret pocket.

It is unwise to open doors to strangers. It is wise to have a front-door peephole to see who is knocking.

A common offense against the aging is the theft from mailboxes of Social Security and other pension checks. This can be prevented by having the checks mailed to the bank.

The personnel of the Public Affairs Office are Lt. Gene Brizzolara, Sgt. Merle Barrett, Officers Castillo, Herb Wisdom, Larry Rhoades, Al Covarillas and Randi Hutchinson, a woman who specializes in rape prevention.

Flea Market Finds Victorian furniture brings high prices

Q. "We have enclosed a photograph of a Victorian armchair we just rescued from the barn." — Mr. and Mrs. W.D., Mobile, Ala.

A. Twenty years ago your Renaissance Revival armchair could be purchased for $20 at the neighborhood thrift shop, but alas, that day is gone forever. This mid-Victorian furniture, characterized by stiff and heavy outlines, areas of burl veneers and applied and carved ornaments of trophy swags, flowers, medallions and fruit, is enjoying a revival. Even those who stated it was unsightly and uncomfortable are taking a second look! Nowadays one of these super sitters in fine condition sells for a respectable $250 to $300!

Q. "My favorite flea market find is any campaign item relating to Franklin D. Roosevelt." — Harry, Tucson, Ariz.

A. Based on a survey of current prices, it appears that political campaign collectors have given FDR mementos a vote of confidence! Value guide: button, Roosevelt-Garner, $8; button, "Third Term Club," Roosevelt, 1940, $6; delegate button, FDR, satin rosette trim, red, white and blue streamer, $225; campaign poster, FDR, 1936, 34 inches by 16 inches, $25; mug, FDR "The New Deal," pottery, 4 inches tall, $30; FDR silk window banner, "God Bless America," $6.

Q. "I recently acquired a bowl in Buffalo Pottery, Deldare Ware." — Martha, Briston, Pa.

A. The hunt continues for desirable Deldare produced primarily between 1908 and 1909 and 1923 to 1925 by the Buffalo Pottery of Buffalo, N.Y. Emerald Deldare was introduced in 1911. Every piece of Deldare, with its solid-olive colored green body, was skillfully hand-decorated over a transfer point. Decorative motifs were Ye Olden Days, Fallowfield Hunt, Ye Lion Inn and Dr. Syntax.

Attribution is possible, for each piece bore a version of the firm's famed Buffalo trademark, decorator's signature and the date. Those who shuffle after Buffalo Pottery, admire and acquire Deldare Ware! Value guide: bowl, "Ye Lion Inn," 8 inches in diameter, $140.

Q. "We own a mint condition copy of the Swallows record 'Since You've Been Away.'" — Nan and Pete, Clearwater, Fla.

A. Converting discs into dollars becomes a reality with this 45 r.p.m. on the King label. The Swallows are well known to rhythm and blues record buffs and who seek many of their hits of the '50s. "Since You've Been Away," King 4466, is a true oldie but goodie, and locating a copy in mint condition for under $150 is indeed a groovy deal!

Appraise your American country antiques with Dan D'imperio's book, "The Country Antiques Companion," Dodd, Mead & Co., $8.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Crown Syndicate, Inc., No. 5 Crown Road, Weatherford, Texas 76088. Please include a check or money order.

Contemporary Living Organize to fight depression

If you have just lost a spouse in death or even in divorce, the negative impact of this inevitably sad and difficult period in your life can be lessened by several organized efforts.

There is a long list of helpful options open to you: getting a job or changing jobs or increasing your volunteer work. Perhaps further education will help you, or becoming an expert on something, now that you have the time.

Two of the many options are self-pampering, so perhaps they are more pleasant to consider first. One of these is improving one's looks, and the other is taking those improved looks on a trip.

Each one of us has a duty to be as attractive as is possible. This is not a matter of vanity, but rather one of the responsibilities of the gift of life.

Good grooming, keeping our bodies in shape, maintaining healthy skin and hair, dressing appropriately and neatly — these are all elements that should be in everyone's total package.

ONE OF the first steps is the improvement of health habits, but don't jump too far. Consult a doctor before you try a new crash diet or a radical new form of exercise (like skateboarding or jogging 10 miles a day).

If you are feeling really depressed, setting aside some money to spend on your looks is a good investment. If you can afford to go to an exercise class at the "Y" after work, sign up.

Analyze yourself objectively in the mirror to see what needs further beautifying in the new you. Always start with your head (if you start with your feet, it might be too depressing.) Almost anyone can do something affirmative about his or her hair.

A woman might need a new makeup scheme (they are fun to try). A man might try a facial the next time he's at the barber. (If he feels better looking, he will be better looking.) No one knows what bliss is until they've had a good massage, and there's always the steam bath, and a big, new bottle of body cologne. Another great therapeutic measure for someone who really needs a lift is travel. It's one of the greatest mind stretchers there is, and it creates at the same time a storehouse for important memories and experiences that can be enjoyed and re-savored the rest of one's life.

The right travel agent is key to the success of your special trip. If you have to go alone, do something that you alone care about doing. If golf is your thing, plan a trip to tour the famous courses of Portmarnock and St. Andrews in Ireland and Scotland; go whack a golf ball at the ancient aqueduct outside Rome or at the Caspian Sea.

If you're an art buff, fly to Europe to see the very latest contemporary art exhibitions, so you can come back home full of news no one else has.

IT DOESN'T matter whether you like contemplating the plantings in the English gardens or the marine life on the beaches of the Philippines, whether your passions are tied to a ski slope, a tennis court or the watching of birds; you can plan a trip that's "just for you" and enjoy it alone.

There is no longer any stigma attached to a woman traveling by herself; she is no longer viewed as someone who is possibly "available." If another woman travels with you, that's fun, because you can share and discuss experiences together.

But having another woman along also lessens your acute perception of events around you, and perhaps even your opportunity for wonderful adventures.

No matter what you do when you're the right focus on fighting that depression. You owe it to your family, your friends, your job, and most of all, to yourself.

Doggie door causes family flap

I have the only dog in North America with kidneys the size of a comma.

That explains why our house is carpeted with wall-to-wall urine.

That explains why our guests have to keep moving lest they be mistaken for a wall.

That explains why we made a decision to install a doggy door for his convenience. You know, those little flaps you cut out in the middle of a $300 door.

"You'll get used to it," I explained. "It's not the end of the world. Just adjust to seeing it and after a while it'll become as commonplace as the garage."

"I won't get used to it," whimpered my husband. "Our door is being violated. Can't you think of another way to train him? Have you tried rubbing his nose in it and putting him outside?"

"It didn't work," I said. "It worked for the kids."

THAT WAS different. With them, it was an incentive. We told them if they didn't go through a dry night, they couldn't borrow the car.

The opening of the doggy door measured 8½ inches by 12½ inches. To the dog it was like jumping the Snake River... blindfolded... on a tractor mower.

The training proved to be, rather simple. Within an hour, I figured out if you pushed the plastic insert with your nose hard enough, it opened to the outside and it was just a matter of trying to jump for a little impetus, balance your paws on the sill, and push yourself through. It took the dog a little longer to comprehend.

"Do not look upon it as the Berlin Wall," I said one day as I rubbed my raw shoulder. "It's a two-way street. You can go out and you can come back in whenever you please. Face it, bunkie, there's a whole community of dogs out there who are not trained to shag rugs."

Yesterday, one of the kids came in absolutely breathless. "Hey, Mom, the dog's at the door trying to get out." I was ecstatic. "Where is he?" I asked as I viewed the door.

"He's in the hallway standing at the door without the hole in it."

If a family of trolls ever needs a house, it'll be a seller's market.

All about anniversaries

THANKSGIVING CAME early to Memorial Hospital Medical Center. Members of the board of directors, board of trustees and major donors thanked everyone and each other at an elegant dinner in Housells Forum in the Center for Health Education.

Norman Rasmussen, chairman of Memorial and Children's board of directors, welcomed the more than 250 guests.

Bob Ivey, chairman of the board of Earl and Loraine Miller Children's Hospital, made a surprise presentation of a birthday cake to Loraine Miller Collins.

It was not Loraine's birthday but the seventh birthday of the hospital she founded with her late husband, Earl Burns Miller.

One portion of the program was devoted to viewing a film produced by the hospital foundation and FMS Productions in cooperation with the Long Beach Area Child Trauma Council.

Paul Kleiter, director of audio visual services for the hospital, introduced the film, titled "A Chain to Be Broken," which features Arte Johnson. It will be distributed nationally.

Other "thank you's" were offered by Dr. Micheal Weller and Jack Weiblen.

Among those attending were Lawrence Collins, Ruth Weiblen, Shirley Weller, Eleanor Heldt, Barbara Ivey, the Myles Ketchums, Gene and Betty Anne Kirkpatrick, Dick and Susan Bell, Frieda Bishop, Frances Clock, George Johnson, chairman of the board of Memorial, and his wife, Pat.

THE RUBY anniversary (that's 40th for those of you who haven't had that one yet) of Eugene and Mary DePrete was celebrated with red carpet treatment at Chez Cary in Orange.

Hosts were the couple's children and spouses Eugene and Ginnie De Prete, Dennis and Barbara De Prete and Myra and Daniel Casabian.

KEN AND AUDREY Kinnelly know all about ruby anniversaries.

They just celebrated theirs with an afternoon open house given by their children in the couple's Long Beach home.

Hosts were Jim and Martha Kinnelly, Don and Chris Kinnelly, Mary Ann and Tom Van Woerkom of Visalia and Paul Kinnelly.

CELEBRATING THEIR first week anniversary are the new Mr. and Mrs. Ross Millie (she is the former Carol Ann Webster of Manhattan Beach).

Ross is the son of Dixie Millie of Long Beach and the late Mr. Noble Millie.

The wedding took place in San Francisco with her sister, Mrs. Clinton Alley, and William Thompson as honor attendants. The couple are at home in Carmichael.

He is a graduate of Stanford University and she has her law degree from the University of San Francisco.

LITTLE THINGS you might never know if you didn't read Socially Speaking.

For those of you who frequent Allen Center at the Naval Support Activity on Terminal Island, Heidi Kohler and her husband, Bud, have news for you.

They learned, the hard way that gate one is closed after 8 p.m. now and you must use gate nine.

Unfortunately they found out when they were taking recent houseguests, Ralph and Lucine Baker, to dinner.

The Bakers of San Francisco were combining business with the celebration of their 15th wedding anniversary.

The Kohlers made reservations for an extra special anniversary dinner. But no one at the officers' club told them the entrance had been changed.

Of course they were already late when they discovered the lockout — Bud tried every gate until he found nine.

LBSU sets stage for 'Egyptiana'

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

"The Treasures of Tutankhamun" are coming to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art in February and the museum studies class at Long Beach State University is setting its own stage in preparation. Beginning Monday, "Egypt in L.A." will go on view in the LBSU Art Galleries.

As a consciousness-raising project to show the influence of ancient Egypt on recent times, members of the art department searched out examples in art, architecture, decorative arts and commercial products. Some are beautiful and impressive; some are frankly awful.

For a year, "Egyptiana" was hunted in many of its forms, from high art to kitsch. The result is a mixture that reflects the taste of Southern Californians past and present. There is art that is excellent in its own right, pieces that are simply antique curiosities, imitations good and bad, and copies of copies.

In their research, students found that the first modern revival of Egyptian art followed the 1788-1799 Napoleonic campaigns in Egypt; these led to some of the formal French and Continental styles popular through the 19th century. In the Romantic Age, "Egyptiana" catered to a taste for the exotic. More influences were the invention of photography in 1839, the popularity of the Grand Tour at the turn of the century, the explosive effect of the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb in 1922, and the rise of Hollywood's film industry.

In the LBSU exhibit there will be rare movie stills from versions of "Cleopatra" and "The Egyptian"; photo-documentation of Los Angeles' interpretations of Egyptian architecture; 18th century Wedgwood pieces; an 18th century porcelain and gilt epergne from the Edward-Dean Museum; and art deco designed in the wake of the tomb discovery.

An illustrated catalog has been prepared for the exhibit which will continue through Dec. 11. After the opening Monday from 7 to 9 p.m., hours will be noon to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays. The galleries are closed Saturdays and holidays. During the week, parking is available in pay public lots on the south side of Seventh Street. All LBSU lots are free on Sundays.

RESULTS ARE IN for the marathon three-day auction that ended Wednesday night at Sotheby Parke Bernet in Los Angeles: The total raised to benefit Los Angeles County Museum of Art is $1,539,380. This amount far exceeded expectations. Said museum director Kenneth Donahue, "We're delighted with the results of the sale and congratulate ourselves on the method of disposition."

The results exceeded Sotheby Parke Bernet's pre-sale estimate by $200,000.

Bidders from eight foreign countries and 18 states came to the sale to bid on 500 items including paintings, sculpture, furniture, Indian and Islamic works of art being deaccessioned by the museum.

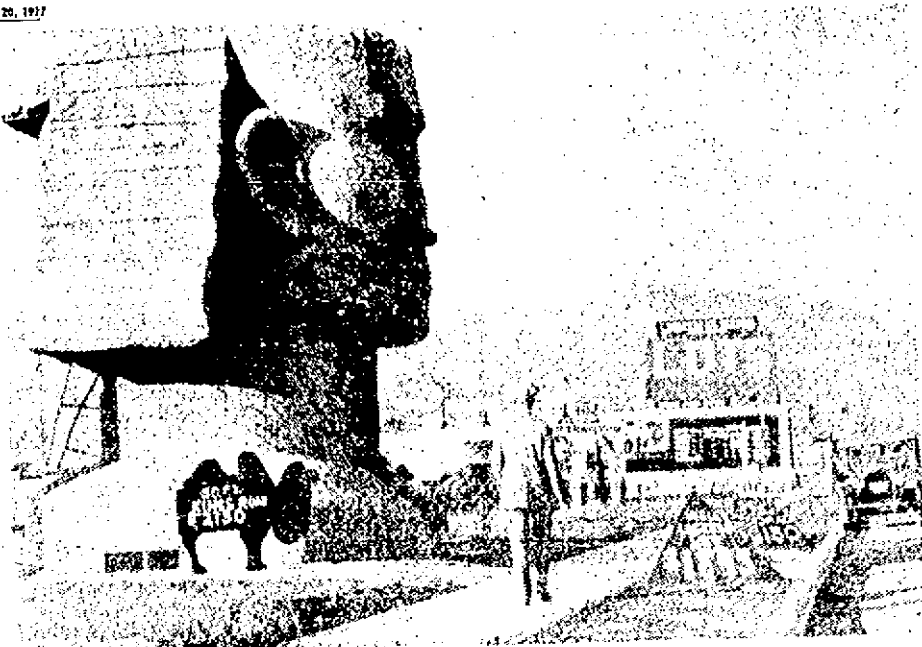

Peter McCoy, president of Sotheby Parke Bernet in Los Angeles, noted, "The auction attracted a cross-section of buyers from the novice bidder who wanted to own a 'true museum piece' to professional dealers from Europe who flew in to purchase. It was a rare opportunity not only to be able to see 500 years of art history at one time, but to be able to bid on it as well."

For each session of the auction, the saleroom, which holds 500 people, was filled to capacity. Highest price paid was $78,000 for "Interieur d'Atelier, le Lutrin" by Henri Matisse, painted in 1926; it was bought by a New York dealer. The pre-sale estimate for the painting was $40,000 to $50,000. A number of pieces sold for more than their pre-sale estimates.

Donahue said that the money realized from the auction will be used to buy additional works of art for the museum.

TWO LIBRARIES are presenting art shows through November. Bronze and wood sculpture by Robert Ingram is at Burnett Library, 560 E. Hill St. Ingram is one of 13 CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) artists currently working in Long Beach; he is based at the California Recreation Center, 1550 California Ave., where he gives art lessons to children and adults.

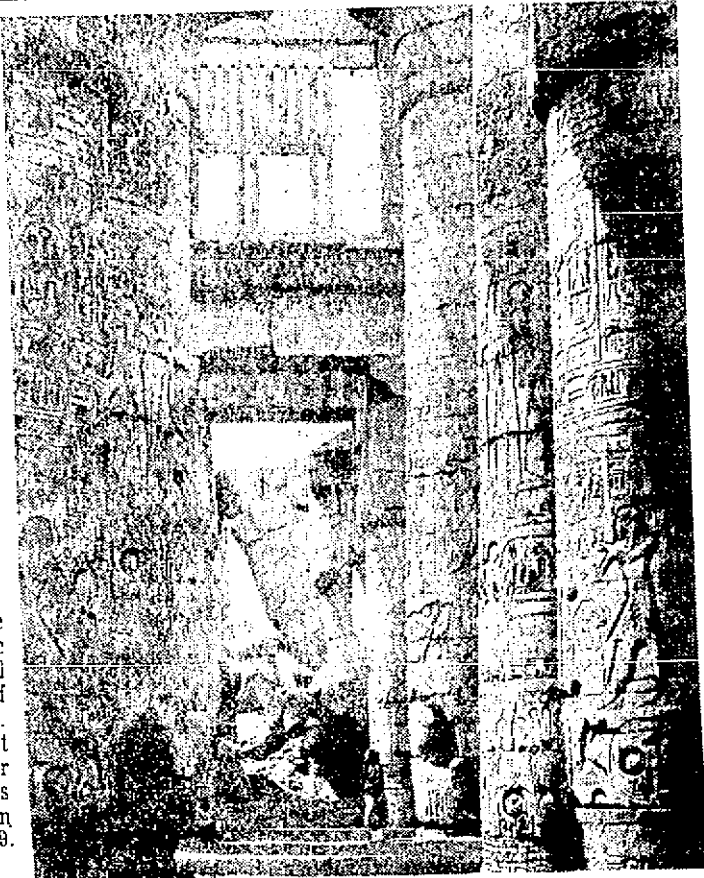

At Dana Library, 3680 Atlantic Ave., Jerrie Smiley is showing watercolors. Hours are noon to 9

IN 1926 this Sphinx Realty building reflected influence of the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb. The real estate office was in Los Angeles on Fairfax near the Hollywood Hills.

The shows, which opened Saturday, will remain through Nov. 27.

Allen directs 'Messiah'

Frank Allen will conduct the Cathedral Choir and soloists in Handel's "Messiah" next Sunday at 4 p.m. in Covenant Presbyterian Church, 607 E. Third St. Organist Darrell Orwig and an orchestra will accompany.

Guest singers will be sopranos Charlene Caddick and Joy Robbins, mezzo-soprano Iris Eshelman, tenor Alan Caddick and bass Harry Rankin.

Although there will be no admission charge, a free-will offering will be received.

New voice in oratorio

Mezzo-soprano Claudine Carlson will sing in Los Angeles Philharmonic's performances of Berlioz' "The Childhood of Christ" Dec. 21, 22 and 23 at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Center Pavilion.

She will replace Frederica von Stade who will not fulfill any engagements during December while she awaits the birth of her child.

Andrew Davis, music director/conductor of the Toronto Symphony, will be on the podium. Other singers will be tenor Seth McCoy, baritone Michael Devlin and Richard Stilwell, and the Los Angeles Master Chorus.

BORN IN FRANCE, Miss Carlson is a longtime resident of the United States who now lives in Los Angeles. She studied at the Manhattan School of Music and was coached by Jenny Turel. A frequent performer at both the Music Center and Hollywood Bowl, she has sung throughout North and South America, Europe and Japan under many of the world's major conductors including Abbado, Dorati, Gullini, Levine, Mehta and Ormandy and composers Aaron Copland and Gian Carlo Menotti. Menotti chose her to sing the role of Mrs. Nolan in his production and later recording of "The Medium."

Tickets may be purchased at the Music Center box office and Mutual ticket agencies.

Persons who wish to charge ticket orders to BankAmericard or Master Charge may phone (213) 972-7211.

Marionettes in 'Nutcracker'

The Bob Baker Marionettes will perform "The Nutcracker" in the Bob Baker Marionette Theater, 1345 W. First St., Los Angeles, daily during December and weekends through January.

The show will open Saturday with performances at 10 a.m., 1:30 and 4:30 p.m.; Sunday at 1:30 and 4:30 p.m.; and Monday through Friday at 10 a.m.

Based on Tchaikovsky's famous suite and first presented by the Marionettes in 1975, "The Nutcracker" is interpreted in a variety of musical styles from symphony to rock. More than 100 puppets are used in the production.

Birthdays will be honored at all performances and birthday and holiday parties in the theater's Party Patio may be arranged.

Admission is $2.50 for children, $3.50 for adults. The price includes refreshments and a tour of the studio where the puppets are designed and made. Early reservations are suggested.

Durants discuss 60 years of life, love, history

"Lucky the woman whose husband thinks that way," Ariel says.

Durant has been compared by his wife, and others, to Voltaire, an 18th century French writer and philosopher. He doesn't agree with that assessment, however.

"First of all, Voltaire was a great wit. There was something acid, almost sharp in him that I don't find in myself. I am very soft when it comes to things that touch the heart, like a mother holding her child, or a child saying his prayers. Voltaire was one of the greatest writers I ever read, but he wasn't the most brilliant."

Voltaire did serve as Durant's progenitor, however, in his emphasis upon using history as a tool to teach people about past civilizations to serve as models for the future.

"I had the idea of writing latitudinally, rather than longitudinally, so that readers could see an entire civilization, rather than just a small section of it. We can learn so much about our predecessors if we look at all the things that affected their lives — their culture, manners, dress, art, literature, religious beliefs."

RELIGION, AND its impact upon the history of the world, has always played more than a bit part in the Durants' historical dramas and has been the source of occasional verbal jousts.

"Remember the arguments we had about Dante," says Will. "I thought he was a thorough villain, putting all sorts of people in hell who were no worse than most of us. He was a specialist at hatred. I said, 'If that kind of man can get a beautiful woman to guide him through paradise, we'll all be saved.'"

"I disagreed," Ariel says, gesturing with her stick. "I said he was a poet, a man with great sensitivity who, when angered, fought back. So we let up on him a bit and allowed him to go to heaven after all."

Destined for the priesthood as a young child, Will rebelled early and became an atheist, breaking with his family in the process. Ariel, raised as a Russian Jew, was, as she calls herself, an anarchist, although she says she believed more in the "philosophy of anarchism, the freedom from restraint of the human spirit, the ability to differ and accept differences, rather than political anarchy which creates chaos."

Will has softened his views on religion considerably since those early days, he says.

"Let's face it — any person who holds the same views at 92 that he did at 22, 32, 52 or even 62, has not grown intellectually. I consider myself an agnostic. I don't know who is running the world, but I have the feeling there is something approaching intelligence. The human being has so many instincts — the urge to create, the ability to think and reason and feel. I can't think of the universe as a machine."

Once, in a long-ago debate between Will and the Durants' old friend, Clarence Darrow, Darrow played the devil's advocate, asserting that there was nothing in the make-up of a human being which couldn't be explained by chemistry.

"I disagreed heartily with him," says Will. "Although I don't think Darrow really believed what he was saying, he gave his life defending lost causes and people who were down and out. Once, after a similar debate, Ariel and I offered to take him back to his hotel."

"People were milling around, wanting to talk to him and he said, 'No, I'll just stay here and talk to them. I belong to them, you know.'"

WILL SAYS he believes religion has been, throughout history, the glue which has held civilization together. The recent proliferation of crime and chaos is, he says, the result of our losing the moral structure once provided by the church.

"Throughout history, religion has always created and encouraged morality by giving people an omnipotent, judgemental God. This view of the world has changed in recent years, partly because of scientific research and partly because of industrialization. On the farm there were incentives to pray and families were together."

Another recurring theme throughout the Durants' works has been the balance between liberty and order, restraint and chaos.

"America is currently in the same state that Greece was in about 200 B.C., when the gods ceased to be gods and became poets and ceased to exercise authority over human affairs," Will says. "We are today in a period of excess, where restraints have been lifted in favor of freedom."

"Liberty is a child of order. When it ceases to be a child of order, it creates disorder — there's a mouthful."

The men who created the United States and the Constitution were aware of this, he says. They were an aristocracy who realized that laws were necessary, although laws go against the grain of human nature.

ARIEL HAS STRONG views on the place of women in the scheme of history, as well as the women's movement and its impact upon the future.

"There have always been great women in history," she says. "And the greatest didn't rely on movements. In Europe of the 18th and 19th century, much of the essential education depended upon women."

"The famous salons were run by women who had men as their students — mostly politicians and great writers. Men were the wild ones, they didn't bother about manners and morals."

Ariel says she learned her "passion for ideas and love of books" from her mother — a woman "far ahead of her time."

"In the early 1800s she used to drag us to lectures. We heard Emma Goldman and Margaret Sanger and other radicals. When I was very young, she moved out of our house and took up a separate residence. She believed that since she made her own living she was entitled to do her own thinking."

The dual autobiography which was recently published is, according to the Durants, their last work.

It has taken them approximately six years to research and write — in longhand — each of their volumes. Their daughter, Ethel, typed the final manuscripts, which were then edited and revised by Ariel.

Both now say they would like to be free to spend time to relax and read without researching and studying.

ARIEL, AT 79, 13 years younger than her husband, says she will "devour history and biographies. I don't like novels. I'm too much of a realist — and reality is novel, unique and deep enough."

Will says he is "free from pain and would like to spend my few remaining years reading and tinkering around the house."

Sturdy and agile, the couple walk several times daily around their three-acre estate.

Will spends part of each day weeding and chopping wood. They share their home with a variety of wild animals, including a deer who appears outside the dining room window at mealtime.

A flock of birds flies past the study window each afternoon, waiting for Will to walk down the narrow path to an unused tennis court and toss them some food.

The Durants say they are pleased by the reception their new book has gotten and honored by the plaudits of their friends and readers.

"All in all, despite some stimulating setbacks," says Ariel, "we have been among fortune's favorites. Once again, probably for the last time, we bid our readers a grateful goodbye. But we are not really leaving them. They can always find us between the covers of our books."

From race cars to delicate surgery

challenging because it is in a constant state of change.

"We're looking for the ultimate lens," she says.

Her goal is to keep on practicing ophthalmology. "I can see myself practicing at 80," she says.

She likes adventure.

For example, she says, she spent two years as a general medical officer in the U.S. Army in Japan. She served in a 1,000-bed evacuation hospital during the Vietnam conflict.

She raced cars professionally on the East Coast. The car was a Lotus 7, she recalls.

She loves cars, and her conversation always comes back to them. "I like to feel the power," she explains.

OTHER INTERESTS:

"I paint. Impressionist."

"The office is my design. (Lots of colorful butterflies and lions.) The theme is a love story. It's the story of a lion who becomes miniature and falls in love with a butterfly. It's called 'Lion and Blue.'"

"Swimming. I swim every day."

"And there are moments I want to myself."

And times, too, she says when she likes to "talk to my plants."

She sums up:

"I'm always on the edge of excitement."

"I take a big step every so often."

"Such as fighting to get into medicine."

"Joining the service."

"Volunteering to serve on a surgical evacuation team."

"Exploring Asia. To India and Nepal to do some meditation."

"The excitement of having a bare canvas in front of me and not knowing what I was going to paint."

"The sound of the engine of a racing car."

"The concept of a foundation." She's working to set up an eye foundation in honor of her father.

The one thing Dr. Michelis likes to keep secret? Well, it's secret because she's afraid it might sound corny. She detests things corny.

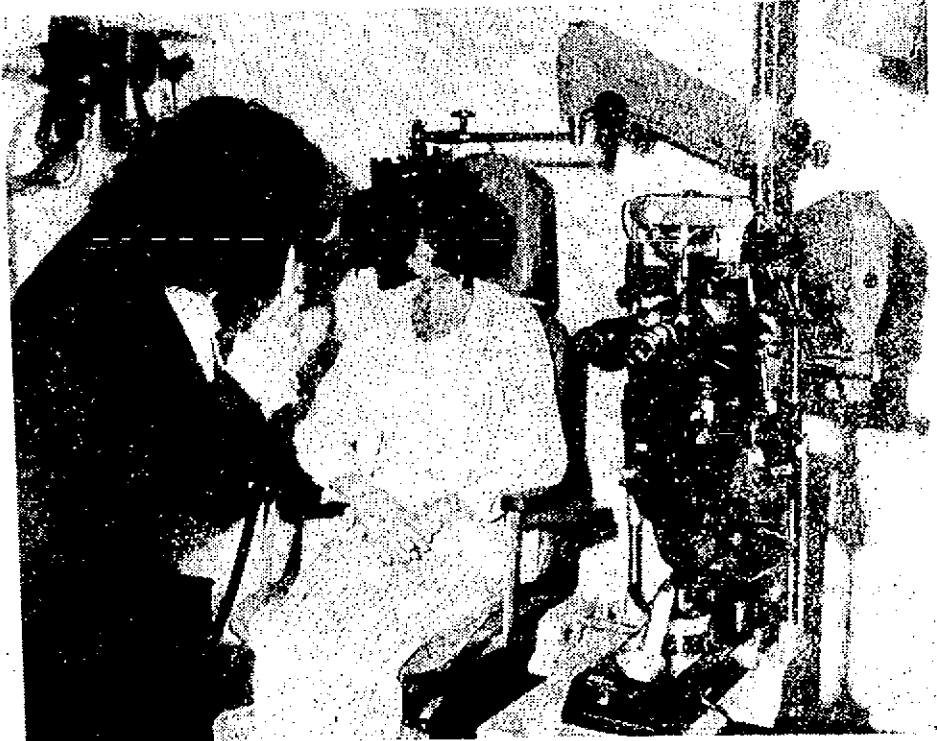

She finally admits:

"I take in stray animals. There are six cats and two dogs right now."

How does she explain this?

"They find me."

PROUD of her Citroen Masserati, Dr. Kay Michelis wipes license, which proclaims, "I DOK."

CHECKING PATIENT'S eyes in her Long Beach office, Dr. Michelis is one of the few women lens implant specialists in the country.

BILL SNODGRASS
A different kind of hot bread

SOME OF THE CUSTOMERS at Ken's Restaurant can tell at the first glance that the hot loaf of bread is different. Others don't know it's different until they taste it.

Still others — the minority who aren't bread-lovers — aren't aware that Ken's Restaurant recently changed its bread-baking recipe. For years, Ken's featured small individual loaves of standard white bread with its dinners. Now owner (and chef) Bill Snodgrass and his staff offer their customers something better and more costly to bake. It's sourdough bread, baked daily in Ken's kitchen, and brought to the table hot and fresh on boards. The aroma alone is inspiring.

Ken's has been a landmark at 3918 Long Beach Blvd. since the 1950s. When it opened, its modern designs were ahead of the times, which is why the restaurant always looks younger than its age. It is open for daily luncheons, serves breakfast Sunday mornings and offers dinner nightly except Mondays, when it's closed.

Bill, also known as Ken, has been at the restaurant since the early 1960s when he was manager. He took over as owner in 1965. His wife, Catherine, is part of the staff which includes attractive, courteous waitresses, hostesses, bartenders and kitchen experts. Many of the employees like the place so much that they've worked there for unusually long periods. Among those with from eight to more than 15 years' service are Gracie Davis, Anita Williams, Norma Ruzgis, Roosevelt Mattis, Leland Ledford, Kay Wilton and Ray Cather.

The dinners at Ken's are generous affairs, including — in addition to the loaf of hot bread — soup du jour or large salad, potatoes, bread, butter and dessert of sherbet, a small chocolate sundae or pudding. Fried chicken, featured every night for $3.50, is unusually popular. So are the big halibut steak, $5.10; pepper steak with a mild wine sauce, $5.25; a variety of other steaks, including chicken-fried steak, $3.75, and swordfish steak, $4.25. Once again Ken's has a good supply of premium swordfish, rated by some as the best of all fish entrees.

At dinner, Ken's also offers hot sandwiches, from $1.75; chicken salad, $2.15, and a splendid shrimp Louie salad, $4.75. The luncheons draw large numbers of executives, businessmen and other professional people who appreciate the good service as well as the fine food. Ken's luncheon system enables everyone to get in and out on time without the feeling of being rushed.

Ken's will be closed Thanksgiving Day.

WHAT'S A GOOD WAY to judge a restaurant? If there's a line of people waiting inside or outside, you can be pretty sure it's an outstanding place.

So that's why people don't mind waiting during the busiest times at the Seafood Broiler in Lakewood. Located on Candlewood Street just east of Lakewood Boulevard, the Seafood Broiler features charcoal-broiled seafoods which are so scrumptious (and sensibly priced) that the restaurant is one of the most popular in town.

Often there are crowds in the Broiler's waiting room as well as on the sidewalk near the front door. When they see the line, seafood devotees don't go away. Instead they go inside and give their name to the hostess. The Seafood Broiler has a large seating capacity, so the wait for a table is about 30 minutes even on the busiest weekend nights.

Many people don't like to wait. So they take manager Dave Christie's advice and visit the Broiler at less busy times. Today, for example, the Broiler will be its busiest from about 5:30 to 8 p.m. It will serve dinner from 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. So the best times to drop in will be between 11 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. and from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

Mondays and Tuesdays are often slow nights at the Broiler, so many people make it a point to dine there then. Others drop in for luncheon, served daily from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dave, who's been manager for over 18 months, is a cheerful, hard-working fellow who's proud of the FRESH (never frozen) entrees on his menu. These require special handling because they're shipped packed in ice. Currently the ling cod is extremely popular. It's a premium quality boneless whitefish flown here from Canada. Moist and firm, it charcoal-broils perfectly on the large broilers located behind glass in the dining room. The ling cod is $2.95 for luncheon, $4.25 for dinner.

Another fresh favorite is local white sea bass, $3.45 for luncheon, $4.85 for dinner. Also featured are Pacific red snapper, $2.75 for luncheon, $3.85 for dinner, and such delicacies as mahi mahi, combination fish kebabs, particularly nice shrimp from India, excellent swordfish, Chinook salmon, halibut, king crab, lobster and cracked, chilled Dungeness crab. An unusual entree is Korean mussels ($2.50 for luncheon, $3.50 for dinner) which resemble small oysters and taste like chicken livers.

The Broiler (which will be closed Thanksgiving) includes choice of three of the following on its dinners: green salad, coleslaw, cherry tomatoes, potatoes, rice or corn coblet. Five salad dressing choices are offered, including a diet bleu cheese.

Tip of Baja is living end of the peninsula

Cabo San Lucas, Mexico

"Poor Mexico," said President Porfirio Diaz, "so far from God, so near to the United States."

But that was long ago. We are at the tip of Baja California, the 1000-mile peninsula. It was so deserted and so poor for so many years neither Mexico City nor the United States paid much attention to it.

A few adventurers took 4-wheel drive cars over the spine-cracking dirt road that connected scrubby ranches and Mission ruins. Finally there was one hotel at the tip. We flew into La Paz. Ferried by creaky Douglas DC3 down to a dirt airstrip that ran like a cart road through thorny mesquite.

In the past three years, a miracle happened. Six luxury hotels spread across the blunt end of the land they call "End of the World." So we sit this morning on a breezy veranda drinking Mexican beer.

THE GRAY-GREEN desert ends at the white sand beach. The Sea of Cortez meets the Pacific. And there's nothing but sparkling blue water for 2,000 miles until you reach French Polynesia. Les-Isles-Sous-Le-Vent. "The-Islands-Under-The-Wind."

We're at the Hyatt Cabo, a chocolate-brown Moorish style hotel. (Average cost at all hotels seems to run $40 to $80 double with meals.)

A new jet airport is landing flights from the U.S. and Mexico.

A thousand miles of paved highway runs from San Diego to Cabo San Lucas. There's hundreds of miles of untouched beach to camp on. This is a last frontier.

Airlines: Mexicana, Aeromexico, Hughes Airwest. We came on Hughes Airwest, now running four flights a week.

Sports fishing brought the first Americans. The warm sea is loaded with game fish: Marlin go over 100 pounds. Sailfish. Tuna. Dorado. Rooster fish. Spanish mackerel. (Marinate it in lime juice, onions and hot sauce for delicious ceviche.)

THE LOCALS say: "When God saw Baja was so poor, He sent us the fish."

Baja has just been given a $77 million tourist development loan by the World Bank.

"So, soon the Cape will be wall-to-wall condominiums, I suppose," says an American who's been fishing down here for the past 10 years.

These are the regulars. They hate to see it change. (And so do I, I guess.) The long, lonely land. The fishing boat coming home in the sunset, a triumphant marlin pennant flying at the masthead. A moon like a slice of golden papaya rising from mainland Mexico.

There's a famous European chef who comes here for three months each year. Sits on a shady veranda and drinks martinis.

A millionaire Japanese — (he manufactures paper coffins) — comes three, sometimes four, times a year. Fishes off the rocks and makes his own sashimi.

THEY ALL know each other. A personal thing. A secret little club.

You can get a suite at the Hyatt Cabo for $188. Or a modest room in the village for $10. There's a taxi service. Telephone lines are in. (Three years ago we couldn't phone a hotel a mile away to find out what was on the dinner menu.)

Mexico City has discovered Baja. Most of the guests appear to be wealthy Mexicans. It's cheaper and less crowded than Acapulco or Puerto Vallarta. The water and beaches are cleaner.

The food is better — food was pretty awful in the first hotels. A hotel man said: "You see we can't get a chef to come here from Mexico City. So we pick up a ranch cook. He thinks what is good enough for a cowboy is good enough for a hotel guest."

Weather: 80 degrees with a cooling breeze off the Pacific.

Take a XXX beer can, pop the top. Squeeze lime juice in the rim and sprinkle it with salt. You'll always come back to Baja.

UNSPOILED beaches of Cabo San Lucas at the tip of Baja California are now within easy reach of the Southland via daily jet flights from Los Angeles. New luxury hotels make the living easy.

Buy now, fly now, and save

Penny-wise Traveler

Even though those cheap new no-reservations fares are only between New York and London, are they still an offer a Europe-bound traveler can't refuse?

Could be. At least for the first time ever there are major cuts in a trans-Atlantic fare for two types of travelers who've never breakfast) although they can brown-bag it.

AMENITIES: Contrary to some peoples' fears (and other peoples' hopes), Skytrain hasn't turned out to be a freak flight with orgies in the aisles, nor is it a stripped-down model of what everyone else has. All use roomy, wide-bodied planes with the exception of TWA, which has narrow-bodied 707s

BEST BETS: Skytrain guarantees to have 345 seats each day on flights in both directions. The others have varying allotments and systems that mean on some days and some flights there will be few or none.

However, all the airlines do oblige by giving at least some information on seat availability over the telephone, though so far Skytrain seems to be the easiest to get a handle on. It gives regularly updated taped reports on how many of the day's seats remain unsold to telephone callers in New York and London.

CONVENIENCE: The "doors open at 4 a.m." line that had some customers barreling out to airports or sales offices in the middle of the night has so far proved to be unnecessary. Latecomers have been getting on Skytrain and standby flights as easily as earlybirds. Holidays, of course, will bring a different story.

Skytrain gets my vote for using Gatwick Airport in England instead of Heathrow, as the others do. Gatwick isn't as immense as Heathrow, and scores as well by having a direct train connection (every 15 minutes) that gets passengers straight into Central London's Victoria Station.

Of course, for many travelers, any firm that lets you "walk on, walk off" with a sizeable price break is the great convenience since the hot comb — and never mind the details.

had them before from big name airlines. Namely one-way passengers and round-trippers who can't or won't tie themselves up in advance to a fixed schedule.

Now these customers get a break through "buy now, fly now" fares — you can't make reservations, you can only show up and hope there's a seat on the day you want to fly. If there isn't room some of the biggest outfits in the business will take you for as little as $145 New York — London, approximately $110 return which is almost $200 less each way than the regular $626 roundtrip coach fare.

Early on, of course, you get to make a major decision: Should you go with the price-busting "newcomer" and fly Freddie, share the air with "the world's most experienced airline," take the "on time" advertiser or none of the above?

FREDDIE LAKER'S Skytrain started it all and with Pan Am and TWA has certainly creamed the competition in the battle for publicity.

However, it's also useful to remember that there are other combatants in the great trans-Atlantic air war. British Airways, Air India, Iranian Airlines, and El Al are selling standby seats as well.

Naturally, it's to each his own winner, but if you're trying to handicap this race here's how things stack up:

PRICES: Laker is marginally ahead. Skytrain tickets are approximately $10 cheaper than the others in each direction, at $135 New York to London, approximately $105 return. Laker also has cheaper movies ($2 vs. the others' $2.50-$3) and cheaper drinks (50 cents vs. $1.00-$1.50).

On the other hand, the others offer free food whereas Skytrain customers have to pay extra ($3 for a hot or cold meal, $2 for a hot eggs and sausage doing three of its four daily flights.

BUT SKYTRAIN does offer slightly less legroom to most passengers. Whereas the others have a seat-back to seat-back measurement of 34 inches generally, Skytrain has 33 inches for 227 of its 345 seats — but 34 inches for 98 of them, and 35 or more for 20 (mostly those just behind the partitions separating the plane into sections).

If you care about "bonuses" no matter how small, note too that Pan Am and TWA offer a choice of two movies. The others struggle along with one.

Now look who's flying the fastest way to Australia.

PAN

Our 747 SP was specially designed to fly long distances without stopping.
So for people (or koala bears) who spend a lot of time in Australia, that means now they'll spend less time getting there.

We have 4

flights a week non-stop to Auckland, New Zealand and on to Sydney, Australia. If you want to go further in Australia, 2 times a week the flights continue on to Melbourne.

And when you want to get out from "down under," we have the only non-stop flights from New Zealand and Australia back to Los Angeles.

Also on all our flights to New Zealand and Australia you'll have a choice of entrees—from 4 in first class and from 2 in economy.

Those flying first class can enjoy the comforts of our upper-deck dining room. (Reserve a seat at a table when you make your flight reservations.)

And to make your trip seem even faster, after dinner you can take in a movie or sit back and listen to stereo music. (Headset $2.50 in economy.)

Once you arrive in Sydney or Melbourne, you can take advantage of our "Executive Express." Also available in many other cities throughout the Pacific, it was designed especially for the business traveler who wants the best in hotel comfort, value, and service. (That's why you get Inter-Continental* and Hilton International Hotels.) The value vouchers included in "Executive Express" entitle you to many extras from the hotels. Like preferred service and higher-priced rooms at a lower price. Also, complimentary extras such as breakfasts, welcome drinks, newspapers, secretarial services, valet services, plus much more.

So if you're planning to go to Australia, and want to go the fastest way, there's no need to look any further than Pan Am. After all, why take the longer way and have to, uh, bear it.

ARTISTS AND TOURISTS MINGLE IN MONTMARTRE.

Pinnacle of Paris has heavenly view

Story & Photo
By Herb Shannon
I.P.T. Travel Editor

PARIS, France — Good Americans go to Paris when they die, said the late Oscar Wilde, whose epigrams occasionally missed the mark. The smart ones come here before rigor mortis sets in.

Sooner or later, most of them congregate in the tiny, tree-shaded square at the top of Montmartre, the tallest hill in the city. There are more Americans to the square inch of Place du Tertre at any time during the tourist season than in Times Square on New Year's Eve.

They come to watch the artists working under the trees, sample the superb city scenery spread out below and have lunch in the terrace restaurants elbow to elbow around the square. But most of all they are drawn by the bulging domes and minarets of the Sacred Heart basilica, perched on the peak like a misplaced mosque.

Sacre-Coeur is the most visible church in Paris. It calls to pilgrims from the banks of the Seine, the observatory levels of the Eiffel Tower and the far reaches of the busy freeway leading to the Air France terminal at Charles de Gaulle Airport.

The pristine presence of Sacre-Coeur looming through the trees, the painters filling in their canvases and the panorama of Paris from the ends of lanes wandering away from the old Montmartre village square somehow reminded me it was lunch time. Many things, including hill-climbing, remind me of sitting down to eat.

THE SIDEWALK cafes around the park were monopolized by familiar figures. The front tables were a solid wall of denim costumes and California sport shirts I had seen earlier on the Champs-Elysees. On the way down the hill I pondered alternative luncheon locations. Place Pigalle or Rue des Abbesses?

Place Pigalle is entrancing by night when the Moulin Rouge swings its neon enticement to entertainment. But in harsh sunlight the charming can-can ambience turns honky-tonk. I chose the Auberge Montmartroise and found a vacant table among the 22 seating places on the ground floor.

I passed up chef Camille Chenu's escargots and coq au vin specialties for ### travel

THE WAY is steep from Place Pigalle at the foot of the mini-mountain. The winding cobbled streets leading to the promise of a peaceful Nirvana at the top offer a resting place midway in the climb. The trees and park benches of the triangular terrace conceal an entrance to the Abbesses station of the Metropolitan subway system.

If I had noticed that stop on the Metro map beforehand, I could have saved 50 percent of the depreciation on my new crepe soles on the way up. The map also indicated that the lower terminal of a funicular which could carry me the rest of the way to the top was located nearby in the Rue de Steinkerque.

I couldn't find the street, but I did spot a small restaurant with two sidewalk tables behind a low flower-decked wrought iron fence at No. 6 Rue des Abbesses. I kept L'Auberge Montmartroise in mind as I trudged on to join the throngs in the park above.

filet of sole and a glass of vin blanc. An aromatic dish drifted past on its way to another table. As I handed the menu back to the waitress, I added a small bowl of onion soup to the order.

The wife of the proprietor dispensed the wine from behind the bar and invited me to inspect the premises upstairs while her husband prepared my order. The reason for her pride was evident at first glance. The banquet room would have done justice to a palace. Every one of the 24 chairs was a genuine antique.

The soup and the fish arrived simultaneously. Crusty cheese overflowing the bowl was two inches deep. My only mistake of the day was in ordering two meals for lunch. I couldn't finish the pommes frites that came with the fish.

Concorde to Paris

Air France will inaugurate daily New York-Paris-Concorde supersonic service on Tuesday.

The 3½-hour transatlantic flight, half the duration of the crossing in standard subsonic aircraft, will leave the Air France terminal at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York at 10:30 a.m. daily, arriving at Charles de Gaulle Airport in Paris at 8 p.m.

Westbound flights will depart Paris at 11 a.m. and pass through five time zones to arrive in New York at 8:30 a.m. the same day.

The Concorde's 1,300-mile-an-hour cruising speed at Mach 2 enables it to outrun the sun on the westbound flights. Mach 2 is twice the speed of sound.

Speedy baggage handling and passenger departure and arrival processing is given in special Air France lounges at both ends of the Concorde flights. The one-way fare is $821.

Dear Abby Tipping system is under fire

DEAR ABBY: You have always supported the tipping system, so let's hear what you have to say about the enclosed editorial from the Eugene (Ore.) Register Guard:

"Tipping should be done away with. Period. As it's practiced today, tipping is meaningless. Instead of being gratuities tendered in recognition for special service, tips have become built-in costs for those who give them and just another part of regular income for those who get them."

"The Internal Revenue Service recognizes this and requires waitresses, cabbies, hairdressers and all other steady tip receivers to report them as such. But it would be better all around if base prices for personal services were simply increased to provide adequate salaries or commissions for service personnel."

"Consider, for example, how ludicrous it is for a number of Miami hotels to be losing the business of thousands of winter vacationers because of a union-management squabble over mandatory tips for room maids. The maids probably do need tip income, and deserve it as much as bellhops, cocktail waitresses or others who come in contact with tip givers more often."

"But why shouldn't the hotels quit arguing about billing guests specifically for the maids' tips and other employee gratuities, boost their room and board charges a bit and pay all of their employees adequate salaries? For the guests this would be simpler and no more costly in the long run. And for most employees it would be fairer."

"The way things are, some maitre d's get rich while the kitchen help get leftovers. Obligatory or not, tips seldom reflect anything but irrationally distributed extra consumer costs. The laborer either is worthy of his hire or he isn't. And he shouldn't have to demean himself pleading for alms." — ROSEBURG READER

DEAR READER: It makes a lot of sense to me.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago a bachelor signed SINGLE SIMON wrote to say that he resented being invited to a dinner party where the hostess matched him up with an unattached lady. He said he always felt like a fifth wheel, and the dateless woman shared his embarrassment.

In your reply you said, "I'd like to see the dateless woman who'd feel embarrassed to find her dinner companion a reasonably attractive, well-mannered bachelor."

Well, Abby, you're hearing from one, and there are a lot more of us.

When I am invited somewhere, either I come alone or I bring my own date. I don't need a match-making "yenta" fixing me up with an escort. Gigolos get paid for doing that sort of thing. — INDEPENDENT IN WINONA, IND.

DEAR IND.: You're entitled to speak for yourself, but most single women I hear from are delighted to have their hostess provide an escort.

L.B.'s No.1 private eye—Frank Shaw

He's no Philip Marlowe, but he fits the pattern

"I need a man good-looking enough to pick up a dame who has a sense of class, but he's got to be tough enough to swap punches with a power shovel. I need a guy who can act like a bar lizard and back chat like Fred Allen, only better, and get hit on the head with a beer truck and think some cutie in the legline topped him with a breadstick."

"It's a cinch," I said. "You need the New York Yankees, Robert, Donal and the Yacht Club Boys."

"You might do," Anna said. . . . Philip Marlowe & client in "Trouble Is My Business" by Raymond Chandler

By Dennis McDougal
Staff Writer

Raymond Chandler, former Signal Hill oil executive, was, of course, the man credited with creating an American folk hero second only to the Cowboy and Moby Dick.

It's been over 18 years since Chandler cashed in. It wasn't the way we'd imagine private eye Philip Marlowe went to the grave, sneering while seven hoods thumped his smart mouth into the gutter outside an Anaheim Street bar.

Chandler succumbed quietly at age 70, and it wasn't even in a sleazy pool hall. His long, restless life ended inside the walls of his posh La Jolla home, far from the seedy world he both copied and created out of the very raw materials of downtown Hollywood, Los Angeles and Long Beach.

Those who read his biography can't resist being just a little disappointed. Until his 44th birthday — well past the prime of a cigarette-chewing dick the likes of Marlowe — Chandler was a sot, masquerading as a mentally-marooned executive for the South Basin Oil Co. It is to that august agency that Southland residents today owe the great view to be had from Signal Hill through a mesh of eternally whirring wells.

In 1932, Chandler's eccentricities and brooding boozing were no longer tolerable to his fellow oil barons and he was discharged.

Only then, when he was appropriately as down and out as his fictional persona, did he turn to the typewriter and commemorate for all time the weirdest gang of supporting-role characters to Marlowe's starring mouthy decadence since Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey's shutdown its sideshow.

Chandler himself, according to his biography, was never quite so strange.

The one time he came closest to being a character in his own novels occurred four years before his death when he tried to commit suicide a la Freddie Prinze. As it turned out, the ammunition was wet and, by the time La Jolla police arrived, he still hadn't been able to get the slugs out of the gun barrel and into his occipital lobe. He wound up in a psychiatric ward briefly and spent the remainder of his days wandering absently through Europe.

"The irony," observed journalist Tom Cullen at the time, "is that Chandler is the reverse of Philip Marlowe, the hard-boiled detective he created. Marlowe is tough, hard-hitting, fast-talking; Chandler is sensitive, tender, hating all forms of violence and cruelty."

So Marlowe was make-believe and none his ilk shall be found today.

It was late afternoon when I got back. . . . The clerk handed me a slip which read: "Please phone Frank as soon as possible." I went upstairs and drank some liquor that was in the bottom of a bottle. Then I phoned down for another pint, scraped my chin, changed clothes and looked up Frank's number in the book.

Philip Marlowe in "Finger Man" by Raymond Chandler

"This is Frank Shaw. Help you?"

FRANK SHAW
Private Eye

Frank Shaw is an ex-cop. He's never been an oil executive and his office is located on East Broadway in Long Beach — not Signal Hill, and not some three-floor scum-trap walk-up on Hollywood Boulevard.

Still, in many ways, Shaw Investigation and Security Inc. is about as close as any will come to finding Marlowe at work these days. For 10 years now, Shaw has lurked through midnight streets as a private investigator, sniffing around massage parlors and yacht parties in the romantic tradition, always packing his .357-magnum close by in case some punk gets the wrong idea.

Before Wayne and Arlene (his two children who are now aged 21 and 22, respectively) grew up, he used to take them with him on all-night stakeouts. The family that stakes together, stays together, he agrees, taking it back only after he remembers that he is now divorced.

"You wanna meet some where?" Shaw says over the phone. "How'll I know you?"

The only description of himself that Shaw offers is that he wears a bullet-proof vest.

"I don't go to sleazy bars much anymore. Let's meet at Denny's over on Sixth Street. I don't have much time. Let's make it 3:15 p.m. Show me some ID when I get there."

AT 3:15 P.M., the only Denny's customer who looks like he might be a modern-day Marlowe is a gruff looking man lipping on yet another Camel while he rakes his eyes over the Daily Racing Form in a rear booth.

No, he says with a surprisingly authentic Bogart lisp, he is not Shaw. Moments later he stands, pays his bill and leaves in a plumb-ing supply truck.

At 3:20 p.m., another likely Marlowe walks in, stroking an obviously false mustache and scratching at a hollow-sounding chest — the bullet-proof vest.

No, his name is not Frank, he says, stroking at the mustache which, at second glance, does appear to be authentic after all. The name's Fred, he says. Fred is a member of the Universal Life Church and wonders if anyone would be interested in buying some handmade artificial flowers. Fred is asked to leave the coffee shop.

At 3:30 p.m., a great fuzzy man wearing an open front terrycloth T-shirt and a golden Scorpio astrological sign around his neck approaches. He has the slightest paunch and wire-rimmed glasses. His fingers sparkle with manicured shine and silvery diamond-studded rings. He looks like Grizzly Adams, but there is no bear by his side . . . only a classy tomato.

Anti-kidnap driving is tricky, fast

'Lesson' covered by TV, chauffeurs

By Bob Keefer
Staff Writer

The burly man in the small red car wasn't cut out to be a kidnaper.

After a 5-minute Starsky and Hutch-style chase over deserted roads and past nervous bystanders, he still hadn't been able to cut off and stop the chauffeured Continental containing his intended victim.

Every time the limo seemed caught, its driver pulled another stunt — like a 180-degree, tire-spinning turn that would leave the pursuer far behind.

RON SOUTHERN LEADS CAREENING CHASE IN SIMULATED KIDNAP ATTEMPT

After half a dozen such encounters, the two drivers pulled up alongside each other, got out of their cars and shook hands.

"I guess I taught him too well," laughed Bob Bondurant, the "terrorist" who couldn't catch his victim.

Former race driver Bondurant and his associate Ron Southern, driver of the elusive Continental, were demonstrating Bondurant's "anti-terrorist, anti-kidnaping" driving technique to members of the press, police officers and several limousine service chauffeurs at a police driver training track on Terminal Island.

Though billed as a "lesson" for drivers who someday might have to escape a determined high-speed pursuer, the demonstration proved more of a media event, as television camera crews waited in line for the opportunity to film the chase — repeated several times — from inside one or the other car.

It might also have been considered an advertisement for Bondurant's high-performance driving school in Sonoma, where he offers chauffeurs and drivers a four-day, $1,000 course in driving tactics to escape terrorists.

Bondurant told newsmen he developed the program 3½ years ago in response to requests from an oil company.

It combines elements of race, stunt and police pursuit driving. Bondurant said, and teaches "everything but fender-to-fender contact — that's too expensive."

Drivers who attended the demonstration watched with interest, though none seemed terribly worried about terrorists and kidnappers.

"I want to see what the other guy might do in a pursuit," one Long Beach police officer said.

BOB BONDURANT
—Staff Photos by ROGER COAR

"It's very germane," said Tom Payne, a Los Angeles chauffeur, who noted the large number of kidnappings and assassinations reported in Europe.

Neither Payne nor any of the other chauffeurs attending the demonstration had ever been involved in a kidnapping attempt, however.

Has the method ever been put to the test?

"Not by terrorists. We've had some students later involved in chases — but they were chased by . . . dissenters, you might say," Southern answered cryptically.

Middle years mean a crisis for many men

By Dick Howland
Staff Writer

A study of bus and cab drivers in Japan showed recently that men drivers were having more accidents at certain times of the month, when a bugged fender meant nothing to them.

The cab companies took the men out of the cabs at this time of month and reduced the number of accidents substantially, according to Dr. Edmond C. Hallberg, coordinator of midlife counseling programs at Cal State Los Angeles.

"It appears that when the men were on the high cycle of their testosterone secretions, no one was going to beat them to the next intersection," Hallberg said. Air-liners are studying this effect on pilots, he added.

Males do have emotional cycles, much like females do. It's possible that hormonal secretions change from month to month, similar to menstrual cycles," Hallberg told a conference on midlife problems Saturday at Long Beach City College.

Men also experience life changes comparable to menopause in women, he said. About 85 percent of the problems that occur in midlife are the same for men and women, including psychosocial changes and hot flashes, Hallberg said.

A middle-aged man often begins suddenly to question himself: Who am I, where am I going, what is the meaning of life? These thoughts lead to bizarre behavior.

"One man I counseled was impotent one night and the next day he took up skydiving — a typical Freudian kind of reaction," Hallberg said. "Half of the Porsche drivers in Long Beach have got to be at least 45. You can judge a man's age by the size of the checks in his sports coat."

"A brilliant president of a medical technology firm who was 42 just got up and left his family to become a cook. There are probably more middle-aged men with season (skiing) tickets at Aspen, Colo., than any other age group."

"One woman called me two weeks ago," he continued. "She said her husband had menopause. She was acting as his junior psychiatrist instead of acting as a wife to him."

The woman told Hallberg her husband had been playing tennis with a 25-year-old woman. The two were having trouble finding courts to play on. He wanted to sleep at the young woman's house — on the couch — on Friday night so they could get up early Saturday and play tennis. She lived close to the courts.

"What do you think I should tell him?" the wife asked me," Hallberg related, his eyebrows raised incredulously.

He said that 10 years ago mid-life problems were basically unstudied, and there has not been a lot of research. Hallberg's ideas on the subject are based on research at Cal State Los Angeles with 130 men and also with about a hundred aerospace engineers whom he counseled in 1971 during the industry crash.

"Most of the aerospace guys had master's and doctor's degrees, and we concentrated on using career development tools to find new jobs for them. Our approach was to revamp their roles in the working world. It was very doubtful at that time whether the aerospace industry would ever recover," he said.

"But we missed the point. The issue was not new work, but: 'Who am I? I'm 45 years old, I trained myself to be an engineer, I came up during the Sputnik era when I was at the top of the heap in terms of professional life and all of a sudden I'm out of work.' Three years before, it had been the kind of industry in which you could get a higher paying job with one phone call."

"We learned that it's not true that by the time someone is 21 years old his personality is fixed, that he won't go through any more major psychological changes for the rest of his life, that he will retire, get his gold watch, and that will be the end of it."

On the contrary, men go through many changes in their life cycle, he said. This is particularly true in a very dynamic, changing society.

"We decided we didn't want to call it menopause so we called it metapause," Hallberg recalled.

He said "meta" means "after" — after youth in this case. As in metaphysics, it relates to "Who am I?", to personal identity. The pause in metapause relates to some of the thoughts that men have between 35 and 55, mainly between 35 and 40.

"For example," he said, "I'm driving on the freeway, and all of a sudden I think to myself: 'The kids don't need me anymore; I'm not going to become vice president or sales manager no matter how hard I try; I'm getting bald; I just don't feel like going to work today. It's not exactly that I need a vacation, but it's just not all there. The wind has gone out of me.'"

Or a middle-aged man might be more interested in his boss' secretary's legs than he is in the boss' income. There is a kind of regression, an escapism and a kind of "white knuckle behavior" that comes out after metathoughts. The second childhood may start coming out.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

A FRIEND of mine and yours needs help. You can give that help by calling the Memorial Hospital blood bank, 595-2431, Ext. 41, and offering a pint of blood for Bob Wells.

Bob, who wrote the "Wells Report" column in Southland Sunday Magazine and is a member of the journalism faculty at Long Beach State University, underwent stomach surgery last Friday morning. His case has required heavy withdrawals of blood from the hospital's bank. That blood must be replaced by volunteer donors, for it's a life line for Bob and all others served by the bank.

Bob Wells has given distinguished service to journalism as newspaperman and educator, although he probably would dismiss that compliment with a self-deprecating joke. But I know it's true. As a newsman closing in on 31 years in this business, I know a real professional when I see one. And so do my colleagues at the Independent Press-Telegram.

Bob Wells is a pro, as a writer, editor and teacher. I served as city editor of a staff peopled with Bob's former students at LBSU. They made my job easier. They reflected their teacher's high standards. They were pros taught by a pro.

I hope this column finds its way to Room 501 at Memorial Hospital. I hope the message it contains will speed a good friend on the road to recovery. I hope it will encourage I.P.-T. readers to write Bob and tell him they're pulling for him.

I hope we can give a good man blood and cheer and good health.

NEIGHBORS: There are fences in the backyards on the Los Altos street where I live, but they do not wall out neighborliness. It's there in a quiet way, taking care of all of us. I'm grateful for it.

When I went to the hospital the first calls my wife received were from our neighbors. They asked what they could do for her and the protection of our house. They pledged to keep an eye out for the property, a prayer out for me.

They bespoke their solicitude in cards, telephone calls and flowers, in smiles and words of cheer, in visits, in neighborliness. I want them to know how much we appreciated them and how fortunate we feel in living on their block.

Neighborliness doesn't appear on the progress chart outside a hospital patient's room, but it's very much a part of his recovery. It means so much to know that your loved ones are being watched over while you're gone, that friendly eyes are guarding your house, that prayers are being said for you, that so many people care.

I discovered that I live in a vast neighborhood, that no boundaries of humanity separate me from my neighbors in Lakewood, Los Alamitos, Huntington Beach, Seal Beach, San Pedro, Wilmington, Carson, Lynwood, Bellflower, Norwalk, Cerritos, Artesia, La Palma, Paramount. The postmarks on the cards and letters told me how big my neighborhood of friends is.

I read and reread every message. There were tears in my eyes and a catch in my voice when I passed them on to my wife. I felt humble, proud, overwhelmed, filled with gratitude for the blessings of love and friendship that had come my way.

Yes, I cried. But there was strength in those tears. I shed them without apology, unshamed of being a sentimentalist in a world where sentiment sometimes brings derision.

I think a man can cry with joy over the gifts of his neighbors and be no less a man. The gifts of hope and support I received from readers of "People Talk" sustained me when I needed them most.

I gave you my hand in friendship when I began this column in October 1974. And as the months passed you gave me your hand in common bond. The bond endures.

That's what hands are for — to serve, to minister, to help, to sustain. My hands are full, thanks to you. So is my heart.

HUNGER: Barbara Ambruster of the East Long Beach Neighborhood Center informs that the center will again open Thanksgiving Day to receive and distribute food donations to needy families in the community. Don't forget the hungry when you count your blessings Thursday.

If you have checks, staples, dry goods, canned goods to offer, take them to the center at 2338 E. Anaheim St., or call Bea Aragon at 433-5761.

There is a need for your help. I've seen hunger close up in Long Beach, and long ago when I was a child I felt its pangs. It hurts. I remember.

THE LIONS' DEN

Editorials

Two views of Russia

It is unfortunate that the militant Jewish Defense League has brought physical confrontation to the Soviet National Exhibition now under way in the Los Angeles Convention Center.

Unfortunately, because it might keep away some potential visitors from the concurrent Los Angeles Jewish Federation Council's exhibit, "Soviet Jewry: Six Decades of Oppression."

That would indeed be a loss because, as Burton Levinson, chairman of the Commission on Soviet Jewry in Los Angeles, said, no Jewish community "has ever been given such an opportunity" for peaceful protest.

THE JEWISH COUNCIL'S display, although put together on a shoestring compared to the state-financed Soviet show, is a much more dramatic and emotional protest than that of the JDL.

The $2-million Soviet salute to USSR achievements in the fields of science, industry, technology and education in the 60 years since the 1917 revolution is downstairs in the main hall of the Convention Center.

The Jewish exhibit, upstairs in Room 214, cost only $50,000 and tells some of the things about life in Russia that the glittering display downstairs ignores. Through photographs, historical data and works of art, it depicts the brutal religious and political persecution of Jews in Russia.

Tonight, the Long Beach Jewish Community Federation will present a special program at the Los Angeles exhibit. It will include the screening of "Out of Bondage," with Theodore Bikel, and a discussion with Janice Kamenir-Reznik, director of the Commission on Soviet Jewry.

THE LOCAL delegation, which will leave the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave., at 6:30 p.m. to travel to the Los Angeles Convention Center by bus, also will tour the Soviet trade fair.

A Long Beach spokesman said the Jewish community was not discouraging people from attending the USSR show, but sees its own exhibit as "an excellent opportunity to educate the community at large on the other side of life in the Soviet Union."

Both the Soviet and Jewish exhibits are free and open to the public daily from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. through Nov. 29. There is much to be learned from both, and they are well worth the trip to Los Angeles.

Too many people

It was just 10 years ago today that the United States became the fourth nation on earth to reach a population of 200 million, trailing China, India and the Soviet Union.

That figure now stands at more than 216 million. Our population increased 2.4 million during 1976 — half due to births in excess of deaths and the other half to legal and illegal immigration in excess of emigration.

AT CURRENT RATES, the U.S. will add another 107 million people in the next 50 years!

Why is this important? Because it means more pollution, less arable land, continued high unemployment, increased shortages of energy and resources, and further deterioration of the environment.

We agree with Zero Population Growth, Inc., that the United States should establish a population policy. As ZPG puts it:

"The question is not how many people we can crowd into a given city or state, but how many people our nation can support in the long term at a reasonable standard of living and at an acceptable quality of life."

At the core of the problem is the necessity for the nation to take positive steps to encourage a reduction in the growth rate. At the very least, this should include such things as universal access to information and services on contraception, reduction of immigration quotas and elimination of illegal immigration, and nationwide educational programs in family planning.

The United States, with 5 percent of the world's population, already consumes one-third of its energy and non-reproducible resources.

THE 1974 WORLD Population Plan of Action called for all nations to adopt population policies, and 34 countries have done so. The United States approved the 1974 plan and has been a leader in advocating world population stabilization.

It has been the largest funder of international family planning programs. But it still has no national population policy and gives low priority to any programs to curb the upward spiral of growth.

How much is too much?

Partisan use of public money

SACRAMENTO — Legislators pay taxes just like the rest of us, so when a complaint is made that Assembly and Senate members are playing fast and loose with public funds, it's the same as saying they're taking money from their pockets and throwing it into the air.

No ordinary, intelligent person is going to do that. Yet, when an ordinary, intelligent person is elected to public office, funny things start happening to his or her head. The legislator allows uses to be made of public money the citizen would object to.

And legislator and citizen are one and the same person.

Example: The state's Fair Political Practices Commission has filed a lawsuit against Democratic Assemblyman Tom Sutt of Indian Wells, alleging he and his re-election campaign committee failed to report a contribution last year.

THE CONTRIBUTION, the suit charges, was six days of labor donated, in effect, by California taxpayers. Including Republican California taxpayers.

Michael O'Key, a member of the staff of Assembly Democratic Caucus Chairman Julian Dixon, is supposed to have worked on Sutt's campaign on days he was drawing a salary from the Legislature.

Sutt's response is that O'Key did work for his campaign, but on his own time. In each of the two separate weeks involved, Sutt says, O'Key put in his regular 40 hours for the Legislature.

If Sutt prevails, it will be because the letter of the law has not been violated, and in a lawsuit, adherence to the specific letter of the law is appropriate.

But there is a broader issue, too, involving the spirit of the laws dealing with uses to which public funds are put.

It is certainly an appropriate use of public money to provide the Legislature with expertise in each of the wide variety of issues with which it deals. There was a time when it didn't have such expertise, when it was forced to rely on governors and lobbyists for information and judgments on the consequence of proposed legislation.

FORMER ASSEMBLY Speaker Jesse Urruh introduced the concept of professional consulting staffs some 15 years ago, and this is how that concept has been developed:

Each committee in the Senate and Assembly has its own consultant, and some have more than one.

There is a Senate Office of Research, with 11 professionals and a clerical staff of two. There is a Senate Majority Caucus staff of seven professionals and a clerical staff of two, a Minority Caucus staff of six professionals and two secretaries. Student interns add to each work force.

In addition, the majority and minority floor leaders have extra staff and the two caucus chairmen have extra staff.

In the Assembly, where the idea started, the numbers are startling.

There is an Assembly Office of Research with 23 consultants and an administrative staff of nine. There is the Assembly Majority Caucus staff with 19 professionals and six secretaries and clerks and a Minority Caucus staff of the same size.

Again, additionally, the floor leaders and caucus chairmen get additional aides. And there are student interns.

That all adds up to a significant portion of the nearly $60 million taxpayers will spend this fiscal year to operate the two houses.

In return for that significant portion of $60 million, the public can be assured that each bill introduced is analyzed exhaustively, from an objective point of view and, separately, from each of the two partisan points of view.

View From Our State Bureau

Other services performed include the writing of speeches and press releases and the maintaining of news-clip files on issues and individuals important to each member. There is available a research source to examine public needs and the capacity of existing services to meet those needs, and to recommend new ways if existing services are inadequate.

Constituents are served by all this, and so legitimate legislative needs are met. Some of the work done to meet legitimate legislative needs also can be used for partisan purposes, of course, and it can be argued that those purposes are not beyond an appropriate use of public funds.

If a legislator uses part of his time helping other citizens who think as he does get elected, that is a service beneficial to the people who voted for him, isn't it? And can't that be extended, to a degree, to the employee of the Legislature?

The line between legitimate legislative activity and clearly partisan activity is, simply, indistinct. It probably cannot be made distinct. But there is a measuring device of how much is too much.

IT IS AN inappropriate use of public funds for a legislative staffer to work on a bipartisan campaign on company time. It is not an inappropriate use of public funds, or, rather, not contrary to the letter of the law, for a legislative staffer to spend 22 months acquainting himself with the issues in a particular Assembly district, with the strengths and weaknesses of the incumbent and his potential rivals, and acquiring a political sophistication — all while on the public payroll — which he can then put to use on behalf of the incumbent during a two-month-long campaign while he takes a leave of absence from the Legislature.

That is the present practice. Both parties use it.

The measuring device to help legislators determine how much is too much is simply for them to remember that they're citizens, too. At what point would they, as citizens, object. That's where they should stop.

Employment bill said only 'get-well card'

by Richard L. Worsnop
Editorial Research Reports

Article 40 of the Soviet constitution states, "Citizens of the USSR shall have the right to work." The U.S. Constitution makes no such guarantee, and efforts by Congress to legislate one have so far been unavailing.

The Humphrey-Hawkins full-employment bill, in its present form, is the latest case in point.

As originally introduced by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., in 1974, the bill directed the federal government to coordinate monetary and fiscal policies to reach a goal of 3 percent unemployment in the adult work force — or 4 percent overall — within 18 months.

IT ALSO CALLED for the use of a wide variety of federally financed job programs to reach that target. And, as a last resort, the federal government was expected to provide a low-paying job to any unemployed adult who wanted one.

The first draft of Humphrey-Hawkins got nowhere, so the sponsors introduced a revised version in 1976. The deadline for achieving a 3 percent adult unemployment rate was extended to four years. Moreover, the revised version eliminated a provision that would have given individuals the right to sue to obtain a job. Even with these changes, the bill failed to reach the floor of either house of Congress for a vote last year.

Now, still another Humphrey-Hawkins bill is in the works, and President Carter endorsed it Nov. 14. The goal of 3 percent adult unemployment remains intact, but one more year has been added to the target date.

In general, the bill sets as a national aim "the fulfillment of the right of all Americans able, willing and seeking to work full opportunities for useful paid employment at fair rates of compensation."

The trouble is that the bill, unlike its predecessors, offers no specific programs to provide jobs. For this reason, it has been criticized as essentially meaningless — "a mandate without a method," as The New York Times put it Nov. 11, or "a get-well card for the American economy," in the words of the Washington Post.

The watering-down of Humphrey-Hawkins calls to mind what happened to the historic Employment Act of 1946 on its way through Congress. The original bill would have established "full employment" as the declared policy of government. It would also have put the government on record for the first time as "assuring" that a job would be available to anyone who was capable or desirous of holding one.

THE BILL PASSED the Senate in this form, but was greatly modified by the more conservative House. The compromise bill that came out of a House-Senate conference was so far removed from the original that a leader of the opposition, Senator Robert A. Taft, R-Ohio, assured his fellow conservatives they should have no qualms about voting for it.

Thus, the bill that President Truman signed into law merely established a national policy of achieving "useful employment opportunities" for all persons "able, willing and seeking to work." Taft's dismissal of it as "no full-employment bill" may have been overstated. But the Humphrey-Hawkins bill as it now stands seems only marginally more ambitious.

Controls over research?

Congress moves warily on DNA

WASHINGTON — Now and then, contrary to what you may cynically assume, Congress does a good job. It is doing a good job now in coping with a legislative problem that is complicated beyond the ordinary layman's understanding. This is the problem of recombinant DNA research.

How is Congress coping with the problem? In terms of substantive legislation, Congress is doing nothing at all about the problem. And as it happens, this is precisely what the Congress ought to be doing. If ever there were a time for making haste slowly, this is such a time.

The scientists now engaged in DNA research have entered a field at once fascinating and terrifying. They have unlocked gates that once seem impenetrable. Timidly or boldly, as the case may be, they have begun to explore the mysteries of genetic reproduction. By splicing together microscopic particles of deoxyribonucleic acid, the active material in the genes of all living things, they are learning to fashion new forms of living matter.

EXCEPT IN THE most extravagant view, this is not "playing God." The talk of cloning identical copies of human beings is still in the realm of science fiction. Nevertheless, it is generally acknowledged that DNA research carries not only a possibility of great good but also the risk of disastrous harm. After nearly a quarter century of tentative forays into pure research, opportunities for applied research suddenly are expanding.

In such a situation, it is altogether understandable that a cry would be heard: There ought to be a law! A Senate subcommittee last week heard that demand. A number of environmentalists called for strict federal regulation of all DNA recombinant research, whether in government laboratories or in private industry. Marcia J. Cleveland, speaking for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said that genetic engineering ranks with nuclear power in its potential danger and ought therefore to be kept under careful federal control.

On the other side of the argument were scientists who warned the Senate subcommittee of the dangers of needless or premature regulation. The coolest of these was Dr. Philip Handler, president of the National Academy of Sciences. His testimony was a model of reason and restraint. His chief concern was for the freedom of scientific inquiry.

"Hopefully," Dr. Handler said, "the day is past when anyone would seriously argue that the government should prohibit free expression of new ideas simply out of fear of the ideas themselves. Totalitarian governments may fear new ideas, even as they fear their own people.

"But... scientific inquiry has challenged the dogma of an authoritarian world for the last 400 years; it has freed men's minds as it has eased their toil. After two centuries of science, it was Thomas Jefferson who said, 'There is no truth on earth that I fear to be known.' And I hold that it must certainly be more dangerous to live in ignorance than to live with knowledge."

That is the sound view of recombinant DNA research. Let it go where it will go! But just as the First Amendment conveys no absolute freedom of speech, regardless of consequences, so a wise public policy should impose some restraints upon genetic research. Such restraints already operate, through guidelines of the National Institutes of Health and also through the government's power to award or to refuse research grants.

FOR THE TIME being, this is enough. There is a great temptation, considering the public's fear of the unknown, for politicians to rush up on the scene; they would save us from Frankenstein's monster. But the wise course — the courageous course — is to impose the fewest possible restraints consistent with the true public peril. Evidently this is the course Sen. Adlai Stevenson will recommend. His subcommittee heard 30 witnesses, pro and con, and then postponed action until next year, or perhaps the year after that.

This was exactly in line with Dr. Handler's advice. "Do be very careful," he urged. "An excess of zeal to protect us against all risks, however minor, particularly when seen against the backdrop of our chancy world, could seriously cripple science, the principal tool our civilization has fashioned to mitigate the condition of man."

President recalls his religious upbringing, what it means to him

WASHINGTON — A windstorm of criticism has been swirling around the White House lately. But in the eye of the storm, President Carter remains calm and confident.

Occasionally, he betrays his emotions. He will become suddenly quiet and cold, a hard glint will appear in his eyes and a muscle in his jaw will begin to twitch. But most of the time, he shows no sign that he is disturbed by the unfavorable winds.

Carter draws sustenance in times of stress from his strong religious faith. He often offers silent prayers at his desk. "Not aloud so other people will hear me," he told us. "I pray privately, and I do it several times a day."

The president and first lady also read together from the Bible each night. "I changed from reading a chapter in the Bible every night in English to reading one in Spanish," he said. "Early this Spring, my wife began to take Spanish lessons. So now one night she reads a chapter, and the next night I read a chapter."

"This is something that has meant a lot to us both. I am now going through the New Testament for the third time. And when we get through this time, we are going to start through the Old Testament."

The Carters also discuss the spiritual message they get from their Bible reading. "We do this the last thing every night, and we never miss," said the president. "It is something that we kind of look forward to now."

In the ambivalent, convivial, permissive atmosphere of Washington, this unabashed, born-again Baptist is still regarded with some trepidation. He tends to wax effusive about the Holy Spirit rather than the more traditional objects of Democratic veneration such as the evisceration of Wall Street and the redistribution of income.

The party professionals would be more comfortable if they thought his moralizing was pure political rhetoric. But they are beginning to suspect that he really hopes to rescue the people from the mire of cynicism and restore the moral authority of the American government.

Certainly, there was a quiet conviction in his voice when he told us that he hopes to use his abilities "in the service of fellow human beings and in the service of God."

JIMMY CARTER recounted his religious upbringing. "I grew up in a family," he said, "where there was never any question on Sunday morning that we would go to Sunday School. I grew up as a Baptist, and most often when I was eight, nine, 10 years on up, I would go to what we call the Baptist Young People's Union on Sunday afternoon."

"Then on Friday nights, there would be a kind of social event sponsored by the church... where all the kids my age would bring — I think they called them pound parties; I haven't thought of them for years. Everyone would bring a pound of something to eat or to drink and we would play games and so forth. So the social center of my life as a child was our church."

As the president reminisced, he was relaxed and seemed to enjoy recalling events from a happy, Norman Rockwell-like boyhood. He followed the custom in his community of joining the Baptist church at about age 10, began teaching Sunday School as a 17-year-old midshipman at the Naval Academy and sought out a church to attend during his assignment to submarine duty.

"On Sunday morning," he said, "I would come in on a submarine, say at New London, and either go to the Protestant or Catholic service, whichever was earlier, so I could go home and spend the rest of the week with my wife."

He married his boyhood sweetheart, Rosalynn, when he graduated from Annapolis. After Carter's father died of cancer, Jimmy had a tough decision to make, and both religion and Rosalynn figured in making it.

"After some tortuous days," he later wrote, "I decided to resign from the Navy and come home to Plains — to a tiny town, a church, a farm, an uncertain income." It precipitated their first marital fight, since Rosalynn felt both mothers would interfere in her household. But he prevailed, and Plains has never been the same.

Once home, he told us, "I again became active in the church in Plains. I taught what we call a Junior Sunday School class and later became superintendent of that department. I became a deacon, and I became the chairman of the board of deacons."

THE PRESIDENT was obviously pleased with the memories that were now flooding back. "I was in charge of the Baptist Church equivalent of the Boy Scouts, called Royal Ambassadors, and was in charge of building a recreation center north of Plains for people to use in the church group from 34 different churches around that region. I have to say I was kind of proud of myself as a member of the church."

His pride was injured and his self-confidence shaken by his 1966 defeat for the governorship of Georgia. Contrary to published reports, he said, "I never did break down or weep or go into an emotional state."

But he began to ask himself questions: "What is my life? How well am I measuring up to my professed Christian beliefs? How much am I concerned about other people? How much do I think of myself? How do I treat the ones who love me most?"

Out of this came "a new awareness of what religious experience ought to mean," the president told us. "It became a more personal commitment, a much more profound experience."

"I was much more easy in my relationship with other people. I look successes or failures with a lot more equanimity. I began to have a sense in my life of a very much more clear perspective. I honestly began to understand other people's special needs more accurately and with a greater sense of concern that I had before."

As he sat in the Oval Office, Jimmy Carter seemed to radiate the self-confidence and peace of mind that comes from the experience known in evangelical circles as being "born again."

Health care costs

Your editorial, Nov. 13, "Nine cents for health," certainly deserves a better reply than these written thoughts.

The statement that Americans pay nine cents on the dollar for all medical, dental and hospital charges sounds to me rather wishful.

The subsequent ads by the four leading hospitals describing their remarkable services can't be questioned. And who can put a price tag on conquering an illness? These services are available partially for those on Medicare, perhaps free for those covered by Medi-Cal-Medicaid, many veterans and countless government workers — all paid by the taxpayers.

But millions of citizens have no medical insurance, which means a serious illness results in a tragedy financially. It costs more than $125 just to lie down on a hospital bed.

We already have socialized medicine, but not for everyone, even though we all pay for it.

Police priorities

It's 2 a.m. The town bars are letting out — the time of night when the drunk driving, assaults, robberies and, yes, even murders abound in the city of Long Beach. You call for a police car and you get, "Sorry, sir, you're on a low priority."

With all of these priorities, guess what the police are doing. Well, one car patrols the great high-crime area known as Belmont parking lot, shining their spotlights into every car, just generally to harass individuals — they probably haven't had a crime reported there in months.

And then let's not forget the three vice squad officers who now patrol the area known as the "Bluffs," catching "fruit flies."

Instead of indiscriminate harassment of selected minorities of society, the Police Department should exert its unified powers against the elements of victim crime. It's too bad they don't put these same police on foot patrol in areas where elderly men and women keep getting robbed and beaten up every day.

Money and politics

What ever happened to the days when the average man could run for public office without massive sums of money, big business and/or a political machine behind him?

As an average citizen of Cerritos, I have aspired to run for city councilman for some time. To that end I have spent many hours questioning friends, neighbors, associates and public officials as to my chances of waging an effective campaign and winning. In every case I was praised for my noble ambition but told I was wasting my time. Generally speaking, I have no "big money, special interest groups or large political organizations" to aid me in this endeavor. It matters little that I am intelligent, college educated, stable, capable and willing to serve my community as a councilman. What does matter is that I cannot afford the enormous amount of money required to run even a modest campaign. Nor do I have the contacts required to obtain such backing.

What can be done to resolve this situation? Nothing. Political campaigns are allowed to escalate with "big money" year after year until the average man does not have even the remotest chance of attempting, let alone winning an election. Instead, he is forced to give up the idea and fade back into that enigma known as the "silent majority." God knows how many good, highly qualified potential public leaders we lose because of this. The entire situation is a disgusting injustice to all of us.

Veterans Building

I would like to make one more plea in regards to saving our Veterans Memorial Building.

I sincerely hope the prayers of many people will be answered. Let us all get wise to ourselves and stop destroying things that are for the good of the people and our posterity.

The building is in good condition. The entire personnel are all very efficient, and it is a very respectable place for meetings and services.

Need I say more?

What's new is old

Clothing styles and their changes are accepted without much protest. One is advised, in so many words, that ties are getting narrower. I am aware of this. I rarely throw away old ties.

I stop short of maintaining an attic trunk of hand-me-downs from family roots. Yet, who is to know whether the old celluloid collar and attendant button will be considered avant-garde?

Space suits and other 21st century attire can wait. Paradox is paradise to the fashion arbiter. By the year 2000 we may be wearing cutaway jackets, striped pants and spats as "far out."

What is new is old. What is dull is bold. What is saved is best. Now I wear a vest. So be it!

Trash rate ripoff

When the Long Beach City Council adopted the new rubbish rates, I think they really did an injustice to residents.

First, it is highly inconceivable why an 85 percent hike is necessary. Think of it — 85 percent! How did the city ever manage before the increase?

Then, it is my understanding that Long Beach raised rates to be competitive with those of surrounding cities. Isn't this a bit like keeping up with the Joneses? Especially when two of the cities I checked have rates lower than the new Long Beach rates. Does the Long Beach taxpayer deserve to pay more just because City "X" taxpayers are paying more?

What a gyp to persons living in multi-dwelling units! It is just plain common sense that more trash — including trash, lawn trimmings, etc. — is generated by single-family dwellers than apartments. I imagine the city really rakes in the profit off large apartment complexes.

One other point: What about retired persons on a fixed income? Again, an 86 percent increase. What a ripoff! I'm sure next the Long Beach taxpayer will be hearing of an additional loss in the annual expense of the Queen Mary, or else the City Council will be getting a raise.

A true gentleman

In the midst of the crime and violence which is so prevalent in our daily news, a bright spot occurred Tuesday. Pat Dresden, bartender at the Los Alamitos Race Track, returned my lost wallet, intact.

He spent considerable time trying to reach me by phone, and refused a reward for the wallet's return.

My thanks to a true gentleman.

Taxes destroy incentive

From art to business to housing

by Don Shoemaker
Knight News Service

Several of us philosophers were sitting around the other day saving the world when the subject of housing came up, and with it the word "incentive."

Housing the poor and near-poor, to say nothing of the near-middle class, is difficult enough with public programs. Under private enterprise it's getting close to the impossible.

The tenants who don't own anything have little incentive to keep up the property. Landlords who risk rising assessments for tax purposes have little or no incentive to improve the property, and if they enlarged over-crowded apartments they would lose rentals.

So there's that word. The definition I like best is in the ever-lucid Oxford Dictionary:

"Something that arouses feeling, or incites to action; an exciting cause or motive; an incitement, provocation, spur." Such as "an incentive speech in the House of Lords," by one of them.

Look around, though, and there isn't much incentive left. Take taxes. Or, the tax take.

In Sweden, which invented the modern free lunch, well-paid employees in an auto factory were listless and doing shoddy work. In return for tender loving state care from the cradle to the grave they were paying 60 percent of their income. The story noted their lack of incentive.

It all began, of course, long ago. For an in-depth background, try Genesis: "Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part." Even in 700 B.C. that was 20 per cent, and just for starters.

Consider the last act of Pogo, that delightful little fellow who spoke so much wisdom through the cartoons of the late Walt Kelly. According to The Wall Street Journal, "Selby Kelly, widow of the Pogo creator, was almost wiped out after he died and the IRS swooped down."

As a result, other artists are destroying inventories of paintings rather than bankrupt their families through death duties.

SUPPOSE THAT Picasso, the Midas of the moderns, had lived in the United States. He hoarded 1,876 paintings, including some given him by fellow artists Matisse and Miro, 1,355 sculptures, 2,880 ceramics, more than 11,000 drawings and etchings, etc., to hear The Saturday Review tell it.

At his death this hoard, plus some cash, bonds and real estate, was worth

$250 million by official appraisal. Some field office of the IRS would have had its day. The French, fortunately for estate purposes, are more casual about taxes, although Louis XIV is supposed to have said, "L'etat, c'est moi."

Chief Justice John Marshall put it for the record: "The power to tax involves the power to destroy." Right on.

In our trade, which is often accused of being monopolistic, the small and even the larger newspaper owned by a family usually has to be sold off before death to avoid punishing taxes.

Editor and Publisher annually runs a list of who sold which rag to whom. Almost invariably the original ownership was in a family. The same applies, indeed, to family-owned moderately sized farms.

Congress has done a little better with higher estate exemptions, but the incentive is still missing for getting and spending.

Old Peter Lorillard, the tobacco tycoon, probably had the best answer: "The ideal income is a thousand dollars a day — and expenses."

Incentive is the stuff of true progress. If offered, it encourages people to accumulate property and savings which go into industry. If denied, it makes slugs of us all.

SOME UNIDENTIFIED poetaster wrapped it all up well after Joseph with these lines:

His horse went dead, and his mule went lame,

And he lost six cows in a poker game;

Then a hurricane came on a summer day,

And blew the house where he lived away;

An earthquake came when that was gone,

And swallowed the land the house stood on.

And then the tax collector came around,

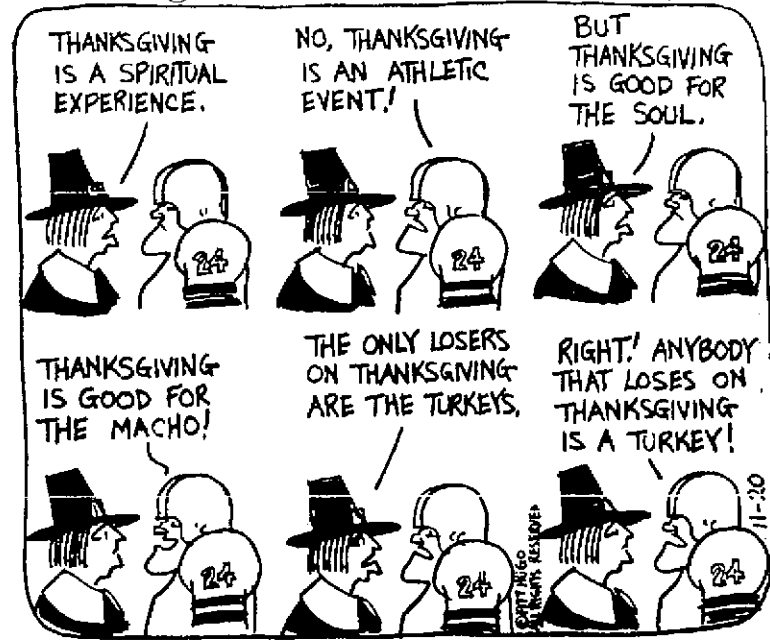

And charged him up with the hole in the ground.

Weep, then, as Shelley wrote, for Ananias. We are not all dead from the tax ax in an affluent country. Several of the philosophers went out to dinner at a nearby club. The tab was only $125, much of it deductible.

There are some weeping and some laughing philosophers.

2 views from the blimp

Schoolgirl, newswoman on Cloud 9

Stephanie Brown is 13 and a student at Hughes Junior High School in Long Beach. Denise Kusel is a little older than that and is a reporter for the Independent, Press-Telegram. They recently spent a day together at the city desk and ended with a ride in the Goodyear blimp.

Stephanie's reaction to both the blimp ride and the newspaper was "Wow." Denise just got airsick.

By Stephanie Brown

The Goodyear Blimp is a fascinating thing. It's 193 feet long and 59 feet high, yet it weighs only 250 pounds in flight.

It flies at about 1,000 to 3,000 feet but can go up to 8,500 feet.

Although it goes only 35 mph, it looks as if it's just floating on air.

At night, the blimp is a wonderful sight. With its 7,560 lights it can make wonderful pictures and writes messages for everyone to see.

Riding in the blimp is something thousands want to do, yet very few ever get to do. Ever since I've lived in Long Beach, I've wanted to ride on the blimp, yet I never dreamed it was possible.

As I stepped aboard the blimp, I was surprised to find that it only held six passengers.

Takeoff was pretty noisy. We angled upward and soon were flying over the city.

It felt almost like floating. The world looked tiny. I looked down at ant-sized people and toy-sized cars. From a distance, Signal Hill looked like an ant hill.

We flew over factories and the coastline. It was beautiful to watch the waves crawl up the cliffs.

The fog looked like black cotton.

Flying above the birds, I could see so much. At one point the pilot slowed down the engine. Everything got very quiet, and that was really wonderful. As we slowly sank while swaying in the breeze, I felt like a bird.

movement of the blimp's nose.

RIGHT and left movements are controlled by two foot pedals and operate like sled runners.

"Since I've been flying the blimp, I've learned to take life a little easier," the 36-year-old pilot said.

"I'm not in so much of a hurry. The wind teaches you that. You just sort of float along — gives you time to think."

Squinting through tinted aviator glasses, Nicolary surveyed the combined harbors of Long Beach and Los Angeles.

"Soon it'll be time to go out on the whale watches. We start spotting the early birds about this time of year. The rest of the school (of whales) will be along in early January."

What's it like to watch the seasons change while floating about a stone's throw above the rest of the world?

"It's quite an education. I've been on a few cross-country trips in the blimp," Nicolary said.

"Not only do the moods of the seasons and weather change, but people change."

"YOU CAN see it. Feel it. Even from up here. I know people are different in Kansas than they are in California, but I didn't know I'd experience that just floating over their lives."

"The minute you get out of the big cities, people stop pretending about sophistication. They see the blimp and they wave — not just kids, but men and women, too. People follow us in their cars. They take life a little slower — slow enough to see something."

Nicolary tugged on two toggles on the instrument panel. The toggles, which look like spools of thread, control the mixture of helium and air pressure and help maintain the trim of the blimp.

The tops of hills on the Palos Verdes Peninsula poked grassy tops through a patchy cover of fog.

The layout of the gondola is exactly the same as it was in the 1920s. Actually, not much has changed up here over the years.

"My favorite time to fly is in the early morning — just before the sun spills over the night. I like to watch the world wake up."

"AT NIGHT, it's like another world up here. It's spectacular. We don't carry passengers at night. We replace the seats with the electrical equipment for our 'Super Skyacular.' That's what we call our incandescent night signs."

Lights mounted on about 80 miles of electrical wiring on the blimp's belly blink out the animation and copy. Messages are drawn up by a technician on a cathode ray tube with a light gun.

The message is programmed into a computer in a special lab in Akron, Ohio, and then transferred to a cassette tape. A 6-minute tape has 40 million pieces of information read by electronic readers aboard the airship, where there are controls for the lights and colors.

"Most of the messages are public service projects," Nicolary said. "We don't sell space for private messages. Actually, the entire blimp is primarily used in public relations for the Goodyear company."

"We were approached by a pineapple company to build a blimp shaped and painted like a pineapple. The blimp hangar was going to be a pineapple can. So the pineapple would fly out of the can, that's one of the more printable things we've been asked to do."

"ABOUT six months out of the year, we visit small towns in the Western United States. The rest of the time we're based here

Midlife male crisis common

"White knuckle guys suddenly worry about who they are, but they can't do anything about it," Hallberg continued. "So they are inside dropouts in their families. They come home every night, but they're really not home."

They watch television and drink beer. They aren't participants in their family life or work life. Being home may be more socially acceptable than running off, but in terms of being a lover, an intimate, a participant or a professional person, they're really not making it.

Not all men go through this. Hallberg estimated that in the middle class, at least, most men experience metapause either as a white knuckle dropout or a regression in one way or another, maybe for a short time only.

We use mirrors for judging who we are — the mirrors of family, work, sexuality, physical fitness, he said. The mirrors we use all our lives begin to change at midlife, when they start to fog up. They're not the way they were at the age of 20.

Children growing up begin to have a different kind of relationship with their fathers.

Hallberg said identity is made up of two things — how you look at yourself and how others look at you.

"You need both of those things for your own personal navigation system. When those factors blur, you feel like you've lost your navigation," he said.

The first mirror is work. The American man probably identifies 65 percent of who he is with his work, according to Hallberg. The overloading of identity with work means that if a man has a bad day, if the work doesn't go well, neither does he.

In our society we become obsolete quickly, Hallberg noted. Younger men frighten older men because the average life for most modern careers is eight years; then you're out of date, he said. People feel obsolete.

There is also too much specialization. For example, two aerospace engineers were laid off because they were specialists in wheels, and nothing that Rockwell International was building had wheels anymore. It was only rockets and other things without wheels.

THE MOBILITY of modern times is also a factor. Twenty-five to 30 percent of us move every two or three years, Hallberg said.

"You get tired of closing escrow and installing new sprinklers," he said. "A lot of our identity is through our sense of community and our homes. If you've had eight homes in 16 years, then part of that mirror is also fogged up."

Most middle class men also have a career clock that they set when they graduate from high school or college, in terms of benchmarks like salary level, responsibility and accomplishments.

We feel we have a certain place we need to be at during our life cycle, and if we're not there, either behind or ahead, it causes a lot of tension. It may be analogous to jet lag, he said.

"You may feel like you're still in New York, but you're in California, and it doesn't seem like what time it says on your watch."

Another mirror is physical changes as we age. Our metabolism changes so that we need less food, yet many people eat more as they grow older, perhaps sublimating other desires.

"A 20-year-old student sitting in a library uses as much energy as a 55-year-old man burns at home working in the yard," Hallberg said. "Even if you eat the same as you did when younger, it's a losing battle; you get heavier. Plus, you can afford to eat out more often than when younger."

"I THINK there are hormonal changes in both men and women that leave us feeling uncertain. Men will break out in a sweat in the middle of a television show."

They wonder what's next: "Am I going to have a heart attack? The beer I'm drinking must be no good. Men do have hot flashes just as females do. A lot of guys say it's hot as hell and they open a window when everyone else is cold."

The greatest incidence of alcoholism in men occurs between the ages of 40 and 44, according to Hallberg.

"We tend to deal with our depression by using downers. Alcohol brings you down further than before. When you're older, alcohol takes you down even more quickly than when you were young. Guys who have been light social drinkers become heavy drinkers suddenly."

Sexuality is tied so closely to manhood that any type of mistake, interruption or delay may cause a crisis in self-esteem, he said.

"The old numbers games you used to hear in the locker room about how much and how many probably were never true, but now you know they aren't true for you."

"IT TAKES males and females longer to be stimulated in midlife than in youth. A lot of sex partners just give up too easily when they try to stimulate the other partner and detect no interest in the other person."

At midlife we question the value of marriage: "Why do I have to be married to the same person all my life? The kids are away from home, and there's no reason to stay married."

"But the reason for marriage is intimacy. We all need intimacy with someone. Yet males have a particularly difficult time becoming intimate," Hallberg said.

He is the author of "The Grey Itch," which outlines the male metapause syndrome.

Ex-cop Frank Shaw now private eye

He isn't wearing a bullet-proof vest. The tomato says he wears no underwear either. This is Frank Shaw. The tomato identifies herself as Kim.

A shabby, innocent-eyed girl, brown hair curling on her neck, eyebrows plucked clean as a bone and startled arches painted above the place where they had been... the fat cook looked after her. "That doll don't belong in Tough Town," he said slowly.

"Pickup on Noon Street" by Raymond Chandler

"Kim works for me. I have a lot of different people who work for me. Men like to give out all kinds of information to a pretty girl. Works the other way too. There're a lot of women who'll talk to a guy," Shaw says.

"Different sizes, shapes... all kinds work for us," Kim says in her most tomatoey tone. "They have to have some acting talent."

In the finest Chandler tradition, she whips out a Marlboro and lights it herself. Shaw doesn't smoke. Kim lets the stuff curl around her rosebud mouth, playing with it with her tongue while Frank explains the private investigator business circa 1977.

"We're probably as large as any agency in L.A. I have between 300 and 500 people available to me to work at any given time," he says.

Most cases these days involve embezzlement, he says. Not the kind which involves a crooked accountant who makes off with $10 million acquired through years of double-bookkeeping and hires the Mob to protect him and his own classy tomato in Rio de Janeiro. Embezzlement, Shaw explains, is a four-syllable way of saying "in-house shoplifting."

DEPARTMENT stores, warehouses and supermarkets that have thieving employees they'd like to nab with a minimum of publicity call on Shaw to track the birds down and sweet-talk them into a confession.

And, speaking of birds, the second-most prevalent type of case Shaw is called upon to solve in these post-Marlowe times is missing persons or, in some instances, missing birds.

"Ah, I was asked to track down a parakeet once. Dogs, cats... they aren't very lucrative. We don't do them much."

Shaw does do people. A couple of years ago, he was asked by an aging duffer who hadn't seen his children for 50 years to find them. A brush with the law had sent him packing from his home in Idaho half a century back and he had lost track of his roots. Within three weeks, Shaw helped the family celebrate its reunion in Santa Barbara where the man's son and daughter had moved years before.

Not all his cases turn out with such happy endings. One missing person turned out to be quite dead a few years ago and the resulting intrigue became a bona fide murder case.

His most recent brush with murder came with the assignment to act as bodyguard for convicted San Gabriel police officer Bill Melvain, who was found guilty of kidnapping and murdering a teen-age gang member earlier this month.

$8.9 million paid for historic firm

By Bob Geivert
Staff Writer

The pioneer Santa Ana Valley Irrigation Co. (SAVI), organized by farmers 100 years ago to irrigate what was to become Orange County, has been sold for $8.9 million to two Sacramento firms.

Inter-Coast Investment Inc. and Randolph Parks Inc., land investors and developers, paid cash for the 1,754-acre SAVI land holdings in Orange County.

The sale price works out to $850 per share, a princely sum considering SAVI stock once sold for as little as $5 per share. The farmers who set up the irrigation company in 1877 became shareholders, just as did others who in succeeding years joined SAVI to get water for their farms.

SAVI owned 1,134 acres of land outright and another 200 acres in joint ventures. The holdings include 540 acres near the Riverside County line, of which the Green River Golf Course leases 396 acres; the 305-acre Weir Ranch in Santa Ana Canyon; 50 acres at Jeffrey Road and the Santa Ana Freeway; and 43 acres in the city of Orange.

THE SALE ended a colorful, often controversial era marked by almost-continuous water wars during its early days, and an aggressive program of agricultural expansion later.

Farmer-owned and farmer-run, SAVI was the epitome of both business caution and flamboyant aggressiveness.

The general public was interested in everything SAVI directors did because, in a close-knit society of small farmers, everything had an influence on everybody.

SAVI's goal was to supply water, and so it did it with a series of concrete-lined open canals which were smaller forerunners of the giant ditches that bring the Southland its water from the Colorado River and Northern California.

As SAVI expanded it took over all the water rights it could acquire. Its canals threaded into Santa Ana Canyon, following the route of the Santa Ana River.

The company tapped the river's flow whenever it could — and caused bitter disputes over water rights. The water wars were fought in the fields, on the river banks, on street corners and in the courts.

As SAVI expanded its canal system, it bought much Orange County acreage just to acquire water rights. Cheap at the time, because it wouldn't grow anything but brush and weeds, the land is now worth millions of dollars.

Hearings set on L.B. land use element plan

City planners have scheduled a series of City Council district meetings in the next 60 days to provide public discussion on the Land Use Element Plan for Long Beach.

The meetings will include description of the plan, which is a general policy guide for future development and redevelopment of the city, along with answers to questions by citizens. The schedule includes:

- Councilman Wilson — 7 p.m. Nov. 28, Washington Junior High School.
- Councilman Edgerton — 7:30 p.m. Nov. 29, Fremont School.
- Councilman Phillips — Dec. 1, 7:30 p.m., City Hall council chambers.
- Councilman Carroll — 7 p.m. Dec. 6, Hughes Junior High School.

"My company was retained to... How shall I put this?" Shaw says.

"PROTECT?" Kim offers.

"... to protect him and his family 24 hours a day. We were getting threats, right to our faces, like 'We're going to kill you.' 'Your time is up,' and 'Tonight's the night,' from the dead gang member's fellow gang members. Was I scared?" Shaw says, scrunching around in his seat while Kim polishes an apple cheek with the back of her hand. "Sure was. Still am."

Paranoia is one emotion that afflicts even modern Marlowes like Shaw.

Posting in all-night theaters, motorcycle gangs, dinner parties and wine-tasting soirees, never knowing who may or may not like the idea of an investigator investigating can wear down even the most plucky private eye, and Shaw's been at it for nearly 11 years. For 18 years before that, he was with the Long Beach Police Department, working everything from undercover narcotics to traffic.

"You ever get high?" Kim asks Shaw.

"Well, can't avoid a contact high, you go into a room where they're smoking a lot of grass," Shaw answers, telling it go at that. He furrows his brow at Kim and she falls into a classy tomato-like silence.

BEING A private detective has proven to be quite lucrative for Shaw. If he'd stayed with the force, he'd be retired by now, he says, but that wouldn't have been his cup of tea — or, as Marlowe would have said, his brand of Scotch.

Shaw likes his work. Unlike Marlowe, who would have been flunked out of such an institution, Shaw teaches criminology at Cerritos College and qualifies as a full professor there. At 52, he is no down-on-his-luck gumshoe, as illustrated by his gaudy body jewelry, his sleek white luxury automobile and his tomatoes.

He won't say precisely how good things are for private dicks these days, but he does offer this food for thought: each agent he hires out gets somewhere between $15 and $25 an hour to perform everything from guarding bodies to surveilling suspicious folk. He hires none but the professional. One of his underlings recently made the error of offering to take a client along with him on a shadowing venture and the client helped out by leaving a note on the shadowee's car reading "You are being watched by a private detective."

Fortunately, the shadowee figured somebody was just pulling a joke on him and paid it no heed until Shaw's agents walked up to him one day and said "we know you've been embezzling." Only then did the shadowee recall the note.

WHEN HE first started, Shaw had a 10-x10-foot hovel on Seventh Street, near Pacific Coast Highway, "with an extremely small bathroom." Nowadays, he has a suite on the second floor at Broadway and Grand Avenue, complete with a secretary named Annette (another tomato) and all the conveniences of modern-day crime-fighting.

Shaw has heard of Marlowe and his author, Chandler, but he's never read any of that. It's fiction. It's interesting. On the whole, it's not really like that though. Things have changed considerably since Marlowe's day.

"Oh yeah, I got a beep alert, a radio in my ear... the whole thing. I like it. I like my work."

And Kim. What does she like? "I like to observe," she says, wiggling the cherry blossom design on the front of her blouse and batting her lashes inscrutably.

"Well, maybe I've cast some light on how private detectives work for you. Come on, Kim," Shaw says, moving out of his chair and on to the street where his car is parked. "Let's go to work."

Distant traffic hummed on a main street. A light burned across the street in a rooming house, behind a glass-paneled door... A window was open and dark above it.

A woman's voice screamed shrilly behind him.

He stiffened, whirled, and the light hit him between the eyes. It came from the dark window across the street, a blinding white shaft that impaled him against the billboard.

His face leered in it, his eyes blinked. He didn't move anymore.

What's your problem? 'Rule of 60' helpful in computing amount of rent, utilities

By Don G. Campbell

What works for one person is a total failure for another. And nowhere is this more apparent than in money management.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: What is that old rule of thumb regarding monthly rent and weekly salary? And is that net or gross? (We can never make ends meet, so we're trying to re-budget rent, food, etc.) We are both working and have one child. — Mrs. E. M., Elmhurst, N.Y.

A. How much house do you feel you can afford? Well, scrap the figure — it's probably way out of line.

The rule of thumb I assume you refer to is the one about not paying out more than one week's salary (gross) per month for rent. How applicable it is today, though, is a horse of another color. If major utilities are included, the figure probably still holds; if they aren't you would be on much safer ground figuring that you should pay no more than one-fourth your monthly take home pay in rent.

Another commonly held rule (normally used in computing how much house you can afford to buy — but still applicable here) is "The Rule-of-60." This maintains that your total monthly expenses — in this case your rent, plus any utilities not picked up by the landlord and the insurance on your household belongings — should not exceed your annual gross income divided by 60.

Thus, if your annual gross income is $12,000, you shouldn't be paying more than $200 a month for rent and the other expenses mentioned above.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I read about vacation home swapping sometime a few weeks ago, either in your column or some magazine. How does this thing work? — S. A. U., Emmaus, Pa.

A. I did a piece on it about two years ago. And unfortunately, I can't dredge up a word of it now.

And yet, I can almost recite it all — a New York-based company that arranges "swaps" between vacationing families in different parts of the country (and world).

Let's hope that our mutual bafflement flushes out someone who can give us an address (I'll save your letter pending the day). In the meantime, pick the part of the country where you would like to arrange a swap of vacation housing, find out the name of the local newspaper and run a "standing" classified advertisement.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: How is an agreement with a real estate salesman? We put up our house for sale a month or so ago (with no results and with precious little advertising by the broker). Since then, a man transferred here by my company has become interested in our home. We had him and his wife out for dinner a few nights ago, and they now want to buy it. With the help of a lawyer-friend, we could wind the whole deal up in a couple of days, so we don't need the broker. How do we get out of this gracefully? — L. T., San Diego.

A. Over someone's dead body. I'm afraid. Unless your agreement with the real estate broker has run out, he is still your appointed representative in any sale of the home. Even if he happens to be out of state when it's consummated, he's still entitled to his commission. You might as well turn the deal over to your broker.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: Can I sell a small home I own to my son and daughter-in-law for $1 and other considerations?

A. Sure, but it doesn't get you off the hook with the Internal Revenue Service, which is inclined to look on it as a gift to the son and may also "impute" an interest on the "sale" to you whether you actually receive it or not.

Park Paseo attracts buyers

Distinctive architectural design has attracted new home buyers to Park Paseo-Irvine, a new residential community of detached patio homes which recently opened for preview sales in the Village of Northwood in Irvine, said Richard K. Tamura, director of marketing for Ponderosa Homes, Irvine-based homebuilders.

Priced from $60,990 to $99,990, the 57 homes in Phase I have been offered for sale.

Construction is under way and completion of four models displaying the innovative floorplans and distinctive exterior designs is anticipated within two weeks. First move-ins are expected in six weeks.

Created in one- and two-story arrangements, the homes have been designed by Bates-Bassenian-Peka-rek, Architecture and Land Planning of Newport Beach. Four different floorplans feature three or four bedrooms and two or 2½ baths in up to 1,943 square feet of interior living space.

SUNKEN LIVING rooms are featured in two homes, while another incorporates a double-door opening to a convertible den/bedroom.

Greenhouse windows, an atrium, private patio or garden areas and soaring vaulted ceilings highlighted by clerestory windows are among the design features distinguishing individual plans. Three of the homes also include garden-view family rooms with sliding glass doors to backyard patio areas.

PRELIMINARY SKETCH of the clubhouse at Seabluff Canyon Townhomes, the 10-acre planned residential community of 83 energy-efficient townhomes in Costa Mesa, is being developed by The Gregory Co. Greenhouse Windows in the recreation building as well as individual units will provide passive solar heating assistance along with other architectural design elements. The total energy package also will incorporate solar domestic hot water systems.

Seabluff Canyon's homes to introduce solar heating

Plans are being formalized for Seabluff Canyon Townhomes, a 10-acre planned residential community of 83 energy-efficient townhomes in Costa Mesa, announced James H. Gregory, president of The Gregory Co., Costa Mesa-based homebuilding firm.

"Public consciousness of the ever-increasing need to conserve energy has become a paramount issue," said Gregory. "Rising costs and diminished resources along with nationwide appeals for conservation have affected almost every aspect of the consumer world."

"We, as part of the housing industry, want to be a positive force in providing practical solutions for alternative means for conserving energy within the home," he said.

AFTER MORE than a year of investigation, The Gregory Co. has selected to utilize a combination of a solar-assisted domestic hot water heating system with passive solar floorplan designs. Overall, it is estimated that the townhome units will have at least 50 per cent of the energy costs currently required by available homes.

In addition to including Grumman Sunstream domestic hot water systems in each unit, the homes also will be heavily insulated to minimize heating and cooling needs.

Grumman Sunstream has been chosen to provide the special system.

Harrison/Lorenzini, Costa Mesa architects, has been retained to develop the land plan and floorplan designs which will maximize the effect of passive solar heating for the individual homes.

Four plans are being created, ranging in size from 1,562 to 1,761 square feet of interior living space. The homes have been designed with greenhouse windows and atriums as well as skylights to capitalize upon the natural lighting and solar heating effects.

A distinctive two-story clubhouse of approximately 1,600 square feet is planned as the focal point for the new community. A raised conversation area around a massive brick fireplace and a kitchen area will complete the downstairs, while upstairs a loft area will be reserved for pool tables.

OPENING OFF the upstairs loft, an observation deck will overlook a swimming pool, spa and sand volleyball court.

Passive and active solar assistance will be used throughout the recreation facilities.

Entering the final design phase, ground-breaking for the $7.6-million project is expected to begin in early December. Gregory Development anticipates that initial sales activities for the residential community of energy-efficient townhomes will start in March.

Only nine homes left in Park Vista project

Sales continue in the fourth and final phase of homes at Park Vista, a single-family home community in the Sunny Hills area of Fullerton.

Shea Homes has built the 234-home community which includes four one and two story floorplans in three and four bedroom designs, and only nine homes remain in this successful venture with move-ins expected in early 1978.

Prices range from $86,995 for the homes which have from 1,408 to 2,319 square feet of living space.

INCLUDED as standard features in the homes are such luxury and convenience features as wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, vaulted ceilings, woodburning fireplaces, linen storage, ceramic tile in the tub and shower areas and kitchens equipped with continuous-cleaning double ovens, dishwashers, disposals, ceramic tile countertops and hardwood cabinets.

Prices begin at $147,000

Grant/Warminston builders reports that their exclusive Country Knoll development in the Hills of Anaheim area is nearly sold out.

The remaining viewsite homes will be ready for occupancy late this month and are priced from $147,000.

FEATURED are two story, three to four bedroom homes.

"Each of the remaining homes has an exceptional feature that makes it a highly desirable family residence," said Bud Warminston of Grant/Warminston. "One is built on a large one-half acre lot that is perfectly suited for equestrian activities. Another has an exceptionally large side yard with more than enough room for boat or trailer access.

"The third has one of the most spectacular, unobstructed views in the community. One home features a 19-foot dining room."

The Country Knoll homes are distinguished by detailed exterior stylings in the French Normandy, English Tudor and Country English traditions. Detailing distinctive is in brick and natural stone, concrete walks and driveways.

The features include vaulted ceilings, wet bar, intercom system, central air conditioning, wood burning fireplaces, ceramic tile or wood entry and wall to wall plush carpeting.

Family style Country Knoll kitchens feature microwave and self-cleaning oven, dishwasher, disposal, ceramic tile counters and custom designed hardwood cabinets.

HOMEOWNERS have access to all the recreation of Anaheim Hills. Included are the 18-hole golf course, an 11-court private Racquet Club, riding and hiking trails and the new private Saddle Club with a complete equestrian center.

Homes are convenient to schools, shopping and are freeway close to business and commercial centers of Orange and Los Angeles.

Each home has dual yard plan

(From Preceding Page)

Displaying luxury appointments throughout, the plans offer built-in wet bars as well as wood-burning fireplaces with gas log lighter valves. Kitchens feature a quality line of appliances including microwave and self-cleaning ovens with black glass doors, electric ranges, dishwashers and disposals in the double compartment sinks. Luminous ceilings in three plans light the ceramic tile countertops and furniture finished ash cabinetry.

All kitchens have either nook dining areas or breakfast bars.

SPACIOUS MASTER bedrooms in the single-story models open either to the back yard garden area or to a private walled patio. All of the suites have separate dressing areas with twin sinks in stained oak cabinets, baths with showers surrounded by ceiling-height tile wainscoting, and either his and her wardrobes or walk-in closets.

Abundant space for outdoor living has been incorporated into the planning of these fully detached homes. Utilizing the patio home concept, each home has been placed to one side of the lots, so that there is usable side yard as well as rear yard space for barbecues, patios and play areas.

Park Paseo families also will have access to their own extensive private recreation facilities. Initial plans specify a 3,500 square foot clubhouse, swimming pool, therapy spa, two tennis courts, tot lot and wading pool.

WITHIN THE Village of Northwood, it is anticipated that the village will also have a 20-acre community park, a neighborhood shopping center as well as schools for children for all ages. Regional shopping centers such as South Coast Plaza in Costa Mesa, Town and Country and The City in Orange, Fashion Square in Santa Ana and Fashion Island in Newport Beach are all within a 10-minute radius.

Now open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., a sales information center for Park Paseo has been established on Irvine Boulevard between Culver Drive and Yale Avenue in the Village of Northwood in Irvine.

Some plans at Park Vista feature separate laundry service areas, pantries, luminous kitchen ceilings, compartmented master baths and three-car garages.

Park Vista is in close proximity to riding stables, golf courses, tennis courts, and several pleasant community parks. Also close by are theaters, museums, libraries, and several educational facilities, including the California State University at Fullerton.

THE MODEL home complex, under the management of Coats & Wallace, exclusive sales agents, is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

It may be reached from the Riverside/Artesia or Santa Ana Freeways by exiting at Brookhurst Street and turning north on Brookhurst to Commonwealth Avenue; west on Commonwealth to Gilbert Street; north on Gilbert to Pioneer, then west to Park Vista.

Orange BIA picks Biddle

W. Scott Biddle, Biddle Development Co. was installed as president of the Orange County Chapter of the Building Industry Association at the organization's annual installation ball at the Marriott Hotel.

Installed with Biddle before a crowd of 500 were second vice presidents, Peter Ochs, William Lyon Co., and David Stein, Avco Community Developers.

Other officers were Frank Hughes, secretary, Irvine Pacific Development; Anthony Allen, treasurer, Citation Builders. Immediate past president John Konwiser will serve on the executive committee.

Smith set for 5,000

Sometime in the next 30 days Richard Smith, president of Broadmoor Homes, and Edward Lohrbach, principal of the Irvine-based architectural firm of Morris-Lohrbach & Associates, are going to have a celebration, but it won't have anything to do with Christmas.

What it will mark, though, is the 5,000th home to be built by Broadmoor from a M/L/A design. It will be built at one of four southern California communities.

RICHARD SMITH communities Broadmoor has under construction: Woodbridge, Irvine; SeaView, Newport Beach; Broadmoor Park, Orange; or Heritage Park, Irvine.

The relationship between Broadmoor, one of the 10 largest Southland-based home builders, and Lohrbach covers some 17 years.

TO BUILDER Smith, now, as it was then, design is still the heart of any project.

"In everything we do, we strive for 'simple elegance,'" the former Navy Air Corps pilot says. "And I suppose it is because Ed feels so strongly about simple functional design that he and I have gotten along so well over the years."

Smith, has seen 1975's sales of $30 million more than double to $63 million and then almost double again in 1977 to $120 million.

Additional homes ready

Following the strong buyer response for Phases 1 and 2 of the popular single-family residential community of Woodside/Irvine, an additional phase of 27 homes has been released for reservations.

Developed in the Village of Northwood/Irvine by the J.M. Peters Co., Phases 1 and 2, involving 56 homes, have recorded a big success since opening of reservations in September.

With views of towering eucalyptus trees and the Santiago Hills, the new development contains homes priced from $115,990 to $140,990. Three, four and five bedroom homes of Phase 3 are available in split-level and two-story floorplan arrangements.

Five different plans have been designed with separate areas for formal entertaining and family activities.

LARGE, FAMILY homes range in size from 1,771 to 2,955 square feet of interior living space. Each plan includes a spacious living room, formal dining room, garden-oriented family room and informal nook eating area off the kitchen. Master bedrooms are placed upstairs, and some plans offer a downstairs bedroom with full bath.

Family recreation rooms are incorporated into two of the floorplan designs. With up to 390 square feet, these large, enclosed rooms can be used for billiards, ping pong, games or children's play areas.

High vaulted ceilings, clerestory windows and elegant double door entries are among the many architecturally distinctive features which distinguish these homes.

DESIGNED BY Bates-Bassanian-Pekarek of Newport Beach, the homes also have built-in wet bars and wood-burning fireplaces in the family rooms.

A full complement of quality appliances are installed in the kitchens, including microwave and self-cleaning ovens, Jen-Air cooktops, dishwashers and disposals in the double-well cast iron sinks.

Master suites are designed for both comfort and privacy, with some plans featuring optional retreats and wood-burning fireplaces. Dressing areas have built-in vanities with double china basins, and the baths in all but one plan feature oval Ultra tubs or sunken Roman tubs, as well as separate showers.

SET ALONG curving streets and cul-de-sacs, the homes display a total of 15 different exterior stylings with a variety of wood treatments such as shingles and rough-sawn diagonal siding. Accents of massive wood timbers, posts and pot shelves further individualize each plan.

Within the boundaries of the new residential community will be a neighborhood recreation center with two tennis courts and a swimming pool. Greenbelts incorporating existing eucalyptus rows will permit both pedestrian and bicycle access to different areas. In addition, a special landscaping plan along the Irvine Boulevard edge of the development has been proposed to preserve an existing grove of orange trees.

FIVE MODELS are now under construction. To visit the site take either the San Diego or the Santa Ana Freeways to the Culver Drive Exit. Drive north on Culver to Irvine Boulevard and then turn right, continuing about half mile to the sales information center, open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Ten previews in one village

Preview sales are now underway in 10 new home communities by leading Southern California builders, all located in one new Irvine village — The Village of Northwood.

Occupying a 1,400-acre area in Irvine, The Village of Northwood is bounded by the Santa Ana Freeway, Culver Drive, Jeffrey Road and Irvine Boulevard, extending eastward to the foothills.

AMONG THE new developments are Park Paseo by Ponderosa Homes; Willow Creek from the Meister Co.; Shady Hollow from Warmington Development Inc., and Amberwood by the Woodward Co., all offering patio homes.

Single family home communities include Park Place, Ponderosa Homes; Woodcrest, Westfield Development Co.; Influential Homes, Butler Housing; Imperial Homes, R & W Development; Showcase Northwood Village, Showcase, and Shadow Run, Warmington Development.

The prominent developers cooperating in the creation of The Village of Northwood are seeking to provide an enlightened environment and made-to-order home for the 16,000 residents who are expected to call the peaceful Village "home."

The $350,000 million Village will be a self-sufficient, viable community providing education, shopping, recreation and professional services within its tree-lined perimeter.

At least 18 parks are planned, the largest to be a 20-acre community park, owned by the city, in the center of Northwood. The other parks will be landscaped, equipped and donated to the Village by the individual builders.

Bicycle and hiking trails interlace the community and numerous greenbelts are landscaped into each development. A racquet club and recreational vehicle park also are proposed.

PLANNED FOR the corner of Irvine Boulevard and Yale Avenue, in the center of the Village, are 17 acres of shops, restaurants, entertainment attractions and professional services.

The Village is also distinguished for its low density, averaging only five units per acre. In addition to the developers now previewing, the list of builders who will be represented in The Village of Northwood includes Beard Development Co., Interstate, Lesny Development Co., Mallow-Kennedy, Meadows Realty, Maurer-Elliott Construction Co., Paesetter Homes, J.M. Peters, Patricia-Carlton Development, Sterling Development and R.P. Warmington.

EMPLOYMENT, professional, business, civic, cultural, entertainment and social centers are all in the immediate area while the nearby San Diego and Santa Ana Freeways and Orange County Airport provide easy, convenient transportation.

The Village of Northwood may be reached easily by taking the San Diego or Santa Ana Freeway to Culver Drive, then north on Culver to Irvine Boulevard and right to Yale Avenue, in the center of the community.

Inspect drainage

Commercial building owners have been urged by Stephen J. Koonce, acting L.A. county engineer, to inspect their roof drainage system to assure that it will function properly before the next storm hits Southern California.

Koonce said nearly every roof failure investigated by his department during the past few years was traced to leaves or other debris accumulated in drains and overflows.

The county's building laws provide for roof drainage to assure that storm water is safely drained. However, it's up to the owner occupant to maintain the system Koonce said.

L.B. condo complex to be ready next winter

Preliminary plans have been completed for a four-story condominium complex on a one-half acre site along Bermuda Street in Long Beach (near Cherry Avenue between Third and Fourth), announced Philip J. Pekarek, principal in charge of the 24-unit project for Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek, Architecture and Land Planning of Newport Beach.

Retained by Wilcraft Development Inc. of Newport Beach, the total-security complex will incorporate three different floorplan arrangements in two U-shaped buildings located atop the street-level parking.

SECURITY GATES will monitor the parking areas and an elevator system will provide access from the garage area to each floor.

The top of the parking structure not occupied by the building will form a four-story interior courtyard for the complex and a bridge system will interconnect the units on each level.

Ranging from 1,300 to 1,400 square feet of interior living space, the adult-oriented apartments will all feature two bedrooms and two full baths.

Interior design highlights will include nook eating areas in the kitchens, formal dining rooms, interior washer/dryer spaces, and wood-burning fireplaces in the living rooms. Pergola covered decks will be situated either off the dining rooms or living rooms.

ROUGH SAWN diagonal wood will be featured extensively on the exteriors of the buildings. Bright accents will include painted trellises, finished metal fascias along the roof lines and built-in planters incorporated into the deck railings.

Construction for the condominium complex is expected to begin this spring with completion anticipated for sometime next winter.

Specializing in residential design and land planning, Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek has completed work for over 9,000 units involving single-family, condominiums, patio home and town-home designs for communities throughout California.

'His, Hers' sinks Low price key at Influential

With their relatively low prices, Influential Homes of Anaheim Hills are attracting a wide range of home shoppers, reports Wes Weissinger, Walker & Lee Inc.'s regional sales director for Butler Housing Corp., the developer.

"A RESEARCH study of all new homes in and around Anaheim Hills found that Influential Homes are 'relatively low priced, considering the exceptional Anaheim Hills location,'" said Weissinger.

"According to the report, families purchasing Influential Homes include move-up, move-down and first-time buyers. The majority are in their 30s — though 10 percent are older. Most are moving from somewhere else in northeast Orange County."

These prestigious homes are built on good-sized lots averaging 8,400 square feet. Exterior walls are accented by wood, brick, stone, and masonry. Low sloping roofs are of shake shingles or tile.

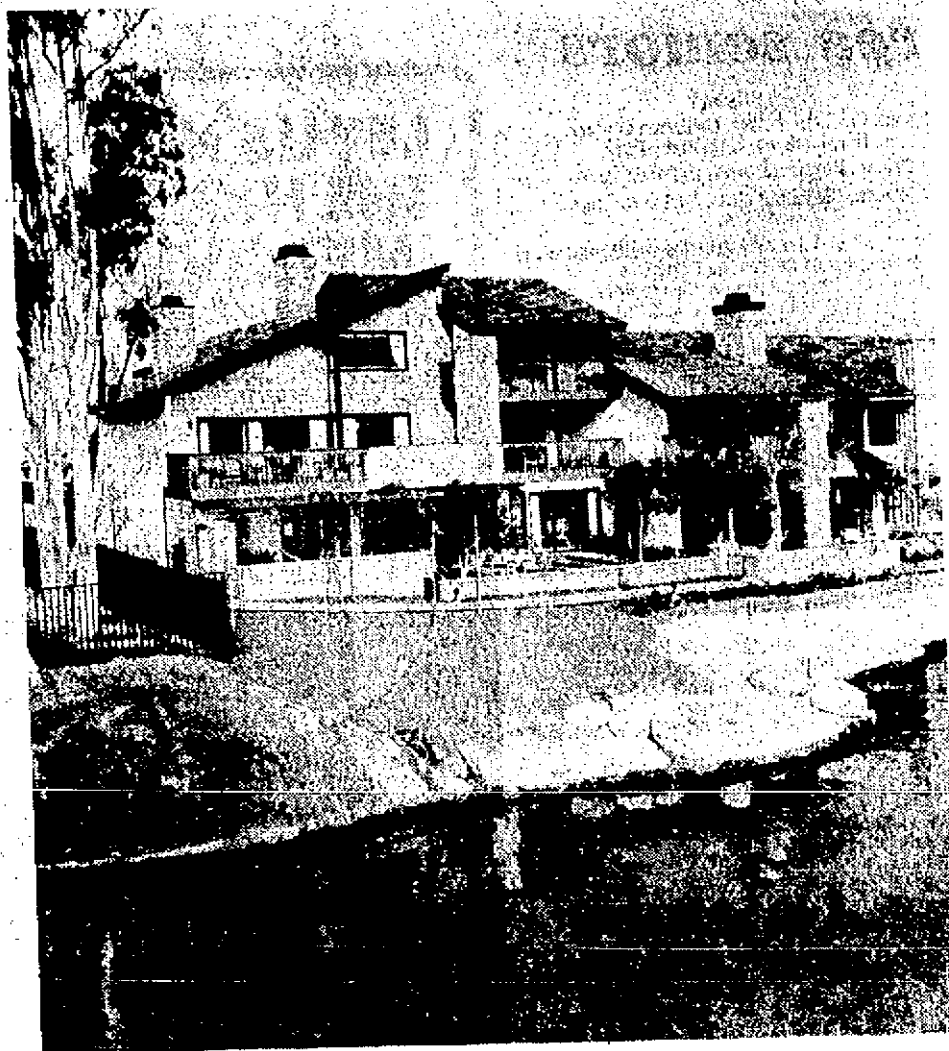

FOUR SPACIOUS floorplans with three or four bedrooms are offered. Standard in all of the one- and two-story homes are: double door entries; ceramic tile entryways; family rooms; formal dining rooms; slope-ceilinged living rooms; interior laundry service areas; wet bars; and mirrored wardrobe doors.

Kitchens have luminous ceilings and continuous cleaning double ovens. Master suites adjoin compartmented baths with "his" and "hers" sinks and deluxe oval tubs of cultured marble. Attached two- or three-car garages provide direct access to the home and have electric door openers.

Design features included in individual plans are balconies off master suites, second fireplaces, breakfast bars and nooks, dramatic curved staircases, double-door entries to master suites with dressing alcoves, and walk-in closets.

PRICES RANGE from $102,500 to $120,750. A limited number of homes are scheduled to be completed late this month for December occupancy.

Influential Homes of Anaheim Hills may be reached by taking the Riverside Freeway (91) to the Imperial Highway off-ramp, driving south to Santa Ana Road, proceeding east to Anaheim Hills Road, then south one block to the models.

Homes on the water

Only a few waterfront homes remain in Woodbridge Arborlake, in the Irvine Village at Woodbridge, Pete Fisher, sales director for McLain Development Co., said. Many of the homes feature an indoor-outdoor living room. Prices range from $99,825 to $164,500. To reach the homes take the Culver exit off the Santa Ana Freeway (5) south of Santa Ana. Then go south to Warner Avenue and turn left.

MiraVerde sales pace continues

Sales in the past eight months of townhomes at MiraVerde, a private community by B. R. Morris Development Co. on the Palos Verdes Peninsula, have exceeded total sales for the three previous years since the development opened, it was announced by Daniel J. McHugh, director of marketing for the Beverly Hills-based homebuilding firm.

McHugh said that the company expects to close sales of $13 million in its fiscal year ending next June 30. Sales for all three of the previous fiscal years, ending in 1975, 1976 and 1977, totalled $11.8 million.

"We have topped our three-year sales total by $1.2 million since our new product line was introduced in March," McHugh said.

THE RECORD SALES total represents an average of 2.6 sales per week. The townhomes, which are offered in five plans ranging from 2,684 to 3,282 square feet in size, are priced from $124,500 to $176,000.

McHugh attributed the increased sales volume to the fact that MiraVerde presently offers the only new townhomes for sale on the Palos Verdes Peninsula, where the average re-sale home sales price was $162,600 in mid-November.

MiraVerde, a gated community which includes a recreation complex, had its grand opening in August of 1974.

Five furnished model homes, with interior design by Carole Eichen, and the project sales office are located at 28116 Ridgeway Drive in Rancho Palos Verdes.

Court says 'Sold' signs OK

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that local governments may not prohibit "for sale" or "sold" signs in front of homes in an effort to forestall panic selling in the neighborhood.

New mobile home dealership open

This weekend marks the opening of the new Luxury Living Mobile Homes dealership in Santa Ana.

Now under the Larry Johnson, the long-time Orange County developer, the firm will carry a line of new and used mobile homes in the moderate to high-priced categories. Some of the brands include Golden West, Viking, Heritage and GM.

A multiple listing service will also be available for customers.

Johnson's new undertaking is a natural extension of his activities for the past 15 years, when he has been developing and marketing new homes.

Burned girl lives in mask

CHICAGO (AP) — The teachers and children at Waters Elementary School never see the face of 8-year-old Constantina (Dina) Triantafillidis. She is known as the girl in the mask.

Six years ago she was badly burned in a crib fire in her native Athens. After undergoing operations there, she eventually came to Chicago for further treatment. The trip and hospital expenses are being paid from contributions of Chicago's Greek community.

Dina wears a skintight, Daeron elastic mask with holes for her eyes, nose, mouth and ears. She wears it 24 hours a day and will continue to wear it for as long as 18 months after doctors at Children's Memorial Hospital complete rebuilding her burn-ravaged features.

Dr. Michael Schafer, a plastic surgeon, told an interviewer that "the mask is part of Dina's therapy."

"Elastically compressing her skin grafts makes them heal smoother," he said. "The mask is not meant to hide Dina's face."

After the fire, doctors in Greece gave the little daughter of a flour mill worker only a 20 percent chance of survival.

Wolverine defense shackles Buckeyes

By Herschel Nissenon
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—All the statistics favored Ohio State except the one that counted most—the final score.

When Saturday's annual Big Ten shootout was over, Ohio State had 23 first downs to Michigan's 10. The Buckeyes had 208 yards rushing and 144 passing to the Wolverines' 141 and 55. Ohio State completed 13 of 16 passes to Michigan's 3 of 9.

But the scoreboard told the only story that really mattered: Michigan 14, Ohio State 6. An NCAA record regular-season crowd of 106,024 in Michigan Stadium and a national television audience were witnesses.

"It's great to win one like that," said coach Bo Schembechler. "I've been down there before when we've gotten all the yards and lost the game."

Ohio State's Woody Hayes called it "by far the best game we ever played and lost."

The Wolverines finished the regular season with a 10-1 record, marred only by a stunning 16-0 loss to Minnesota.

Fourth-ranked Ohio State wound up 9-2—the Buckeyes also lost to Oklahoma 29-28—and will have to settle for a Sugar Bowl meeting with Alabama.

Although fifth-ranked Michigan didn't score until last in the first half, the outcome probably was decided in the opening period when Ohio State virtually owned the football. But the Buckeyes managed only a skimpy 3-0 lead on Vlade Janakievski's 29-yard field goal, although they controlled the ball for an incredible 12:52 and had first downs at the Michigan 18 and 11 yard lines on its first two possessions.

In that period, the Buckeyes reeled off 27 plays, good for nine first downs and 102 yards. Michigan, on the other hand, got off only five plays plus a punt for a meager 5 yards. But this was one time when statistics didn't tell the story.

Huskies leading Pacific-8

SEATTLE (AP)—Warren Moon passed for three first-half touchdowns the Washington defense shut down Washington State's dangerous passing attack as the 19th-ranked Huskies beat the Cougars, 35-15, Saturday to move ever so close to the Rose Bowl.

The victory before a record Husky Stadium crowd of 60,964 and a regional television audience boosted Washington into sole possession of the Pacific-8 Conference lead with a 6-1 record. UCLA, 5-1, needs USC Friday night. A USC victory or a tie would send the Huskies to the Rose Bowl for the first time in 14 years.

Moon, Washington's senior quarterback, passed 33 yards to Joe Steele for a touchdown to cap a 79-yard march in seven plays with the opening kickoff. Two minutes later, Moon hit Scott Greenwood with a 33-yard TD pass.

Steele, the Huskies' leading rusher who left the game early in the third period with a sprained hip, scored his 10th rushing TD of the season late in the first period on a 3-yard run that put Washington in command, 21-0.

Hayes punches TV cameraman

By George Strode
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—A veteran American Broadcasting Co. television cameraman said he was struck by Ohio State coach Woody Hayes Saturday near the Buckeyes' football bench.

Mike Freedman of Los Angeles said he was working with a hand-held camera focusing on Hayes moments after Ohio State quarterback Rod Gerald fumbled at the Michigan 8-yard line late in the fourth quarter.

Freedman still was focusing on Hayes, some 20 yards from the volatile Buckeyes' coach, when he said, "He took a whack at me. He aimed for my stomach. I blocked it. He was all pent up. He had to take it out on somebody."

Moments after a 14-6 loss to the Wolverines, Hayes was asked about the incident during a post-game interview.

"Aw, go ahead and write it," said Hayes, raising his voice.

The 64-year-old Ohio State coach, with a history of run-ins with newsmen in his 27 seasons at the Big Ten school, raised his fists and thrust them to the face of a Columbus writer in the first row.

"How would you like it if somebody stuck these (microphones) in your face?" he asked. "Go ahead and write it."

Hayes had shown good composure until the sidelines question. He abruptly ended his interview with it, retreated for the door to the Ohio State dressing room and mumbled a profanity.

Hayes, whose teams had won 15 successive regular-season road games, praised the Michigan defense, saying, "The game was decided by one factor, their ability to stop us when we were in scoring range. It was no accident, it was by design."

Someone asked Hayes if he had any thoughts about meeting Alabama coach Bear Bryant in the Sugar Bowl. It would be the first time the two greats have met.

"I don't have a single thought on anything," said Hayes.

Shortly after Hayes disappeared into the solemn Ohio State dressing room, Gerald walked into the interview area.

"I don't know why we couldn't get the ball past the goal line. We have a real good goal line offense. We just didn't execute," he said.

Rose or nothing bowl for Bruins

By Gary Rausch
Staff Writer

While millions of Americans were watching Michigan hold off Ohio State via television Saturday morning, Terry Donahue was drilling his UCLA Bruins.

The young head coach wasn't one of those fans who quickly grew disinterested in Washington's rout of Washington State later in the day. He barely saw any of it.

"I worked in the office for awhile, came home and did some things around here and saw about 10 minutes of the Washington game," he said Saturday evening. "I can't even tell you who won the Stanford-Cal game."

Advised that Stanford had triumphed, 21-3, Donahue laughed. "I called that one right, didn't I?"

About all that was settled Saturday was Stanford being eliminated from Rose Bowl contention by virtue of Washington's victory. That leaves the Bruins (5-1) and Huskies (6-1) as lone bidders for the Pacific-8 Conference title and a date with Michigan Jan. 2.

Asked his reaction to the day's results, Donahue said:

"I have to react. I thought at the outset the conference champion would have at least one loss and I said so publicly. If we're going to be the champion, we still have to beat USC Friday."

"It never entered my mind that we could be Pac-8 champion without beating the Trojans."

The Bruins, 7-3 over-all, are only 37 seconds removed from a Rose Bowl berth right now. That's how much time remained when Stanford scored the winning touchdown in its 32-28 decision back on Oct. 8.

There was a questionable catch by James Lofton with a minute remaining that Bruin fans will long debate. It went for 40 yards and a first down at the UCLA 27.

Defensive backs Levi Armstrong and Kenny Easley swore the Cardinals' flanker fell atop the ball on the ground and then rolled over "Obviously, they decided not to wait. We're looking forward to playing in the Fiesta Bowl."

If ASU beats Arizona next Saturday, it will represent the WAC. Otherwise, Colorado State, which upset the Sun Devils Saturday, gets the bowl bid.

Tenth-ranked Pittsburgh, which has an 8-1-1 record, accepted an invitation to meet 15th-ranked Clemson, making its first bowl appearance since 1959, in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 30.

"I'm tickled to death to hear that because the people on our committee feel that without the injury to (quarterback) Matt Cavanaugh, you would be undefeated at this stage and rated No. 1 in the country," George R. Olsen, executive vice president of the Gator Bowl, told Pitt officials.

Arkansas gets lobbyist aid, Orange Bowl bid

Combined News Services

The University of Arkansas Saturday accepted its first-ever invitation to play in the Orange Bowl and the official announcement was cut short by cries of "SOOO-Pig SOOO-EEE."

The hog-calling was led by university president Charles Bishop after Arkansas became the first Southwest Conference team since 1965 to be invited to the Orange Bowl. That year, Texas beat a Joe Namath-led Alabama team.

The eighth-ranked Razorbacks will meet the winner of Friday's Nebraska-Oklahoma game. The Oklahoma-Nebraska loser will meet No. 18 North Carolina in the Liberty Bowl at Memphis Dec. 19.

"It isn't very often I get to tell the president of the university what to do," said Razorbacks Coach Lou Holtz. "I've never seen a football team happier than the Razorbacks were, including all the times we cut practice short."

The Razorbacks complete their regular season against Texas Tech in a nationally-televised game on Thanksgiving.

Evidently, Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, an Arkansas alum, feels Arkansas is a cinch against Tech. He lobbied for Arkansas instead of Penn State in the Orange Bowl.

"I told them not to select a team that could come into the Orange Bowl losing its last game," Switzer said of the decision. "And Penn State still had to play Pitt Nov. 25."

Shunned by the Orange Bowl, Ninth-ranked Penn State accepted a bid to meet the Western Athletic Conference champion, Arizona State or Colorado State, in the Fiesta Bowl at Phoenix Dec. 25.

"We indicated to the major bowls we were willing to wait (for an invitation) until after our game with Pitt next Saturday," said Penn State coach Joe Paterno.

49ers rally from 24-0; BYU hangs on, 30-27

By Jim McCormack
Staff Writer

PROVO, Utah — Sophomore quarterback Marc Wilson threw a 15-yard touchdown pass to Tod Thompson with 5:43 remaining

Saturday to give host Brigham Young University a 30-27 victory over Long Beach State in a game that was:

(a) Incredible? (b) Inconceivable? (c) Incomprehensible? All of the above.

Wilson, who had thrown for 304 yards in the first 30 minutes of the game, had to drive his forces 71 yards for the score that kept the 49ers from recording one of the great upsets in their history.

The contest was a well-defined mismatch. The Cougars, the nation's No. 1 passing team and owners of a 7-2 record, were in the penthouse and the 49ers, with a five-game losing streak, were in the outhouse.

The social status of the two teams was even more established at intermission.

BYU had scored the contest's first 24 points and was in command, 24-8, with Wilson even more spectacular than his team (which had also amassed 23 first downs). The 6-5 gunner had completed an NCAA-record tying 27 passes (37 attempts) for 304 yards and three scores and was well ahead of the pace required to break his own game yardage standard of 571 yards, set against a Wayne Howard-coached Utah team three weeks ago.

The atmosphere in the Long Beach State lockerroom was, understandably, somber.

"Our major concern, it was a major concern all week, was that they were going to blow us out of the stadium," 49er coach Dave Curry admitted.

Texas Tech embarrassed by Houston

BOWLS—

Notre Dame accepted its third trip to the Cotton Bowl, hopeful of meeting top-ranked Texas in the Jan. 2 game at Dallas. Texas meets Texas A&M Saturday. If Texas wins, it clinches the Cotton berth. A&M needs to beat Texas and Houston, Dec. 3, to earn a trip to Dallas.

A&M, ranked 14th in the nation, agreed to accept a Bluebonnet Bowl bid if it doesn't get the host spot in the Cotton Bowl.

Southern Cal will get the other spot in the Bluebonnet Bowl if it beats UCLA Friday. If USC loses, Washington will be invited.

Other bowl invitations were issued to Stanford and Louisiana State for the Sun Bowl in El Paso Dec. 31; Florida State and Texas Tech for the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando Dec. 23; and Minnesota vs. Maryland for the Hall of Fame Classic at Birmingham Dec. 22.

Huskies' new battle cry: 'Fight On for Old SC!'

SEATTLE (AP) — On a field frozen into skull-cracking hardness by unseasonable cold, Washington found a path to the Rose Bowl and a chance to warm up on New Year's Day.

"We're so delighted to have a piece of the (Pacific-8) championship," said Husky coach Don James after his team clubbed Washington State, 35-15, in the 70th meeting between the two schools Saturday. "Now we're going to cheer like mad for the (USC) Trojans so we can have it all."

Washington's victory means the Huskies will represent the league in the Rose Bowl if USC defeats UCLA Friday night. If UCLA wins, it will have a 6-1 record to match Washington's and will represent the Pac-8 by virtue of having beaten Washington earlier this year.

James said he thought USC, out of the running at 4-2, would play its best in an effort to wind up in the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston.

Washington State coach Warren Powers, who guided the Cougars to a 6-5 record for their first winning season in five years, said he was caught off guard by the fury of Washington play in the early going.

Washington opened a 21-0 lead with more than 200 yards total offense in the first quarter.

"I didn't anticipate that they'd score so early. I think we have a much better defense than that," he said. "We made it a little easy at first and it was tough to recover."

James said the frozen artificial turf and numbing cold hampered State's complex passing attack. Cougar quarterback Jack Thompson, third in the nation with 2,194 yards entering the contest, was held to nine yards passing in the first half and did not throw for a first down until just 18 minutes remained.

"The field conditions weren't good for either team, but it's especially difficult when you have to live with the pass," he said.

Powers said both teams had to play on the same field, but Washington State fullback Dan Doornink said he'd never played on harder turf.

"It was like concrete," he said. "I was knocked out twice."

Doornink, the game's leading rusher with 104 yards, also caught five passes for 70 yards in the second half, but his fumble on the Washington 10-yard line spoiled WSU's only chance to score before intermission.

Powers said the turnover hurt his team, and Washington's fourth touchdown, scored 13 seconds before halftime, proved too much to overcome.

"I really wasn't worried (at 21-0) because in a game like this you can come back from that much, but we thought we'd be down 21-7 at the half and then we were down 28-0," he said.

"The game was not decided in the first quarter because of their ability to score," James said. "I thought our defense played really well, especially for the people they went up against."

It was a big game for Husky quarterback Warren Moon, who completed 12 of 18 passes for 159 yards and rushed for 48.

"I've played against three of the best quarterbacks in the nation (Thompson, Cal's Charlie Young and Stanford's Guy Benjamin) and I think I've outplayed them all at least as far as doing the things a quarterback has to do to win," he said.

Longhorns' Campbell goes on a tear, 29-7

Arkansas humbles SMU, 47-7

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas running back Ben Cowins scored two touchdowns and rushed for 115 yards on 19 carries as the eighth-ranked Razorbacks whipped Southern Methodist, 47-7, Saturday in a final attempt to impress bowl representatives.

The victory boosted Arkansas' won-lost record to 9-1.

gave Arkansas a 7-0 lead with less than six minutes remaining in the first period. Cowins' 28-yard scoring burst up the middle made it 27-7 in the opening two minutes of the third period.

Steve Little, Arkansas' premier kicker, booted field goals of 18 and 20 yards. His second field goal gave him a career mark of 52, breaking the NCAA record of 51 set by Dave Lawson of Air Force. Little's second field goal sent SMU into the fieldhouse with four seconds left on the clock.

Cowins' running mate, Roland Sales, also contributed two touchdowns. Quarterback Ron Calcagni scored once and engineered touchdown drives of 81, 80 and 80 yards.

The Arkansas first unit did not play after Sales' second TD made it 34-7 with 5:43 left in the third quarter.

Arizona State stunned by Colorado State, 25-14

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Colorado State's aroused defense, spearheaded by tackle Mike Bell and linebacker Dana Isoline, accounted for a touchdown and a safety, and Tom Drake kicked three field goals as the Rams upset 12th-ranked Arizona State, 25-14, Saturday in Western Athletic Conference play.

The Sun Devils, suffering their first loss in conference play, were unable to move the ball effectively against the Ram defense, which received an assist from freezing temperatures and a second-half snowstorm.

The Rams, beating Arizona State for the first time in the history of the 16-game series, trailed 14-10 at halftime but went ahead early in the third quarter when Isoline intercepted a Dennis Sprout pass and returned 15 yards for a touchdown.

A victory by Arizona State over Arizona next Friday night would send the Sun Devils to the Fiesta Bowl.

foiled very long. He scored on a 25-yard touchdown run and carried the ball 31 times.

The Longhorn defense came in for its share of the glory, particularly tackle Brad Shearer who said, "We were tired of all that talk about how they manhandled us last year. We went out to show them we were not over-rated."

Baylor held Texas to 14 yards rushing in a 20-10 victory in 1976.

But Baylor coach Grant Teaff said, "It's a different Texas team this year. Texas is a great football team and I hope they go on and win the national championship. They just dominated the game in the second half."

Baylor linebacker Jerry Harrison said, "Earl Campbell is everything we expected. He is the best back we've faced... he's strong, has good balance and is real fast."

Gerald was asked what the feeling of the Ohio State players was about going to the Sugar Bowl.

"We're just fortunate to have an invitation to another bowl," said the quick-footed junior who completed 13 of 16 passes for 144 yards and ran for 52 yards. "Everybody wants to see coach Hayes play Bryant."

Gerald said he needed a cortisone shot to kill a nagging leg injury before the game. "It still hurt," he said.

He also confirmed that he aggravated the injury in the opening quarter. "It slowed me down quite a bit. I couldn't cut."

Hayes corrected Bo Schembechler's English, but for the second consecutive year he wasn't able to out-coach his old pupil. Schembechler, once an assistant under Hayes at Ohio State, tried to speak to his old mentor briefly before the game.

"I said something to him and he corrected my English," Schembechler said with a smile. "At the half I saw him again in the tunnel. I told him I said hello earlier, and you didn't know it was me." He said, "No it's: You didn't know it was I. Yeah, he's still my teacher."

Last year at Columbus, Schembechler's squad whitewashed the Buckeyes, 22-0.

"We're going to two Rose Bowls back-to-back. I remember when we won the championship (actually, tied for the title) three straight times (1972, 1973, 1974) and didn't go anywhere," Schembechler

Baylor used what amounted to an eight-man line trying to close down Campbell.

Texas (10-0 over-all, 7-0 in the SWC) needs to defeat Texas A&M next Saturday to gain the host spot in the Cotton Bowl, opposite Notre Dame, and the Longhorns' coach, Fred Akers, said, "We are not concerned that Notre Dame is going to be guest team. The only thing I am concerned about being there is us, and we are going to do everything we can to do just that... the Aggies are next."

Texas stunned Baylor for two quick first-quarter touchdowns and coasted to victory over the scrappy Bears, now 4-6 and 2-5 in league play.

Split end Alfred Jackson outfoxed Baylor on a 10-yard touchdown run on a reverse, then the 220-pound Campbell took over for an awesome 68-yard drive in two plays.

Campbell reared 43 yards to the Baylor 25, then broke three tackles to score on the next play and give Texas a 13-0 lead.

It was the ninth game in a row that Campbell has run for more than 100 yards and 20th time in his four-year career Campbell has surpassed 100 yards rushing.

A&M, ranked 14th in the nation, agreed to accept a Bluebonnet Bowl bid if it doesn't get the host spot in the Cotton Bowl.

Southern Cal will get the other spot in the Bluebonnet Bowl if it beats UCLA Friday. If USC loses, Washington will be invited.

Notre Dame accepted its third trip to the Cotton Bowl, hopeful of meeting top-ranked Texas in the Jan. 2 game at Dallas. Texas meets Texas A&M Saturday. If Texas wins, it clinches the Cotton berth. A&M needs to beat Texas and Houston, Dec. 3, to earn a trip to Dallas.

Washington opened a 21-0 lead with more than 200 yards total offense in the first quarter.

"I didn't anticipate that they'd score so early. I think we have a much better defense than that," he said. "We made it a little easy at first and it was tough to recover."

James said the frozen artificial turf and numbing cold hampered State's complex passing attack. Cougar quarterback Jack Thompson, third in the nation with 2,194 yards entering the contest, was held to nine yards passing in the first half and did not throw for a first down until just 18 minutes remained.

"The field conditions weren't good for either team, but it's especially difficult when you have to live with the pass," he said.

Powers said both teams had to play on the same field, but Washington State fullback Dan Doornink said he'd never played on harder turf.

"It was like concrete," he said. "I was knocked out twice."

Doornink, the game's leading rusher with 104 yards, also caught five passes for 70 yards in the second half, but his fumble on the Washington 10-yard line spoiled WSU's only chance to score before intermission.

Powers said the turnover hurt his team, and Washington's fourth touchdown, scored 13 seconds before halftime, proved too much to overcome.

"I really wasn't worried (at 21-0) because in a game like this you can come back from that much, but we thought we'd be down 21-7 at the half and then we were down 28-0," he said.

"The game was not decided in the first quarter because of their ability to score," James said. "I thought our defense played really well, especially for the people they went up against."

It was a big game for Husky quarterback Warren Moon, who completed 12 of 18 passes for 159 yards and rushed for 48.

"I've played against three of the best quarterbacks in the nation (Thompson, Cal's Charlie Young and Stanford's Guy Benjamin) and I think I've outplayed them all at least as far as doing the things a quarterback has to do to win," he said.

"They were able to stop us when we got in scoring range," Hayes said. "We moved the ball very well and our defense was sound. I was proud of both units."

"They didn't really move the ball on our defense and I wouldn't say their offense was particularly devastating. Their defense should receive great credit, for they stopped us when we were in scoring position."

Michigan's offense, nonexistent in the opening period, came to life in the second quarter behind the running and receiving of sub tailback Roosevelt Smith.

It marked the second year in a row Ohio State failed to dent arch-rival Michigan for a touchdown—last year's score was 22-0—and the triumph earned the Wolverines a return trip to the Rose Bowl.

"Our defense was terrific," Schenckbecher said. "The thing we had to do was overcome (Ohio State quarterback Rod) Gerald's quickness. His quickness overtook us early in the game. It took a while for us to adjust to that. We were out there just hanging in."

Irish make it eight in a row

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Vagas Ferguson blasted for three touchdowns including a 56-yard romp on Notre Dame's first play from scrimmage to send the sixth-ranked Irish to a 49-0 victory over Air Force Saturday and a trip to the Cotton Bowl.

The triumph was the eighth in a row for the Irish, now 9-1 with a Dec. 3 date remaining at Miami before the expected Cotton Bowl meeting Jan. 2 against top-ranked Texas.

Air Force closed its season with a 2-8 record as Ben Martin called it quits after 22 years of coaching, the last 20 at the academy.

Notre Dame scored on its first three possessions to take a 21-0 lead at the end of the first quarter. After his 56-yard touchdown run, Ferguson went across from the 9-yard line and Jerome Heavens added a 1-yard touchdown run.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Workhorse James Mayberry, shattering school records along the way, ran for 147 yards and one touchdown Saturday to lead Colorado to a 23-0 Big Eight Conference victory over Kansas State in the season finale for both teams.

Mayberry, a 5-foot-11 197-pounder, set a Colorado record for carries in a game with 40, as well as a school mark of seven games in a season with at least 100 yards a game. It was the fifth successive game in which the durable running back has carried for at least 100 yards and helped the Buffaloes to a season record 7-3-1.

The defeat dropped Kansas State to 1-10 on the season. It was the 21st consecutive loss by the Wildcats to a Big Eight team and the eighth in a row of the season.

Green scored on a 1-yard run with 8:30 left in the first seven minutes of the final period Saturday, rallying Boston College to a 34-7 victory over playoff-bound Massachusetts.

Notre Dame made it 35-0 at the half as Ferguson capped a 64-yard drive with a 2-yard touchdown run and quarterback Joe Montana hit Chris Haines with 33-yard scoring strike.

Coach Dan Devine yanked his first-string backfield after the first half and went with his reserves the rest of the way, but the Irish were able to add two more touchdowns to complete the romp.

Air Force's deepest penetration was in the first half to the Irish 48-yard line. The Falcons were unable to get a first down in the second half.

NEWARK, Del. (AP) — Halfback Craig Carroll rushed for 128 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as Delaware upset previously-unbeaten Colgate, 21-3.

Trailing 3-0 at halftime, Carroll put the Blue Hens ahead to stay when he snared a 75-yard touchdown pass from Jeff Komlo late in the third quarter. Delaware went on to raise its record to 6-3-1 and hand Colgate its first loss after 10 consecutive victories.

The Hens' defense held Colgate to 329 yards total offense, far below the 500-plus the Raiders averaged all season. Carroll finished the day with 128 yards on the ground and 75 yards through the air for the finest game of his career.

Bethke sparks Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Junior quarterback Brian Bethke, running for one touchdown and passing for another, enabled underdog Kansas to continue its dominance of Missouri with a 24-22 victory Saturday in the Big Eight finale for both teams.

Bethke, sidelined until Thursday with a bad ankle, triggered a 17-point, second-quarter explosion which gave the Jayhawks a 24-10 lead at the half.

Missouri rallied for a 31-yard field goal by Jeff Brockhaus in the third quarter and an 18-yard touchdown run by David Newman in the final period, but its comeback died when a fourth-down play was short at the Kansas 27 with 1:35 left.

The victory was the Jayhawks' third in a row over Missouri and their sixth in the past seven games in the oldest college football rivalry west of the Mississippi. Kansas completed the season 2-4-1 in Big Eight play and 3-7-1 over-all. Missouri finished 3-4 and 4-7.

"A lot of kickers never played other positions," Frank Corral said. "I have. I've always been part of the team. I'm a football player. I'm a Bruin."

Ben Agajanian's first rule for placekickers is to kick the damn thing and get the hell out.

How do you think he survived 20 years in professional football? Frank Corral had other ideas.

In UCLA's opening game at Houston this year, he wanted to be a hero.

"I was trying to stop the ball carrier," he explains.

So Corral spent the next six weeks eating through a straw, his fractured jaw wired shut.

USC, which will try to foil the Bruins' Rose Bowl plans Friday night, should know that Corral comes by his bravado naturally. He was born in Chihuahua and is a distant kin of Pancho Villa.

"My great, great aunt was his last wife," Corral says. "She has a museum down there. I've never been there. My dad just tells me all the stories."

The writer is one up on Corral. He has visited the Pancho Villa Museum in Chihuahua, studied the remains of his arsenal and met Dona Luz Corrales Sierra Villa, a charming lady who remains sharp as a sabre.

PANCHO CORRAL came to the U.S. with his family when he was 2.

"See, in Mexico my last name is Corrales," Frank explains. "When my dad came over here there were so many mixups that it ended up Corral."

The family first moved to Fairfield near San Francisco, then settled in Riverside where Frank grew up. He learned to kick playing soccer with the East L.A. Boys Club but also adopted the gringo games. He has never suffered the isolation of most kickers.

"A lot of kickers never played other positions," Frank says. "I have—running back, linebacker—and I've always been part of the team. We'll go have a couple of beers after a game."

"When you're on the field you're alone, and during the game you've got to be alone to concentrate, but I've never wanted to drift off. Here I've been involved."

"A lot of kickers weren't brought up in the same environment as other players, with the same kind of talk. A lot of times when somebody asks what they do they'll say, 'I'm the kicker.' I say, 'I'm a football player. I'm a Bruin.'"

THAT, FOLKS, is what got Frank into trouble. He not only placekicks but punts for the Bruins. He was injured covering one of his punts. The ball carrier's helmet caught him on the shoulder and rammed up into his jaw.

"I hit the ground and my mouth was squirting blood," Corral says. "I knew it was broken."

He was given a pain pill and emergency treatment in the dressing room, then dressed and

He was given a pain pill and emergency treatment in the dressing room, then dressed and watched the second half from the sideline.

"I was just thinking, wow, am I gonna come back? Am I gonna have to redshirt?"

"You go through a lot of frustrating moments. You can't eat and you can't talk too good. I had to turn down a couple of reporters. I'd try to say words and they wouldn't understand me."

Corral is bi-lingual, but Spanish was worse than English.

"I'd try to say those Rs and my tongue would be rolling around the wires," Frank says.

A LARGER problem was eating. Frank found his wife Martha to be very resourceful.

"She made some delicious stews, then strained 'em. She made chicken soup. She'd whip me up milkshakes, eggnoos, anything we could throw in the blender."

Still, Corral lost 30 pounds from his listed 236, some of which he could spare, although he would not recommend a broken jaw as a reducing method.

The expertise he acquired is now shared with Rick Obbema, the inside linebacker who the same injury last week.

"I have this book they gave me at the Medical Center that I have to give to Rick," Corral says. "It tells how to liquefy almost everything: pork chops, steaks. He says they're gonna look a little odd but, heck, you've got to eat 'em."

"The only thing I liquefied was chicken and it tasted good, but you have your teeth closed and a lot of it gets stuck. Rick is realizing that now. He says, 'How do you get it out of there?' I say, 'Take a toothpick and pick it out.'"

Frank John Corral, 22, has been married for nearly two years but Martha lives in Riverside with their daughter while he commutes or stays with a sister near UCLA.

"She was my high school girl," Frank says. "She's a clerk for a jeweler in Riverside and I'm planning to settle down there, so I'm getting everything arranged before the pro draft. We'll be together the rest of our lives."

IN HIS two seasons, Corral has kicked 66 of 71 extra points—all 21 this season—and 16 of 35 field goals, including a school record shot of 55 yards against Oregon last year. He was the all-Pacific-8 punter last year with an average of 44.6 yards.

Corral hopes to play in the NFL but realizes it is a shaky life for kickers.

"If you have an off-day, they say goodbye," he says.

He no longer has an idol.

"It was Ray Guy until I heard about those helium balls," Frank says. "Do you think it's possible?"

Of course not. But the Trojans better not mess around with Pancho Corral, just the same.

Stanford eyes Sun Bowl after Cal blitz

STANFORD (AP)—Guy Benjamin threw a victory-clinching touchdown pass and freshman halfback Darrin Nelson surpassed 1,000 yards rushing for the season Saturday as Stanford beat California, 21-3, and the Cardinals accepted a bid to the Sun Bowl immediately after the game.

Benjamin, college football's leading passer, will be matched against one of the nation's top rushers, Charles Alexander of LSU, when Stanford faces the Tigers Dec. 31 in El Paso. Nelson, Benjamin and receiver James Lofton contributed spectacular performances to the Stanford offense and the Cardinals' defense rose to the occasion in bringing home a victory in the 80th Big Game.

"We got a little jump on them and then our defense held them off. They were darn close two or three times, but we stopped them," said Bill Walsh, the first-year coach whose team posted an 8-3 record, which beat Washington State Saturday to clinch at least a tie for the conference title.

Stanford went in a slight underdog but was in control after taking the opening kickoff and driving 78 yards for a touchdown. Nelson carried five times for 39 yards and fullback Phil Francis plunged the final two.

The Cardinals went 80 yards in the second period, with Benjamin completing three passes for 67 yards, and Francis scoring again on a one-yard run.

Cal, 7-4 for the year and 3-4 in the Pac-8, went without a touchdown for the only time this season, settling for Jim Breach's 50th career field goal, a 48-yard kick early in the third quarter. The Bears were stopped three times

Frosh leads Ducks to first win

EUGENE (AP)—Freshman Gary Beck rushed for 131 yards and threw a key 65-yard half-back pass in the third quarter, and Ken Nutting bulled for two touchdowns Saturday to lead Oregon to a 28-16 victory over Oregon State.

and improved the Ducks season record to 2-9 overall and 1-6 in the conference.

Quarterback Jack Henderson guided Oregon after sitting out the last two games with a knee injury. He completed 11 of 18 passes for 163 yards and a touchdown.

Oregon made it 14-0 after Scott Satterlund recovered quarterback Kyle Grossart's fumble at the Beaver 19-yard line.

Beck threw to Ken Page on a six-yard play that put the ball on the Beaver four in Oregon's first drive and set up the Beaver's first touchdown.

Alexander paces LSU past stubborn Tulane

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Charles Alexander raced for 180 yards and freshman Chris Williams returned a punt 82 yards for a touchdown, leading LSU to a 20-17 victory over surprisingly stubborn Tulane Saturday night.

Alexander broke the single-season Southeastern Conference rushing record of John Dettley of Mississippi in 1949. Alexander now has gained 1,440 yards for the season. He still has one regular-season game remaining, against Wyoming, before LSU plays Stanford in the Sun Bowl Dec. 31.

Alexander rushed 36 times. LSU came into the game a three-touchdown favorite, but fell behind in the opening minutes, when Tulane scored on a 43-yard field goal by Ed Murray. LSU did not take the lead for good until nine minutes remained in the game, when Williams gathered in a punt, raced for the left sideline and turned upfield for his touchdown. Earlier in the second half, Williams had a 50-yard punt return nullified by a clipping penalty. Tulane matched Alexander's rushes with pinpoint passing by quarterback Roch Houtas. After Murray put Tulane ahead 3-0, Alexander put LSU in front briefly with a 1-yard touchdown plunge early in the second quarter. Tulane scored twice in the final two minutes of the first half.

Clemson escapes S. Carolina trap

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Steve Fuller threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to Jerry Butler with 49 seconds to play to give Clemson a 31-27 victory over traditional rival South Carolina Saturday.

The 15th-ranked Tigers saw their 24-0 lead vanish in a furious South Carolina attack that put 27 points on the board late in the game. But steady Fuller completed the Tigers on a 20-yard touchdown pass in the final minutes before hitting Butler with the game-winning pass. With two minutes to play, Ron Bass passed 40 yards to Phil Logan for a touchdown to put South Carolina ahead for the only time, 27-24. Clemson dominated the game between the cross-state rivals until late in the third period when the Gamecocks solved the riddle of the Tiger defense and got on the scoreboard with the game's most spectacular play, a 77-yard touchdown run by Spencer Clark.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — George Scott rushed for 173 yards and scored on a 13-yard pass from Larry Dick as Maryland overcame first-half mistakes, whipped Virginia, 28-0, Saturday, and accepted a bid to play Minnesota in the inaugural Hall of Fame Classic at Birmingham.

The post-season game on Dec. 22 will be Maryland's fifth consecutive bowl appearance, even though the Terps finished with a 7-4 record, their worst mark in five years.

End best season (10-1) in 27 years Kentucky rallies, 21-17

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Derrick Ramsey's one-yard plunge capped an 80-yard fourth-quarter touchdown drive that gave seventh-ranked Kentucky a 21-17 Southeastern Conference comeback victory over Tennessee Saturday. The Wildcats, completing their best season in 27 years with a 10-1 record, got the winning drive under way on a 36-yard pass from reserve quarterback Mike Deaton to Felix Wilson.

Ramsey, playing despite a bruised shoulder, returned on a third-and-five situation at the Volunteer 39, hammered six yards on the first play and drove his team the distance.

Ramsey's score came with 5:23 left in the game and completed Kentucky's first perfect season in conference competition.

Miss. St. bounces Ol' Miss, 18-14

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Bruce Threadgill scored one touchdown and passed for another Saturday as Mississippi State overcame a disastrous start and overpowered arch-rival Mississippi, 18-14.

State, showing little defense and no offense during the first quarter, got two field goals to narrow the halftime gap to eight points. Threadgill raced 42 yards for a third-quarter score and hit split end Mardye McDole on a 26-yard touchdown pass in the fourth period. The Rebels scored on two Tim Ellis runs, the first for one yard after an 80-yard drive and another for seven yards.

Explosivo snares Irvine Handicap at Los Alamitos

Explosivo captured his second stakes championship Saturday when he held off a stretch challenge by Best Exit to win the $21,355 Irvine Handicap at Los Alamitos Race Course.

Explosivo, winner of the Pacifica Stakes at Golden Gate Fields in June, was sent off as a 6-5 favorite by the crowd of 11,522. Explosivo sat a comfortable fourth under the rein of jockey Francisco Mena around the first two turns in the mile and one-sixteenth race. The 3-year-old colt made a move in the backstretch to challenge Your Dancer and Proper Kid, the two early pacesetters.

At the top of the stretch, Explosivo and fast-closing Best Exit, the second of the afternoon for

Governor Skipper wins rich Shapiro

Odds-on favorite Governor Skipper, leading candidate for Horse of the Year honors, was fully extended to hold off Try Scotch's furious closing charge, but won the $100,000 L.K. Shapiro Stakes Saturday night at Hollywood Park in stakes record time.

The margin of victory was a neck, and the final clocking was 1:55.4, one second slower than the track record. Crash finished third in the field of seven.

Driven by John Chapman, the three-year-old son of Meadow Skipper led practically from start to finish while cutting out blazing fractions of :28 1/2 and :57 1/2. He opened a two-length lead in mid-stretch but needed all of his reserve speed to withstand Try Scotch's late bid.

The victory was worth $50,000 to the colt's owners, and boosted Governor Skipper's 1977 bankroll to $572,148. It was his 17th win in 29 starts this year and his fifth in a hundred career.

Governor Skipper paid $2.60, $2.40 and $2.10 across the board. Try Scotch paid $3 and $2.20, while Crash returned $2.20 to show.

Explosivo returned $4.60, $3.20 and $2.80 and earned a paycheck of $12,355 to increase his season earnings to more than $52,000.

The victory marked the fifth time that Explosivo has returned to the winner's circle in 12 starts in 1977.

Best Exit, a 6-1 longshot in the field of seven 3-year-olds, returned $1.40 and $3.40 while Proper Kid paid $6.40 to show.

The victory in the Irvine was the second of the afternoon for Mena and his 11th of the meeting, second to Ramirez's 14. The afternoon crowd pushed $1,684,053 through the pari-mutuel windows, the second largest handle in track history. With only two days remaining in the meet, the average handle is $1,319,870.

Today at Los Alamitos, veteran jockey Donald Pierce will make his debut when he leads Sibirri postward in the $30,000-added Orange County Handicap.

Santa Ana closes with first victory

Mike Merk scored two touchdowns and passed for a third Saturday night to lead Santa Ana Junior College to a 30-28 season-ending victory over Cerritos and its first win of the season.

Merk scored on a 12-yard pass in the first quarter, ran seven yards for a second quarter touchdown and threw a 61-yard scoring pass on the first play of the second half.

Jim Copeland ran for a game-high 103 yards and scored two touchdowns for Cerritos. The Falcons drove 86 yards in 18 plays in the closing minutes, but their effort came up short when Tom Martin missed a 20-yard field goal attempt with 57 seconds to play.

Santa Ana finished the year 1-7-1 while Cerritos was 2-8, its worst record ever.

Busy holiday for 49er VB, Yarbrough is not satisfied—yet

By Elaine Risinger Staff Writer

Thanksgiving week should prove one of the busiest of the season for Long Beach volleyball and basketball teams. Spiker fans will see top play at the WAIW regional Friday and Saturday in the LBSU men's and women's gyms. The cagers will open their season at home Monday evening then travel to Plainview, Tex., for the Queen's Classic tournament.

The best eight schools in the small and large college divisions will battle for a berth in the nationals during volleyball playoffs. Defending national champion USC will be back to defend its title among the large schools. Also expected to participate are UCLA—number two in the conference—Pepperdine, San Diego, Stanford and San Jose State. Long Beach State, which is ranked in the top 20 nationally, earns a berth as host school.

The final game of the tournament, Saturday, will begin a good preview of what volleyball fans can see in the nationals," said 49er head coach Dixie Grimmer. She feels the Trojans are the logical favorites.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

First round play of the double elimination tournament will begin Friday at 9 a.m. and continue throughout the day. Saturday's matches start at 9, with small college finals set for 6 p.m. and the large school title to be decided at 8.

An all-season pass is available for $5, general admission, and $2.50 students. Daily admission for the preliminary sessions is $2, general, and $1 students. Admission for the finals will be $2.50, general, and $1.50, students.

THE LBSU basketball squad will face University of New Mexico, runner-up last year in its own region, when the 49ers open to hometown support. Coach Fran Schaaf, who has kept her team hard at work for weeks, said, "I'm pleased with practice, and we are ready to play someone." The game starts at 7:30 p.m.

Starting at center will be Monica Havelka. Forwards will be Barbara Mosler and Kim Maddox, a freshman from L.A. High and one of two California girls named as high school All-Americans. Guards will be Ernie Stith and transfer Julie Tialevea from Miracosta College in the San Diego area.

To back them up, Fran has great depth on the bench. Guards include Cathy Sutton and Janie Junger, both of whom are playing extremely well, and Stearns Marshall, "who is good on defense with lots of aggressiveness."

Far forward are Toni Bell, an outstanding transfer from Long Beach City College, and Anna Johnson returning after a year off due to surgery. Back up centers are Trish Reis, a senior, and Barbara Orange, a much improved returning player.

The 49ers will leave Wednesday for Texas and the season tournament hosted by Wayland College, one of the top teams nationally. LBSU has drawn University of Missouri in the first round and, if successful, will face Wayland next.

Looking over her conference schedule, Fran sees UCLA, with Ann Meyers and Anita Ortega, as a continuing threat. The Bruins have seven varsity players returning with 6' 1" forward center Denise Curry, the All-American from Davis, as the only recruit. "USC will be improved," Fran said, "and San Diego is a scrappy team." Cal State Fullerton is "iffy" with some players lost, including Nancy Dunkle, who this year is handling the coaching assignment.

LOOKING FORWARD to the state tournament Dec. 1-3 at Golden West College are Viking field hockey team members.

The Long Beach City College squad split games last week ending East Los Angeles, 3-0 Tuesday, then losing to Golden State, 4-0. In the earlier match, Melody Pritchard scored on a pass from Janice Johnson in the first half. During second half play, Karen McVicar added a tally on a rush at goal after a shot by Pritchard. Pritchard came through with the final score.

The Vikings kept Golden West scoreless till the final minutes of the first half when the Rustlers knocked in three. The final score came during the second half when the Vikings scored short due to injuries.

Terry Wohlgemuth had a super game as goalie and was responsible for a great many saves, said Coach Kaye Von Gemen. "Karen McVicar played her best defensive game of the year."

CERRITOS volleyball team routed Mt. San Antonio College in three games, 15-11, 15-6, 15-8, last week with solid performances from Joan Marschke, Peggy Brachen and Linda Kretschmer.

For the Long Beach City College volleyball team, the news was not as pleasant. The Vikings were beaten by Pierce and Bakersfield College. In both matches, LBCC lost the first two games and was never quite able to gather momentum.

Coach Donna Prindle praised Debbie Adcox's setting, the blocking of Chris Mel, Antasia Hill, Joanne Lintner and Christy Carney, who has really come on the last half of the season.

CIT NOTE: Millikan won first round volleyball play against Mater Dei, 15-12, 9-15, 15-9. Wilson bowed to St. Paul and St. Anthony to Cypress.

Boy 'cool' after kidnap, rescue

BURLINGAME (AP) — Young Niels Legallet, unharmed, cool and seemingly unaffected by his 15-hour ordeal, was back at home this weekend after he was kidnapped on his way to school by two masked men.

"He's a very stable boy," said his mother, Kirsten Legallet, whose home Saturday was filled with joy and relief over her 11-year-old son's safe return.

Niels, son of a prominent San Francisco businessman and member of a pioneer California family whose roots go back to 1860, was rescued late Friday night by police and FBI agents who burst into a suburban motel and found him tied up in a sleeping bag but unhurt.

"Boy, this is great!" yelled

Niels excitedly when about 10 lawmen kicked down the door of a San Carlos motel and arrested a young man agents identified as a former employee of the boy's father.

"I feel very relieved and very happy," said Mrs. Legallet. "The boy is just fine. We're all sort of taking it easy right now. You can imagine."

Mrs. Legallet said Niels is being very cool about his experience. She said Niels did not know either one of his abductors, but had met one of them on the street last Thursday and was asked whether he knew a certain person.

The mother described the episode as a "stakeout" of her son, probably for identification purposes.

Niels was found about a half-hour after his father, Jok Legallet, vice-president of the Legallet Tanning and Legallet Wool companies, delivered a $30,000 ransom aboard a Southern Pacific Railway train en route from here to nearby San Carlos. All day long, authorities had denied rumors of a $30,000 ransom demand.

Police and FBI agents met the train at the San Carlos station, arrested John Joseph Reiser, 19, of Belmont and recovered the cash, according to Burlingame Police Chief Fred Palmer.

Officers said that after Reiser was questioned, units were dispatched to a Menlo Park motel where the boy was found in a room with Scott Timmons, 18, also of Belmont.

Neither suspect put up a struggle, Palmer said at a news conference after the boy had been returned to his family. Both suspects were booked for investigation of kidnapping, and additional charges may be filed later, Palmer said. No bail was set for either suspect.

Their arraignment was scheduled for Monday.

The boy was kidnapped Friday morning while walking with a friend to the Hoover Elementary School in his family's upper-income neighborhood here. Palmer said the kidnappers wore ski masks but displayed no weapons.

Secret Witness case summary

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 77 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $52,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and armed robbery conviction of two violence-prone, shot-firing bandits who have beaten, choked and pistol-whipped employees and patients during a series of holdups of doctors' offices throughout the Long Beach area since July, 1977. The bandits are described as a "Mutt and Jeff" (one tall, one short) team of black men.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killers of Compton restaurant manager Roger Henniger, 32, shot to death in his office at the Sizzler restaurant, 1715 N. Bulfinch Road, during a robbery by two gunmen at 10 p.m. July 22, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Adrian Pace Jr., 17, shot to death in front of his Elm Street apartment in Long Beach during an altercation with two unknown suspects at 10:25 p.m. June 24, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Camilla Stassi, 20-year-old coed found raped and stabbed to death in her Long Beach apartment in the 500 block of W. Eighth St. on the night of Jan. 17, 1977.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and robbery conviction of two masked bandits who held up the manager and clerk at Eddie's Liquor Store, 301 Market St., at 7 a.m. on April 25, 1977, and fled with the loot in the manager's car.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Antonio Magallon, 39, shot to death by unknown assailants following an argument outside his Wilmington home in the 100 block of West D Street at 11:30 p.m. on April 1, 1977.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans Avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts. Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column.

Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not publicized in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Hey, Have a Nice HAPPY THANKSGIVING

No big message folks, just a simple thought up front. We have a lot to be thankful for as Americans. Let's hope this season will bring a better time for all people in this world. It's a great American holiday and, as we sit down to our Thanksgiving meal, let's be thankful for all we have. The world envies us for one thing above all... freedom to do and to be. That's worth a giving of thanks, right?

WHY

career at

REX L. HODGES

REALTY COMPANY

BERNIE JONES
Vice-President, Gen. Sales Mgr.

WHY A CAREER AT REX L. HODGES REALTY?

Answer: You have more going for you. "IT IS JUST THAT SIMPLE," stated Bernie Jones, Vice-President/General Sales Manager. Rex L. Hodges Realty has been in business since 1929. That's over 48 years in the Long Beach/Orange County basin. We are a "Family of Companies." Today more than ever before we all value a family relationship. Our family extends from Robert C. Westmyer, owner of Rex L. Hodges Realty, to one of our newer salespersons Steve Smith, who recently joined Rex L. Hodges at our Westminster Village office. Steve formerly owned a large hamburger franchise. Everyday we are striving to make "Our Company" a better Company.

The Real Estate market is pretty well saturated in every city, so there has to be reason to choose REX L. HODGES REALTY and after 48 years in this business we know what the differences are: We also feel the programs we offer to salespersons, and also to the customers, who will be selling their homes, and the persons who will purchase homes in 1977 will enable you, the salesman, to provide 100% coverage. When Rex L. Hodges Realty offers the services, we are aware we have that extra edge coupled with 48 years of sound, confident service. A solid family atmosphere and you have a winner.

JUST LOOK AT THE DIFFERENCES

Growth: We recently opened our new Seal Beach office on Pacific Coast Highway. Juanita Newman, the manager, is a fine example of the great opportunity at Rex L. Hodges company.

If management is in your plans, plan a career with Rex L. Hodges Realty.

In 1976 Rex L. Hodges Realty purchased Pacific Bay Real Estate in Northern California serving the East Bay area including Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond. Now! That's growth, and we are negotiating with others at this very time.

Equity Loans! Your customers can take advantage of a "no payment" part of their equity loan and repay when their home has sold.

Training and Counselling: A professional never stops training and retraining. A license allows you to sell. Rex L. Hodges Realty shows you how to match the right buyer and the right home, and how to market that owner's home to get it sold. Real Estate is a very rewarding profession and yet there are many different problems that arise, and when a Company has fellows like Earl J. Christensen, Vice-President, and Terry Mulholland, Vice-President, you have two of the finest minds in General Real Estate in the State of California. When you join Rex L. Hodges you join our family and families seem to have a way of overcoming any or all of the difficulties that arise.

Trade in Program: An absolute must in the 70's. Our Trade-In Program is not some hit or miss proposition. It works. We pioneered "Trade-Ins" in 1929. Think about it.

H & H Development Co. H & H Development Co. is a subsidiary of Rex L. Hodges, a part of our family. We build apartments, condominiums, shopping centers and medical offices. We will also build for your clients on their buildable lots. All H & H properties are covered by a Builder's One Year Warranty. Another good reason to start your career at Rex L. Hodges.

HOME WARRANTIES: *LIMITED WARRANTY

When you purchase your next home specify you want an American Home Shield Warranty. (*This one year warranty protects your home against the defects or malfunction of the major systems, appliances, and hot water heater, garbage disposal, dishwasher and last but not least waste and drainline stoppages). So call the nearest Rex L. Hodges office and specify that you want an American Home Shield One Year Warranty and leave the shopping to us.

When you sell your home please remember that when your home is listed with Rex L. Hodges Realty, if you so desire, your home will be covered by American Home Shield Warranty. Ask the salesperson about the details. Better still call and we will deliver the brochures with information. Well, we ran out of space, but I hope that maybe we have told the Rex L. Hodges story and remember there is a difference when you join our family.

Cordially yours,
Bernie Jones

Bernie Jones

WHAT'S WRONG, B.C.?

I DON'T KNOW...

I GUESS I THINK TOO MUCH ABOUT PEOPLE WHO AREN'T AS FORTUNATE AS WE ARE.

YOU'RE SWEET.

BROOM-HILDA

I JUST HEARD A NEW COUNTRY + WESTERN SONG.

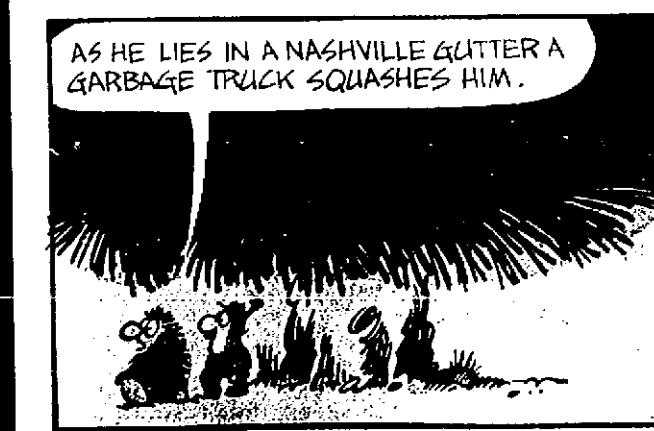

IT'S ABOUT THIS FELLA WHO LOSES HIS NOSE IN A SAWMILL ACCIDENT AND GETS FIRED.

ALL NINE OF HIS KIDS WIND UP SELLING PIMPLE CREAM DOOR TO DOOR TO RAISE MONEY FOR THEIR DERANGED GURU.

HIS WIFE THEN BURNS DOWN THEIR MOBILE HOME AND IS SUBSEQUENTLY ARRESTED FOR TEASING ALLIGATORS.

AS HE LIES IN A NASHVILLE GUTTER A GARBAGE TRUCK SQUASHES HIM.

AND ON HIS WAY TO HEAVEN HE'S CAUGHT IN A VIOLENT ELECTRICAL STORM AND CHARCOAL BROILED.

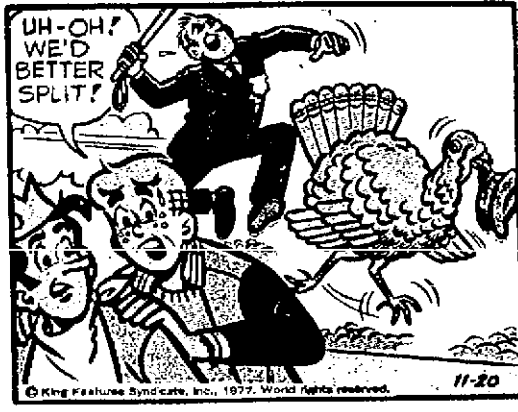

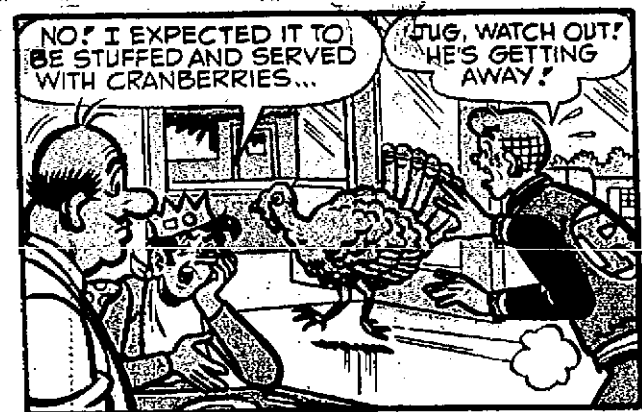

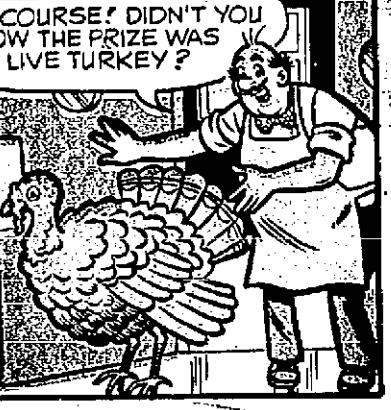

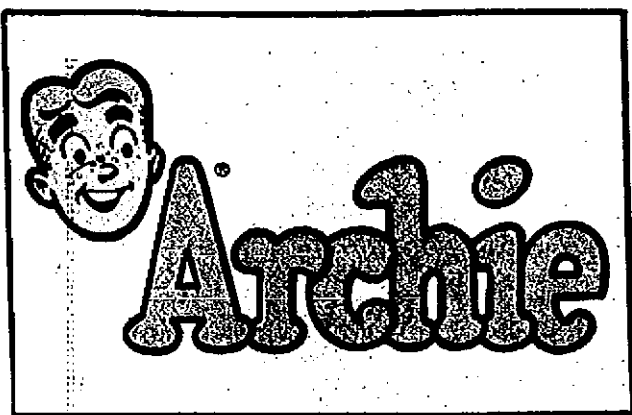

MY MY... WHAT'S THAT SONG CALLED?

'THE FUNNY LITTLE TRICKS THAT LIFE PLAYS.'

VERY CATCHY.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Now that ex-President Gerald Ford is writing his memoirs, can we find out (1) why he fired James Schlesinger and William Colby and (2) if it is true that his Secretary of State Henry Kissinger kept him from Frank Sinatra?—V.T.T., Riverside, Cal.

A. Ford fired James Schlesinger as his defense secretary because of a personality clash. He simply did not like Schlesinger, his demeanor, his attitude, his didactic behavior pattern. Schlesinger is a relatively easy man for a politician to dislike. Ford replaced William Colby as director of the CIA with George Bush because he felt someone had to assume the liability for the CIA sins of commission, and the "fall guy" was Colby.

As for Kissinger keeping Ford from Sinatra, Kissinger never did any such thing. One time when Ford was visiting Palm Springs, Kissinger tried to arrange a dinner with the Sinatras, the Fords, the Kissingers and the Lew Wassermans of MCA. Ford's advisers heard of the dinner and counseled him not to attend, pointing out that the White House press, whose members had accompanied Ford to Palm Springs, would surely learn of it and tie Ford to Sinatra, who of course had previously been linked with Spiro Agnew. Kissinger pooh-poohed that advice, suggested that Ford dine with Sinatra, but then later changed his mind and called off the dinner.

CLARK GABLE AND WIFE SYLVIA HAWKES

Q. Who was the notorious woman who broke up the storybook marriage between Mary Pickford and the late Douglas Fairbanks?—Eugenia Wells, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. She was Sylvia Hawkes, the daughter of a London footman. A beauty in her youth, she was married to Lord Anthony Ashley, Douglas Fairbanks Sr., Lord Edward Stanley, Clark Gable, and Georgian Prince Dimitri Djordjadze. Lady Sylvia Ashley, as she was known, died in Beverly Hills of cancer on June 30, 1977, at age 73. When she was married to Clark Gable, the actor said of her, "She spends dough as if there were no tomorrow."

Q. Has anyone written the full and truthful story of the late Martha Mitchell, whom Richard Nixon holds responsible in part for the fall of his Administration?—D.L., Pine Bluff, Ark.

A. Winzola McLendon, a Washington correspondent who knew Martha Mitchell well, has signed with Random House to write "Martha, a Biography of Martha Mitchell." The book will probably be published sometime in 1978.

Q. Was former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey ever married to a prostitute?—B. T., New York City.

A. In his autobiography, "Dempsey," written with his stepdaughter Barbara Piatelli Dempsey, the former heavyweight champion says that his first wife, Maxine Cates Dempsey, was a member of the world's oldest profession.

Q. Ryan O'Neal recently entered into a deal with Paramount Pictures known as play-or-pay. What kind of deal is that?—Lois Marx, Taunton, Mass.

A. A play-or-pay deal is one in which the studio or the network agrees to pay the star a certain amount of money if it doesn't start a production by a particular date. There are several variations. O'Neal, who starred in "Love Story" with Ali MacGraw several years ago, has agreed to star in a sequel for Paramount for $3 million and 15 percent of the net profits in addition to a play-or-pay fee of $250,000. Thus, if Paramount decides to shelve the script, the company has to pay O'Neal $250,000.

Q. About actress Vanessa Redgrave, the English firebrand—how many children does she have and who fathered them in and out of wedlock?—F. L., Syracuse, N.Y.

A. Only those persons directly involved in the motion picture industry are eligible to join the academy—actors, art directors, cinematographers, directors, executives, producers, sound men, writers, and so forth. A member of the industry must be sponsored by two members of the academy to gain admittance.

Q. Is President Carter's mother, "Miz Lilly," available for show-biz offers?—V. L., Mobile, Ala.

A. The President's mother recently was taped for a TV program in which she discussed the activities of her son Jimmy during the 1957-63 period, the era with which the TV show deals.

Q. What is the connection between Jonas Salk, inventor of the Salk polio vaccine, and Pablo Picasso, the late Spanish painter? Were they both married to sisters or the same woman or what?—D. B., Laguna Beach, Cal.

A. Dr. Jonas Salk is married to the former Françoise Gilot, who lived with and had two children by Pablo Picasso. The two children—Claude, 30, and Paloma, 28—will enjoy with Maya Widmacher, 42, Picasso's third illegitimate child, an inheritance of about $17 million each. Picasso, who died in April 1973, declined to leave a will. He said, "Trying to divide what I leave will be a mess, worse than anything you can imagine." Picasso was pretty nearly right. It took more than four years to settle his estate.

Would the World Be Different If Lee Harvey Oswald Had Missed?

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C.

It was all over in six seconds. Three shots in rapid succession cut down President John F. Kennedy, shattered Camelot and changed history. Fourteen years have now passed since that dreadful day in Dallas. One news shock has followed another from Vietnam to Watergate. These depressing events have raised a tantalizing question: Would the world be any different today if the presumed assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, had missed his target?

Had Kennedy lived, he would have been 60 years old now. Those who knew him best, the aides and advisers who were familiar with his plans, believe the world would have been brighter. For, in their opinion, more than a President was killed in Dallas; a promise for the future died with him. I have questioned them in depth about what might have been. Their answers are revealing.

Skeptical of military

• Would Kennedy have kept us out of the Vietnam War? Kennedy had lost confidence, his associates agree, in the military advisers who later promised Lyndon Johnson victory in Vietnam. The Bay of Pigs fiasco left him skeptical and suspicious of the military. His close friend, ex-Sen. George Smathers (D., Fla.), remembers hearing Kennedy declare angrily: "Those dumb bastards in the military don't know what they are doing. They will tell you things that will snarl you in things, because they like war. That's the way they have of getting ahead, of getting promotions."

Concludes Smathers: "I think because of his bad experience in Cuba, Kennedy was not being persuaded by them. He was beginning to get sick of the war. He said to me that this thing wasn't going well. He said Eisenhower, whom he didn't think very bright, was right when he said we shouldn't get involved in a land war in Asia. Kennedy told me: 'Old Eisenhower had more sense than these people. They didn't get him suckered in.'"

Aides who worked for both Presidents agree that Kennedy resisted a military solution but that Johnson was "suckered" by the Pentagon. Kennedy's top assistant, Ted Sorensen, recalls that the military brass "repeatedly urged him to send troops in" but that "his answer was always 'no.'" Explains Sorensen: "Kennedy was a highly-rational human being. He knew what was working, what was not working."

Other aides remember, in contrast, that Johnson was impressed with the military brass and was easily persuaded by their advice. Recalls Myer Feldman, White House legal counsel under both men: "I was shocked when the Joint Chiefs decided and Lyndon Johnson went along with sending 550,000 troops into Vietnam. It was inconsistent with the discussions we had."

Rusk unsure on Vietnam

The only uncertainty comes from Kennedy's Secretary of State, Dean Rusk. "During much of 1963," he says, "we were optimistic about the way things were going in Vietnam. [Kennedy] had made no decisions as to whether the U.S. should withdraw." Rusk contends that "nobody can possibly know" what Kennedy would have done about Vietnam. But Sorensen is emphatic: "We would not have sent in combat forces. We would not have bombed North Vietnam. The Marines would never have landed."

It is possible, however, that Kennedy would have kept the special forces in Vietnam. He once told me that conventional warfare was the wrong way to defend South Vietnam. It required a crack counter-insurgency force, he said, to cope with the Communist guerrillas. He formed the special forces to train the South Vietnamese how to combat guerrilla warfare, he added.

Associates agree this was the Kennedy concept; he felt the Joint Chiefs were pushing the wrong strategy. Smathers recalls this Kennedy comment: "It isn't that kind of war. Hell, how can you fight a war when everybody looks exactly alike?"

• Would Kennedy have been reelected? The political pros generally agree he would have won a second term easily. "He looked in good shape," recalls his political manager, Larry O'Brien. "We were confident about 1964."

Bay of Pigs boner

His biggest boner, the Bay of Pigs disaster, did him no political damage. He faced up to it at once. "I'm going to the American people and tell them I've goofed and pledge that I'll do better in the future," his aides remember him saying. Recounts O'Brien: "We were amazed at that kind of candor. But the polls reflected an upswing. We thought it would be a disaster, but it turned out to be otherwise."

The late President's brother, Sen. Ted Kennedy (D., Mass.), says JFK used to speculate about the ticket the Republicans would put up against him. "He thought their dream ticket would be a combination of Nelson Rockefeller and Barry Goldwater," the Senator says. As O'Brien remembers the speculation, they thought Rockefeller would be "a worthy opponent" but that Goldwater should be "easy to defeat."

• Would Kennedy have dumped Lyndon Johnson? Johnson went through a political menopause during his Vice Presidency, and it began to get on Kennedy's nerves. As George Smathers tells it, "Johnson was pouting, moping all over the place. Kennedy called and asked me what the hell to do. I said send him on a trip." Smathers recalls Kennedy's response: "That's a damn good idea. How far away can I send him?" Not long afterward, Johnson was dispatched on a goodwill mission to the far ends of the Far East.

Feldman remembers "some mention of dumping Johnson in 1964" but doubts that Kennedy would have abandoned his Vice President. Most White House aides recall that Kennedy treated Johnson with respect and insisted they do likewise. "They didn't socialize," recalls O'Brien. "Their relationship was a professional association, one of mutual respect."

Papa Joe admired LBJ

Ted Kennedy notes that their father was "a strong admirer of Lyndon Johnson." The implication was that old Joe Kennedy would have influenced his son to keep Johnson on the ticket.

• Who would have taken over the White House in 1968? A retiring President usually has the power to determine who shall replace him on the ticket. The likely contenders in 1968 would have been Vice President Lyndon Johnson and Attorney General Robert Kennedy, most insiders agree.

It's no secret that the two men despised one another. "They did not have a close relationship," concedes Larry O'Brien. "You might term it mutual suspicion. Lyndon would wonder what was motivating Bobby. Bobby felt the same way about Lyndon. The situation grew in intensity."

President Kennedy was sensitive about establishing a Kennedy dynasty, but he could hardly have favored Johnson over his own brother. The men around JFK believe he would have had no choice. Smathers puts it bluntly:

"Bobby would have pushed; his mother and sisters would have pushed; the White House staff would have pushed."

Most Kennedy intimates agree that brother Robert would have inherited Camelot. "Assuming that the Camelot aura continued," adds former press secretary Pierre Salinger, "then Bobby would surely have beaten Richard Nixon" in 1968.

• Could Kennedy have kept his Administration scandal-free? Several Kennedy aides have mentioned that he believed in playing by the rules, whether it was sports or politics. They insist, therefore, the White House never fixed government contracts or cases for the political manipulators.

Swears Feldman: "Under Kennedy the attempted ITT fix would never have occurred. Kennedy resisted the presures. Bobby was the same way." Ted Kennedy recalls that Nixon tried to justify his own ITT shenanigans by implicating the Kennedys in similar practices. "The Nixon Administration turned the Justice Department upside down during the ITT investigation to find some evidence that the Kennedy Administration had also tried to fix cases," says the Senator. "They came up without a scintilla of evidence that anyone in the Kennedy White House had ever made a single telephone call."

'A different atmosphere'

• Would the Watergate scandal have been averted? Ted Sorensen answers this way: "If Kennedy had lived, there would have been a different atmosphere in the country. The passions of the late '60s would never have built. There would have been no unrest over Vietnam. The black people felt he understood them; they would not have resorted to violence. Young people identified with him. People had a respect and liking for him. The relationship with the press was one of mutual respect. All this went sour with Vietnam. An atmosphere of hope and idealism went sour in the country as well. And it was that sourness which produced Nixon and Watergate."

Kennedy aides insist that their man would never have resorted to Watergate tactics himself. Contends Feldman: "Kennedy would never permit break-ins and blackmail."

• How would Kennedy have handled the FBI? President Kennedy's first move after his inauguration was to reappoint J. Edgar Hoover as FBI director. But Ted Kennedy now claims both his brothers became disturbed over the FBI's operations.

Hoover to get boot

But Hoover was too formidable a public figure even for Presidents to challenge. President Kennedy intended to wait until after the 1964 election, therefore, to deal with Hoover. There is no question, Senator Kennedy maintains, that his brother would have removed Hoover after the election.

• Would Kennedy have stopped the CIA abuses? Privately, he blamed the CIA for the Bay of Pigs invasion, which he called the blunder of all blunders. He declared afterward that he "wanted to splinter the CIA in a thousand pieces and scatter it to the winds."

When he cooled down, Kennedy called in White House adviser Clark Clifford, who had drafted the legislation establishing the CIA. Clifford remembers the late President's words vividly: "I made some bad decisions on the Bay of Pigs," said Kennedy. "I made these bad decisions because I had bad information. My information was bad because our intelligence was poor. Something is gravely wrong inside the CIA, and I intend to find out what it is. I cannot afford another Bay of Pigs."

Scenes like this, with the Marines in action outside Da Nang, might not have occurred if JFK had lived, say his aides. Ted Sorensen, for one, says, "We would not have bombed North Vietnam. The Marines would never have landed."

Bobby Kennedy campaigning in California for the Presidency in June 1968. An assassin later gunned him down. Kennedy intimates feel JFK would have chosen Bobby as a successor over Lyndon Johnson because of strong family pressure.

Kennedy wanted someone he could trust to keep an eye on the CIA and selected his brother Robert as his unofficial overseer. But associates recall that Bobby Kennedy became fascinated with the CIA's cloak-and-dagger operations. Sources who would rather not be identified say Bobby had full knowledge of the attempts to knock off Cuba's Premier Fidel Castro.

Some associates believe the late President would have taken action in his second term to curb the CIA. Larry O'Brien offers this assessment: "Kennedy had a particular annoyance with the advisers and counselors he inherited, the CIA and military. He anticipated—it was a probing sort of thing—making some significant moves in the CIA, Pentagon and in the recesses of the State Department. The basic thrust was that he knew a lot of changes had to be made."

Weakness for women

• Would Jacqueline have walked out on JFK? It is no longer a secret that President Kennedy had a weakness for women. This became a strain, intimates now admit, on his storybook marriage to Jacqueline. These intimates believe, nevertheless, that the marriage would have withstood the stresses.

According to Smathers, "Jackie knew he was playing around. It upset her, but never enough to divorce him. Jack learned from his old man, who had a few flings in his day. But Rose Kennedy never gave up on old Joe. Of course, Jackie was more high-spirited. But Jack loved Jackie, and she loved him. Certainly, he would never have left her."

Ted Kennedy confides that his late brother wanted more children but that Jacqueline had medical complications with the baby who died. "It may not have been possible for them to have a bigger family," he says quietly.

• Would violence have exploded in the black ghettos? Former aides believe the Kennedy style, with the goodwill he inspired, might have kept the peace. Myer Feldman explains it this way: "Kennedy always understated his objectives, made sure they were within reach, made good preparations. I'm sure he would have gone as far as Lyndon Johnson on civil rights. But it would have been in a different way. I think the Kennedy method is better, less calculated to excite the people. The change would have come and come quickly but not, I think, with such dramatics."

Larry O'Brien claims Kennedy was "at the breakthrough point on civil rights" before he died in Dallas. The assassination spurred the legislation through Congress, in the opinion of Kennedy aide Lee White, "because Congress wanted to give Kennedy some kind of tribute."

But it was Lyndon Johnson who caused the civil rights explosion. Dean Rusk offers this observation: "To me, JFK's interest in civil rights came out of his mind. With LBJ, it came out of his guts. When LBJ no longer faced the necessity of being elected Senator, [civil rights] came out like a volcano."

Had Kennedy lived, Rusk suggests, "blacks might not have gotten their civil rights so quickly," but the improvements might have stirred less violence.

Save Vietnam's billions

• Would Americans have been more prosperous under Kennedy? Ted Kennedy believes his brother would have withdrawn from Vietnam and, therefore, would have saved the $155 billion that was sunk into the Vietnam war. This is money that could have been used to strengthen the domestic economy, the Senator suggests. The wasted military money caused such a strain on the economy, he contends, that it precipitated "many of our problems at home and abroad."

The late President would have used the powers of government to stimulate the economy, his aides further agree. Recalls Larry O'Brien: "He felt that the government should get involved. The thrust was that the government has to take action, that things must be done at the federal level."

• Could Kennedy have duplicated Lyndon Johnson's legislative achievements? Most observers agree that Kennedy alienated Congressional leaders, that it took his assassination to solidify the Democrats on Capitol Hill. His closest advisers dispute this report but acknowledge he would have fallen short of Johnson's legislative record.

• Could JFK have achieved peace in the Middle East? Kennedy used his legal counsel, Myer Feldman, to seek an out-of-channels settlement. Recalls Feldman: "We came within a millimeter of solving that problem. It failed. I think we would have attempted it again in a little different way, using the full power of the Presidency. He was developing a correspondence with the Arabs. I also made sure the Israelis knew what was going on, outside of channels. Both the Security Council and the State Department got sore about it."

Ted Kennedy also remembers that his brother started writing personal, confidential letters to leaders in the Middle East. In Ted's opinion, JFK "would have continued this innovation and would have been successful in bringing the Israelis and Arabs closer together."

• Would the Chinese and Americans have gotten together? Foreign affairs was President Kennedy's dominant interest, and he looked ahead to opening a dialogue with the Chinese mainland. But he probably would have taken the slow diplomatic boat to China.

Recalls Dean Rusk: "Kennedy had a near unanimous resolution from Congress objecting to the seating of Peking in the United Nations. Eisenhower also told him he could not support him on the recognition of Peking."

• Would there have been a détente with Russia? The late President's foreign policy advisers agree unanimously that relations with Russia would have been repaired. Says Rusk: "We didn't go around shouting détente, but we made some very important agreements with the Soviet Union."

Pierre Salinger remembers that John Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev started off as hostile adversaries but grew closer together after the Cuban missile crisis. Speculates Salinger: "I do know that Kennedy and Khrushchev were on the same wavelength. I think Khrushchev would have survived if Kennedy hadn't been killed. The will was really between them for agreement."

• What would Kennedy have done after leaving the White House? He once spoke to me about the problem of retiring at age 51. As a former President, he mused, it might be awkward to start a new career.

'Didn't want to retire'

Jack Kennedy told his close friend George Smathers that "the Senate is the best job, with the most power and the least answering to do." Smathers, therefore, concludes: "In the Senate, he could have been an elder statesman with power and influence. The idea of two Kennedys from Massachusetts in the Senate appealed to him. He could have swung it. I think he would have run for the Senate. He certainly didn't want to retire and become a recluse."

But all these hopes and dreams exploded in Dealey Plaza in Dallas on a sunny Nov. 22, 1963. What final speculation can we offer about the man and the future? Ted Sorensen sums it up:

"It wouldn't have been Camelot. He would have had strong opposition in 1964, especially from the South. He would have had continuing problems with Congress. I don't mean to imply that everything would have been easy and wonderful. But things would have been different, better. He wouldn't have been a myth; he never wanted to be a myth. But he would have been a good President."

Although JFK and Vice President Lyndon Johnson "didn't socialize," says an aide, their relationship was "one of mutual respect." The Texan sometimes got on Kennedy's nerves but would not have been dumped as his running mate.

KISSINGER FACES FIRE

Henry Kissinger has surely become one of the most controversial characters on the American scene. Some people regard him as one of the most skillful and pragmatic secretaries of state in American history, while others denounce him for the Vietnam and Cambodia policies he pursued, hedged and lied about while in office.

At the Boston Science Museum a few Saturday nights ago, Kissinger fielded questions from a group of 300 journalists, active and alumni fellows of Harvard's Nieman Foundation. Kissinger requested that his answers be kept off-the-record, but when one Nieman Fellow asked how U.S. policy had gone wrong in Vietnam, Kissinger reportedly explained that "a distorted conception of the problem created the Vietnam tragedy. Our military objectives could not have possibly led us into tenable political settlements. They divided the country and were a great tragedy. I hope that never happens again."

Kissinger defended the invasion of Cambodia by American forces, which led to student riots throughout the U.S. and the killings on the Kent State campus. But the melodramatic highlight of the evening developed when a journalist read a question from the group of demonstrators who had gathered outside the museum.

Kissinger's son David was in the audience as the Nieman Fellow rose and read aloud: "How can you justify yourself to your children when the policies you formulated in office led to the deaths of thousands of innocent people?"

Reportedly Kissinger flushed as he replied: "I did not ask to speak here, and I did not come here to justify myself. I tried to end the war in Vietnam. Whether or not I succeeded will be up to those who can judge in retrospect. But it is certainly not for those to judge who believe that striking a pose is the same thing as conducting a policy."

Kissinger, Harvard Class of '50, is not overly popular with students and faculty at his alma mater, and it took a considerable amount of courage on his part to enter Boston territory and face 300 journalist interrogators. Henry, however, knows how to turn wrath away with a smile and to neutralize a combative reporter by judicious use of the reporter's first name.

NUMBER FOUR The word out of Amman is that King Hussein, Jordan's mighty mite, has chosen a physician to become his fourth wife. Reportedly the lucky girl is Lana Badredin, daughter of a former member of Lebanon's parliament.

The story is that Hussein first saw Lana when she appeared on a television program in Jordan. He made inquiry and learned that she had joined the staff of the Al Hussein Hospital in Amman. He then requested her presence at his palace, and she complied.

The 42-year-old monarch has been married three times. He divorced his first two wives, and his third was killed last February in a helicopter crash.

As our Central Intelligence Agency well knows, Hussein is incapable of leading a womanless life for any considerable length of time.

THE LATE BING CROSBY AND WIFE KATHRYN DANCING

REMEMBERED REQUEST

As he awaited the arrival of his seventh child, Bing Crosby, 57, waxed pensive about the snares of parenthood. "With this new set," he said of his children by second wife Kathy Grant, 27, "I'm going to try not to repeat the mistakes I made with Gary and Lindsay and the twins." Before the bout of self-criticism was over, the man who crooned his way to a multimillion-dollar fortune even produced a suggestion for his epitaph. "If I forget," he enjoined Parade writer Lloyd Shearer, "You tell Kathy I'd like this line: 'He was an average guy who could carry a tune.'"

NEW HEROIN ROUTE

In an effort to undermine the social fabric of West Berlin and West Germany, customs men in Communist East Germany are turning a blind eye to heroin smugglers who land at the airport in Schoenefeld, East Germany.

These couriers for the most part are drug-running Turks, Iranians and Lebanese who conceal the heroin on their bodies. In many cases they let their children carry the contraband in their dolls.

There are at least 185,000 Turks who work in West Berlin. Many of them take cheap vacation flights from East Berlin to Ankara, Turkey. On return trips they load up with heroin and are passed through the East Berlin checkpoints to West Berlin, where there is no further customs check.

From West Berlin, professional couriers continue the drug-running to Frankfurt, Amsterdam, Brussels, Paris and London. They also sell a good deal of heroin in West Berlin, where more than 5000 new addicts have reportedly arrived to take advantage of the supply.

THE BEEFALO CAPER

Ever hear of "beefalo"?

That's a new hybrid animal, a cross between the American buffalo and domestic beef cattle. It was perfected in 1973 after 15 years of experimentation by D.C. Basolo, a Tracy, Cal., rancher.

It has since become the basis of an international promotion scheme known as "The Great Beefalo Caper." Herewith some of the background:

In 1974, Oliver Hemphill, an ex-U.S. Air Force pilot with many international business contacts, decided that the beefalo was the answer to the world's hunger problem. Hemphill set up a corporation, Europacific Ltd., with headquarters in Gibraltar, and promoted it to investors as a company engaged in the "breeding, production, and distribution of both live and dressed beefalo products."

According to the California Department of Corporations, whose investigators are studying the case, investors succumbed to the lure of potential profits in the beefalo. To date there haven't been any profits, only losses.

It seems that there is no beefalo semen for breeding purposes, that the London headquarters of Europacific Ltd. consisted of a telephone answering service and a mail drop, and that the 300 beefalo used for photographic and brochure purposes have been shipped back to North Dakota where they came from.

As for Oliver Hemphill, who promoted the beefalo as "the most dramatic breakthrough in the international beef industry in the 20th century," he is apparently somewhere in Oregon preparing a legal defense should a California grand jury indict him on violating state fraud and securities statutes.

In any event, if you hear of any further beefalo schemes in which the profit potential is endless, investigate carefully before you invest a penny.

EUROPE'S TOP MODEL: ELISABETH FALLENBERG

BEAUTY ABOVE THE NECK Europe's most expensive model is Elisabeth Fallenberg, 30, the great-great-granddaughter of Field Marshal Count Radetzky, an Austrian blue blood of yesteryear.

Elisabeth, who earns $650 a day, claims with good humor that she has the smallest bosom in Austria—but that has never prevented her face and figure from adorning magazines and billboards throughout the world.

Elisabeth is married to Pedro Kramreiter, who is also her photographer. In marrying Kramreiter, who is a commoner, Elisabeth says she was following her mother's example. "I've never had any taste for the life of European nobility," she explains. "At 16 I left school for Sweden because of love. I split up with that guy and hung around Istanbul because of hash. I worked in New York because of money. And now I live in Vienna, where I will stay because of the food."

Elisabeth's flat chest is one of her strongest selling points. "I am the living proof," she declares, "that a woman's most erotic features are her eyes and her mouth."

Raggedy Ann or Bionic Jaime Toys Will Be Toys

by Herbert Kupferberg

NEW YORK CITY.

Whatever may be going on at Santa's workshop up at the North Pole these days, down at the headquarters of the Toy Manufacturers of America at 200 Fifth Ave., New York, things are as dead as a doornail.

"Everybody's out on the road," explains the TMA's president, Samuel B. Sherwin, a former Commerce Department official in the Ford Administration. However, the absence of live bodies from the hundreds of offices and showrooms that honeycomb the Toy Center's two big buildings doesn't mean that business is bad but that it's booming.

"Everybody's making sure that the retailers have what they need," says Sherwin. "People are buying more toys than ever before, and this is no time for anybody to run short."

Some 50 to 55 percent of all toy business is done in November and December, and since total annual retail sales are expected to be around $4.2 billion this year, the manufacturers are looking forward to jingling cash-register bells.

Traditionally, the biggest sellers are dolls, which account for about 13 percent of the market, stuffed animals with 7.6 percent, board games with 7.5 percent, and action and skill games with 6.7 percent. Toy guns and rifles, according to the TMA, amount to only 1.3 percent, just behind coloring and picture word books with 1.4 percent.

Sherwin explains the growing complexity of toys by observing that children's playthings are reflections of the adult culture around them. "They're the world in miniature," he says, "and we wouldn't be fulfilling our function if we didn't bring the world as it is before the child."

However, he also acknowledges that the toy industry is motivated by commercial rather than philosophical considerations. "It's the marketplace that basically determines what toys are manufactured," he says.

ogy of adult world, as in new miniature CB radio for kids.

Manufacturers keep finding new things for dolls to do. This one turns tan in the sun.

Curiously, the marketplace isn't as changeable as some TV toy commercials might make it appear. Toy manufacturers lie awake nights trying to think up new playthings in the hope that they will become the fad toy of that particular year; and each hit movie or TV show produces a spate of new toys designed to send sales soaring.

Sometimes such novelties do catch on. But around 40 percent of toy sales continue to be of the old reliables. In fact, the TMA has set up a special showroom in its headquarters consisting of toys that have been on the market for at least 20 years and are still going strong—teddy bears, Flexible Flyer sleds, red wagons, Chinese checker sets, Erector sets, chemistry sets, piggy banks, alphabet blocks, Lincoln Logs, Tinkertoys and dolls that can't even wet themselves.

Kids are loyal

"Kids are remarkably loyal," says Sherwin. "They don't turn their backs on old World War II plane models just because space vehicle sets have come in."

Ted Erickson, another TMA official, says that at least five years must elapse before a toy can be considered as a candidate for "classic" status. "That would mean that two sets of kids have come along and given it their stamp of approval," he says. But there's no guarantee that an established toy won't eventually fade from view. An example is the Kewpie doll, which, Erickson noted, is almost impossible to find this year even though its lineage goes back to around 1900 and it has attained dictionary status, being defined in Webster's New Collegiate as "a small chubby doll with a topknot of hair."

With 53 million children aged 14 and under in the United States, the total toy-sales figure breaks down to about $80 per child per year. Asked whether it's the parent or the child who usually decides how the money is spent, Sherwin diplomatically replies: "A certain amount of negotiation usually takes place between them."

A good deal of such negotiation presumably is occurring in American households right now, and the results will be eagerly awaited by the manufacturers, who right after the holidays will begin making plans for their Christmas, 1978, lines.

Will the Bionic Woman be as strong as ever? Will Barbie develop a new wardrobe line? Will hula hoops keep turning?

Tune in next year. In the meantime, anyone for jacks?

TATUM O'NEAL IN FILM "INTERNATIONAL VELVET"

On the Hollywood Front

Good news and bad news. The good news first. Tatum O'Neal, 14-year-old film star, not only was paid $350,000 for her role in "The Bad News Bears," but her profit percentage from that film is rapidly approaching $2 million. Tatum is also pulling down a $500,000 salary plus a hefty profit percentage for starring in "International Velvet," a sequel to the classic "National Velvet" in which Elizabeth Taylor starred as a 12-year-old. Tatum is becoming one of the world's wealthiest teenagers.

What a contrast to the children of film actress Jayne Mansfield. Ten years ago, Jayne, one of the most publicized sex bombs of her era, was killed in a car crash outside New Orleans. She was 34, the mother of four, and left an estate valued at $516,000.

Last month, after a decade of legal hassling, Jayne's children were told they would receive nothing from their mother's estate. Apparently Jayne was heavily in debt when she died. There is only $75,000 left in her estate, which will probably go to the lawyers.

Meaningless Pledges

In Honolulu recently 111 ninth-graders were asked to write out the pledge of allegiance. Not one could do it correctly, and most had little idea of what it meant.

The schoolteacher who made the assignment—and prefers to remain nameless so as not to embarrass her pupils—calls the results amazing and frightening.

Twelve of her students misspelled America as "Amicra," "Amica," "Americqi," and other variations. Some misinterpreted the word "indivisible" as "in the visible" or "vissable," while others wrote "under guard" for the phrase "under God." Still others took the phrase "to the republic for which it stands" and rewrote it into "for richard stand" or "of richest stand."

In Honolulu the pupils recite the pledge of allegiance daily, but apparently some of them don't really know what they're pledging or how to spell it.

Best Seller in Japan

The best-selling record at present in pop music-loving Japan is "Surf Break Sound From Jamaica" by the Surf Break Band. Never heard of these chart-busters? That's not unusual because there is no such band. The LP is a recording of waves breaking onto the shore at Montego Bay in Jamaica. For 40 minutes the needle tracks through the restful swish-swash sound of the Jamaican breakers.

The recorder-producer-director of this best-selling masterpiece is Shimpei Asai, a professional photographer. Asai, like many Japanese, loves the South Sea islands' tropical mood. And so, while shooting a commercial for a swimwear company on location in Jamaica, Asai recorded the soft murmurings of the sea.

The swimwear manufacturers decided to put the Jamaican surf sound on a record as a free gimmick for young buyers.

All this year Japan has been hit by a revival of California-style surfing, skateboarding and rock 'n' roll—so CBS/Sony grabbed the rights to Asai's recording and released it for sale. Side A contains the raw sound of the surf. Side B mixes the roaring breakers with the gentle plunk plunk of Asai's ukelele.

Many years ago some genius came up with the idea of producing a record containing 50 minutes of silence and ended up earning a lot of money for his zany idea. Shimpei Asai is also raking it in as Japanese flock to purchase a tantalizing touch of the uncrowded, unhurried, sun-drenched South Sea islands.

Britt's Saga

Britt Ekland, 34, the Swedish beauty who lured actor Peter Sellers into marriage 13 years ago, has been unable to accomplish matrimony with her subsequent lovers.

After her divorce from Sellers, by whom she has a daughter, Britt moved in with millionaire record producer Lou Adler, by whom she has a son. Adler refused to marry her, however, but undoubtedly made an agreeable financial settlement when he departed.

Britt next took up with rock star Rod Stewart, two years her junior. A few weeks ago, when Britt left Hollywood to visit relatives in Sweden, Stewart dropped her for actress Liz Treadwell. Britt promptly sued Stewart—an ex-gravedigger—for half his earnings and half his property from the time they lived together.

She wants $5 million for helping promote Stewart's musical career, $5 million for alleged fraud and deceit, and another $10 million for punitive damages.

Britt claims that when she moved in with Stewart, he promised to live with her for the remainder of his life, and she in turn promised to sacrifice her career for his.

What people will promise when they are in love!

ACTRESS BRITT EKLAND AND ROCK STAR ROD STEWART

We're looking for people to write children's books

Writing for children is the perfect way to take up writing,' says the author of 53 children's books. 'Your ideas come right out of your own experience. And while it's still a challenge, it's probably the straightest possible line between you and publication — if you're qualified to seek the success this rewarding field offers.'

By Alvin Tresselt, Dean of Faculty

If you want to write and get published, I can't think of a better way to do it than writing books and stories for children and teenagers. Ideas flow naturally right out of your own life experience. While it's still a challenge, the odds of getting that first unforgettable check from a juvenile publisher are better than they are from just about any other kind of publisher I know.

Later on, you may get other checks from other publishers. But right now, the object is to begin — to break into print — to learn the feeling of writing and selling your work and seeing your name in type. After that, you can decide if you want your writing to take another direction.

But after 30 years of editing, publishing, and teaching — and 53 books — I can tell you this: you'll go a long way before you discover anything as rewarding as writing for young readers.

Your words will never sound as sweet as they do on the lips of a child reading your books and stories. And the joy of creating books and stories that young people 'really dig' is an experience you'll never have anywhere else.

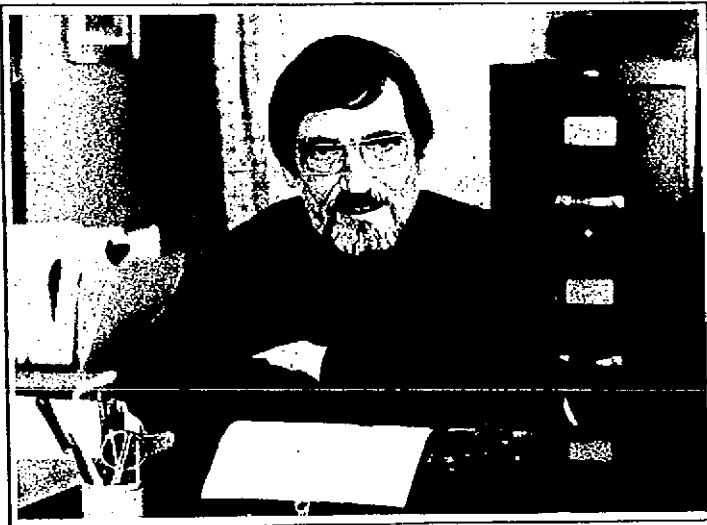

But, that's not all. The financial rewards go far beyond most people's expectations because there's a surprisingly big market out there for writers who are trained to crack it. More than 130 million young people's books are purchased each year. Between 2,000 and 2,500 new titles appear annually and new authors account for as many as half of them.

There are also 250 monthly magazines looking for material for young readers. You can imagine how much writing it takes just to keep them going!

'Am I really qualified?'

Yet two big questions bedevil nearly every would-be writer: "Am I really qualified?" and "How can I get started?"

This is our definition of a "qualified person": It's someone with an aptitude for writing who can take constructive criticism, Alvin Tresselt was Vice President and Executive Editor of Parent's Magazine Press, the first editor of Humpty Dumpty's Magazine for Children, and has served on the board of the Author's Guild. His 53 books for young readers have sold over two million copies.

learn from it, and turn it into a professional performance. This is the only kind of person we're looking for. The reasons are simple: our reputation is built on success, and if prospective students don't have the earmarks of success to begin with, we probably can't help them. And we tell them so. It's only fair to both of us.

To help us spot potential authors, we've developed a revealing test for writing aptitude. It's free, and we don't charge for our evaluation. But no one gets into the Institute without passing it. Those who pass and enroll receive our promise: You will complete at least one manuscript ready to submit to a publisher by the time you finish the Course.

When we teach, you learn

I've learned a lot about writing for children and I love it. Now I'm passing my knowledge on to my students so they can profit from it. When I'm not writing my own children's books I spend my time at The Institute of Children's Literature, a workshop for writers that does only one thing and does it better than any other school or college or university of its kind: it trains qualified people to write for the young reader. (In this age of boob tube illiteracy, convenient morality, and plastic values, do you know of a more important audience?)

This is the way I work with my students, and my fellow instructors — all of whom are experienced writers or editors — work more or less the same way.

When you're ready — at your own time and your own pace — you send your assignment to me and I read it and reread it to get everything out of it you've put into it. Then I edit your assignment with a red pencil just the way a publishing house editor would — if he had the time. I return it along with a detailed letter explaining my editorial comments. I tell you what your strong points are, what your weaknesses are, and just what you can do to improve. It's a matter of push and pull. You push and I pull and between us both, you learn to write.

The proof of the pudding

proof of the pudding is that many of our students break into print even before they finish the Course.

Kathleen Huber, New York, N.Y., writes: "Regarding my sale to Highlights for Children for $125, it started out as a story assignment for the Institute, and Highlights was only the second magazine I had sent it to. Certainly your Course made this sale possible. It may be the best investment I ever made."

A.M. Hummel, Danville, Pa., writes, "When Highlights for Children accepted my short story — Assignment #8 in the Course, and sent me a $65 check, I could hardly believe it! Then, within a week, I got another check and a go-ahead assignment for a second piece."

'I won first prize of $400 for a Course assignment!'

"Before taking your Course, (which I checked out with the National Better Business Bureau), the short stories I scribbled for my two tiny tots never caught an editor's fancy," writes Emily Burns of Salem, Oregon.

"My first sale, to National Catholic Weekly, was a Course assignment. Then I submitted another Course assignment in a creative writer's competition and won first prize of $400!"

Free Writing Aptitude Test offered

To find qualified men and women with an aptitude for writing, the Faculty and Consultants of the Institute have prepared a four-page Writing Aptitude Test. It is offered free and will be professionally evaluated at no cost to you by our staff.

Just mail the coupon below to receive your free Test and 24-page illustrated brochure which describes the Institute, our Course, Faculty, and the current market for children's literature. Dear Mr. Tresselt:
I am interested in your program to help new writers get started. Please have your free Writing Aptitude Test and 24-page illustrated brochure sent to me. I understand that I am under no obligation whatsoever and no salesman will call.

REGULAR AND MENTHOL

Sleep clinics like this one at Montefiore Hospital in New York may help untold thousands of Americans with sleep disorders. Here, chief technician Peter A. McGregor prepares a patient for sleep monitoring.

How to Improve Your Sleep

by Lawrence Galton

A Connecticut man not long ago found help for a problem which had plagued him for 20 years. He had no trouble falling asleep or, to his knowledge, in staying asleep for a full eight hours. But he woke every morning feeling exhausted, continued to feel that way all day long, was irritable and short-tempered with family and co-workers. He had spent thousands of dollars trekking from physician to physician without finding help.

Then he spent one night at a new sleep-wake clinic at Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center, Bronx, N.Y. There, as his sleep was electronically monitored and videotaped, the nature of his problem became obvious.

Hundreds of times during the night, he would stop breathing, gasp for air with a loud snore, then resume breathing. The breathing interruptions were so brief that in the morning he had no recollection of them.

To help him, doctors performed a tracheotomy, making a small opening in the trachea area of his throat and inserting a little tube. By day, he can plug the tube (which is invisible under his collar and tie) and talk normally. By night, with plug removed, he inhales through the tube and sleeps soundly without breathing interruptions or snoring.

His problem—sleep apnea—has long gone undiagnosed and uncontrolled and is estimated to affect at least 50,000 Americans.

At Stanford University School of Medicine, Stanford, Cal., Dr. Christian Guilleminault and a team of investigators recently reported on a series of 25 men aged 25 to 65 in whom apnea was diagnosed after sleep studies and successfully treated by tracheotomy.

And from their experience, the Stanford physicians note, sleep apnea should be suspected in the presence—along with loud snoring—of any of a group of symptoms: abnormal movements during sleep, excessive daytime sleepiness, hallucinations, automatic behavior, personality changes with abnormal behavioral outbursts, even high blood pressure and bedwetting.

The possibility that medication may help some victims, avoiding need for tracheotomy, has been raised by a finding by Dr. George B. Murray of Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston. Carbamazepine is a drug used for trigeminal neuralgia and other problems unrelated to apnea. Murray prescribed it for a man with another such problem. It worked for that. The patient also turned out to be a victim of sleep apnea, and carbamazepine appears to have brought the apnea under control.

SLEEP ATTACKS: Until very recently, the 42-year-old wife of a university professor had kept falling asleep during the day, regardless of how well she'd slept the night before. Her sleep attacks, sometimes lasting 15 minutes and occurring frequently, could overpower her suddenly at the dinner table—even when she was driving a car.

Her problem—narcolepsy—is now under control. For her. But not for thousands of other victims.

Because the disorder is unfamiliar not only to most people but even to many physicians, an average of 15 years elapses between its first appearance and diagnosis, says Dr. Guilleminault. Some authorities say two-thirds of victims, who may number in the hundreds of thousands, are undiagnosed.

While patient sleeps, electrodes relay data on brain waves, respiration.

A lifelong condition that usually first appears in the late teens, narcolepsy's most characteristic symptom is what many victims rightly call sleep attacks because they are so overwhelming.

As many as 80 percent of victims have another symptom called cataplexy. Some or many body muscles may become suddenly and briefly paralyzed when victims experience a strong emotion such as fear or anger. Their faces may droop or they may fall to their knees or even drop to the ground.

In addition, some victims may experience visual or auditory hallucinations when falling asleep during the day or at night—and they may experience fleeting paralysis when they wake.

Narcolepsy can be diagnosed if a physician asks the right questions and gets a full story of a patient's symptoms.

When there is any doubt, a sleep clinic can help. All-night sleep monitoring is valuable for clear-cut narcolepsy detection. At night, narcoleptics tend to fall directly into a state of sleep called REM (rapid eye movement), while normal people usually do not enter REM until more than 90 minutes after falling asleep.

Although there is no cure for narcolepsy, whose cause remains unknown, stimulant drugs can help control the sleep attacks and other drugs can reduce or eliminate the other symptoms.

(Founded by victims of the disorder, The American Narcolepsy Association, Box 5846, Stanford, Cal. 94305, now provides valuable information for narcoleptics and their families.)

BETTER HELP FOR INSOMNIA: Until very recently, insomnia has gotten the short end of the medical stick. Too often many physicians have dismissed patients complaining of it with a quick prescription for sleeping pills.

Physicians at Stanford University's sleep clinic report that about 40 percent of patients complaining of insomnia can blame the very drugs taken to "treat" it. And when the drugs are eliminated—gradually, to avoid withdrawal reactions of intense dreams and nightmares—they average about 20 percent more sleep, and many become free of insomnia.

Some people get trapped into a pill habit because of what sleep experts call pseudoinsomnia. They actually need less sleep than others. There's nothing wrong with them.

Real insomnia can have many possible causes and will disappear when causes—rather than the insomnia itself, which is only a symptom and not a disease—are treated.

Often insomnia is the result of an emotional disturbance that isn't apparent to the patient. When depression or anxiety is the cause of insomnia, treatment—by antidepressant or other specific medication, or possibly by brief psychotherapy—may be needed. Sleeping pills won't help.

NOCTURNAL MYOCLONUS & RESTLESS LEGS: In as many as 20 percent of chronic insomnia cases, the cause lies with a strange problem: nocturnal myoclonus. It's a jerking or movement of the legs every 25 to 40 seconds during sleep, coming on in attacks that may last from minutes to several hours.

Many people with myoclonus have another problem as well: restless legs. They can't keep their legs still while lying quietly in bed awake; many also experience creeping sensations deep in muscles of the lower legs and must walk it off for 10 to 20 minutes.

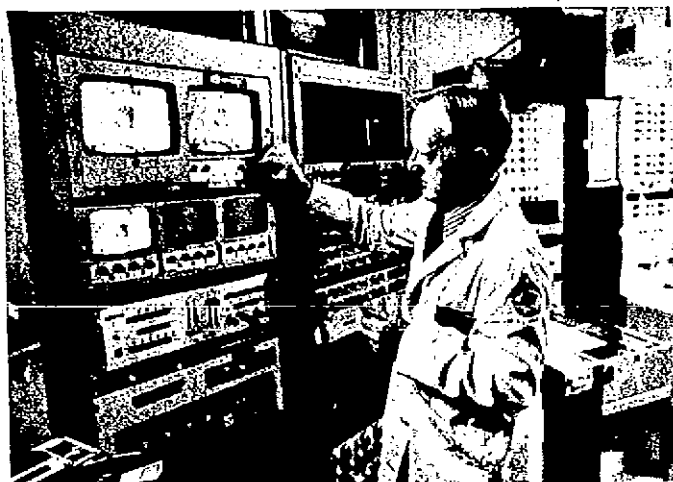

Once properly diagnosed, either or both problems often can be helped.

Dr. Samuel Ayres Jr., Emeritus Professor of Medicine at UCLA, has found vitamin E of value. A myoclonus victim, Ayres tested it on himself and benefited, then used it on 134 patients. Only two failed to benefit; 103 had complete relief. Of nine with restless legs, seven were completely relieved, the two others partially. Check your physician for proper dosage.

CHANGING YOUR SLEEP HABITS: Sleep research is a relatively young science; many aspects of sleep remain to be investigated. One now getting increasing attention is the relationship between insomnia and bad sleeping habits and how such habits can be overcome.

A pioneer in the field is Dr. Richard R. Bootzin of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. Bootzin gives patients specific instructions, as illustrated in the case of a 25-year-old man who for more than four years had retired nightly at midnight and had been unable to fall asleep until 3 or 4 a.m., stewing about some problem and finally watching TV to try to stop the stewing.

The instructions for him: Go to bed only when tired; and once in bed, no TV watching, reading or worrying. If sleep doesn't come in a short time, leave bed and bedroom and return only when ready to try to fall asleep again. If still no success, get out of bed and bedroom again—and keep repeating until you do get to sleep quickly after returning to bed.

Whatever you do, don't settle for insomnia as a problem in itself or rely on sleeping pills as a cure. Remember that insomnia is only a symptom, and its cause needs treatment.

If your physician can't determine the cause or help you, you may benefit from referral to a sleep clinic. More and more of the clinics are being set up at university hospitals and major medical centers. If you have difficulty finding a nearby clinic, the address of one can be obtained from The American Association of Sleep Disorders Centers, University of Cincinnati Sleep Disorder Center, Christian R. Holmes Hospital, Eden and Bethesda Avenues, Cincinnati, Ohio 45219. P

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort band" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak. Snug fresh and clean! Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! # my FAVORITE jokes

by danny TADMORE

EDITOR'S NOTE: Israeli-born comedian Danny Tadmor now lives in the U.S. and performs his own material in many cities here and abroad: the Palladium in London, Olympia in Paris, Madison Square Garden and Town Hall in New York, the Fontainebleau in Miami Beach.

"People always ask me, 'Why did you leave Israel?' " says Danny. "Well, a few years back they had a 'Keep Israel Beautiful' campaign, so they asked me to leave. But after coming to this country I found out you can be unpopular no matter where you live."

Here Danny talks about Israel, apartment life, tennis and other matters:

Life on a kibbutz is great . . . that is, if you're a watermelon. Then everybody looks after you.

I left Israel and came to New York because I wanted combat.

The building I live in has all the modern conveniences. We have a burglar who lives right on the third floor. He's very pleasant—won't break in when you have company.

I took a new girlfriend to my apartment. As soon as she came in, she started screaming, "Help! Help! I'm being attacked!" I said, "What's wrong? I'm not doing anything." She said, "Then why did you force me into the closet?" I said, "What closet? This is the living room."

They can't paint my apartment because if they did the walls would stick together.

The landlord calls it a "garden apartment." That means I have mud in my living room.

When I complained about the apartment, the landlord said, "Look how high the ceiling is." I said, "It doesn't look high to me." He said, "That's because the floor is also high." I said, "Why don't you lower the floor?" He said, "Well, the tenant underneath also likes a high ceiling."

But at least it's safe. If I'm home alone the apartment will never be broken into—there isn't room for two people.

I was not a very bright kid. I remember my teacher telling my father that with luck I might grow up to be a child.

I was just in the hospital. They charge you $127 to put you to sleep—anaesthesia. To wake you up is another story.

Miami is truly the fountain of youth. Where else is an 80-year-old considered a young man with a future?

Miami is the only city in the world where you can be so sick and look so good.

Who likes bingo? That's a great game—better than tennis. I like a game that even when you lose, you don't sweat.

You know you're a bad tennis player when during the match you've been hit more than the ball.

I try to intellectualize the game. For instance, to upset my opponent, before I serve I yell, "Checkmate!"

I am bad. When I lose, my opponent jumps over the net and tries to land on me.

I played with one nice, pretty girl. After the match, she wouldn't even talk to me. I said, "What's wrong? We were friends when we were playing tennis." She said, "Sure. Then there was a net between us!"

It's depressing. I was going with this girl I really liked. She said to me, "If what we feel for each other is true love, then it will stand the test of time. Let's not see each other for about 30 years."

Starting Tuesday, a Popular Question:

Where Is Our President Tonight?

by Lloyd Shearer

Jimmy Carter's road show takes to the air Tuesday with Air Force One, the White House backup plane and two charter planes filled with at least 150 representatives of the news media.

The newsmen will pay 1½ times the first-class fare on the 24,000-mile travel spectacular to 9 countries on 4 continents in 11 days, picking up the tab for the White House press staff.

According to Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's national security adviser and a fast man with a million words, the justification for the trip is that it fills an "important need" because it "reflects our continued efforts to promote the kind of world we want to live in."

Some suspicious people suggest that the trip is a diversionary tactic to remove Carter from Washington, D.C., where:

- (1) He went to bat for fellow Georgian Bert Lance and struck out.
- (2) The Senate shredded his energy program into fine strips.
- (3) His Panama Canal treaty stimulated mounting dissent.

Just what Carter is going to accomplish by showing the flag in Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria (where he plans to have Thanksgiving dinner), Saudi Arabia, India, Iran, France, Poland and Belgium is difficult to tell. Perhaps he will improve his slightly tarnished image. Who knows?

These overseas Presidential trips sound glamorous and adventuresome, but they are hectic, back-breaking and play-havoc with one's body chemistry. Reporters no sooner check into their hotel rooms than they have to pack their bags for pickup by the White House luggage-arrangers. There is scarcely time to file a story on stop-overs, and sleep is catch-as-catch-can.

Perhaps the most incredible and bizarre overseas odyssey ever taken by a U.S. President occurred on Dec. 20, 1967, when Lyndon Johnson decided to fly to Australia to attend funeral services for Prime Minister Harold Holt, who drowned or was eaten by sharks in the ocean off Melbourne.

Johnson flew in Air Force One, and reporters flew in a chartered Pan Am 707.

The planes departed Andrews Air Force Base, refueled at Travis Air Force Base and San Francisco, then winged to Hawaii, where the press was caught in a downpour.

Destination secret

Five hours later, Johnson stopped in American Samoa, then took off for Canberra, Australia, and subsequently Melbourne.

The exhausted reporters had no idea where the President was headed to, and he wouldn't tell. He put down in Darwin for an hour, then flew to Korat, Thailand, where a CBS technician collapsed from exhaustion. Most of the re-

Jimmy Carter takes to the air Tuesday for a four-continent junket intended to fill an "important need." But some say the President needs the trip to escape the woes of Lancegate, energy and the Panama Canal treaty.

In Korat, Johnson announced to 3000 airmen, "I must return to Washington." Instead, he flew to Cam Ranh Bay in Vietnam, spent two hours there and flew 10 hours to Karachi, Pakistan.

The reporters were furious and frustrated. They'd had little sleep and no itinerary information. Hugh Sidey of Time magazine, who is hearty enough to accompany President Carter on his forthcoming junket, complained angrily to Jack Valenti, Johnson's assistant.

"This is a flying circus," Sidey stormed, "and you and the President both know it! The best damn thing you can do is to start up this airplane and head back home right now!"

Johnson, of course, was not about to listen to him. He offered Sidey and the other members of the press pool the choice of flying to Madrid, where he would visit General Franco, or Rome, where he would visit the Pope.

Johnson decided on Rome. Eight hours after leaving Karachi, Air Force One put down at Ciampino Airport, where helicopters eventually lifted Johnson and the newsmen to Italian President Saragat's house and then to the Vatican.

Pope Paul VI gifted Johnson with a 16th-century painting, and Johnson gave the Pope a five-inch bronze bust of Lyndon Baines Johnson.

Johnson then flew to Shannon, Ireland; for some Christmas shopping, refueled on the Azores and landed at Andrews Air Force Base at 4:18 a.m. on Dec. 24. He had circled the globe in four days and 16 hours.

What had he accomplished? "Well," says Hugh Sidey, "the President had his exercise aboard Air Force One, and he would work out each day, proving that both he and the airplane had lots of stamina. That's basically what these travel spectacles prove. I'm inclined to believe that Jimmy Carter's trip will be similar in accomplishment. But, of course, I have an open mind."

Lyndon Johnson followed his whims on a bizarre global marathon in 1967. He spent just two hours in Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam (above), then flew 10 hours to Pakistan.

In Pakistan, Johnson decided to pop in on Pope Paul VI in Rome. The President's "flying circus" flew eight hours; then headed non-stop to the Vatican. Above, the Pope graciously accepts a bust of LBJ as the Vatican Secretary of State beams benign approval.

Arranged on a single platter, marbled slices of boneless smoked pork butt are both eye-appealing and delicious when cooked in our sweet and savory sauce with colorful vegetables. Add piping-hot baking powder biscuits and a tossed salad—the main course is complete. A chilled fresh fruit cup made with seeded grapes, orange sections, peeled diced apples and fluted banana slices is a fitting dessert.

HOMESTEAD pork platter

1 boneless smoked pork butt (about 1½ to 2 pounds)
½ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons orange juice
Generous dash ground cloves
2 cans (16 ounces each) pork and beans with tomato sauce
1 can (12 ounces) whole kernel corn, drained

¼ cup diced green pepper

Cut pork into 12 slices. Brown pork and cook onion in oil until tender. Stir in brown sugar, orange juice and cloves. Cover; cook over low heat 30 minutes or until pork is done. Meanwhile combine beans, corn and green pepper. Add to pork. Cook uncovered 15 minutes. Stir occasionally. Arrange pork slices on vegetables. Makes six servings.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

More than a ¼ lb. of butter deep inside.

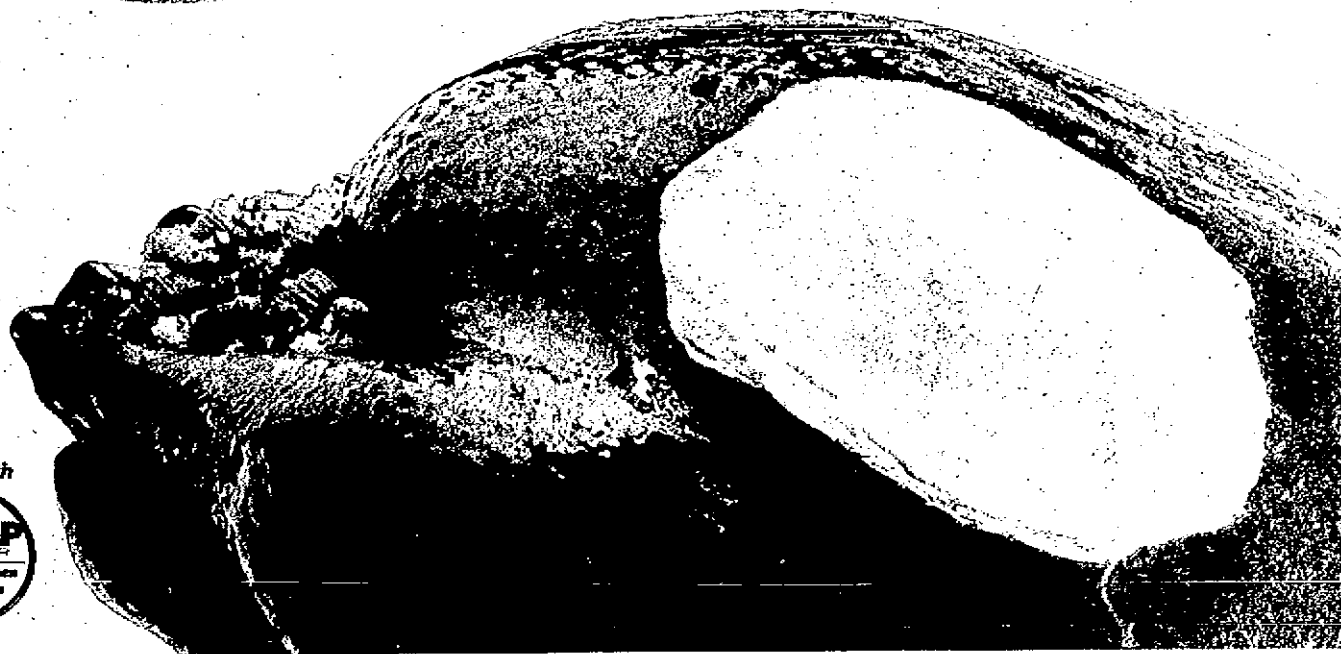

That's what makes your 12 lb. Butter-Basted Armour Golden Star Turkey so moist and tender and delicious.

Some self-basting turkeys baste themselves with oil. Some baste themselves with broth. But the Armour Golden Star Turkey bastes itself with butter. Real creamery butter, and plenty of it. Even a modest 12 lb. bird has more than a quarter-pound deep inside. And our larger turkeys have more. Butter that makes the Armour Golden Star Turkey moist and tender and delicious right on down to the last flavorful morsel.

The Armour Golden Star Turkey. Now with a pop-up timer, so you know when it's done to its buttery, flavorful best.

ARMOUR GOLDEN STAR TURKEY
Butter-tender, because it's butter-basted.

If you join the Columbia Record & Tape Club and agree to buy eight more selections (at regular Club prices) during the coming three years

This is the beginning of a fling. A crazy fling. A fling filled with music. The music you love most.

More music than you've ever been able to get at once. Part One of the fling: you go over the list of albums on these three pages. And you choose the 11 you want most. Then fill in and mail the application on preceding page.

Part Two of the fling: your 11 records or tapes arrive in the mail.

This, of course, is the part where you really go crazy. You can tease yourself and play one a day. Or you can play them all at once in the most incredible concert you ever had in your room. You can invite good friends over to share the fun. And, of course, you can play them again and again.

11 hit albums for only $1.00, plus shipping and handling. A crazy idea, perhaps. But it can happen to you as a member of the Columbia Record & Tape Club. Make it happen now...

The perfect foil

Gale Gordon is reunited with Lucy in special

TV-Radio Editor

Gale Gordon is bad-tempered, blustery and pompous. But only as an actor. In real life, he is quite the opposite of the loud-mouthed, choleric, stuffed-shirt character he has portrayed so well for years on radio, screen and television.

It didn't really come as any surprise to me to find the veteran actor to be a calm, soft-spoken, mild-mannered and modest gentleman when we had lunch together the other day at the Hollywood Brown Derby. After all, I had heard and read what others have had to say about him.

As a performer, Gordon is a master of the slow burn, the double-take and a wide range of facial expressions. His dignified appearance has helped to make him the perfect foil for many comedy stars, including, of course, Lucille Ball.

Can any television viewers forget Gordon's portrayal of the irritable, tight-fisted banker Mr. Mooney on "The Lucy Show" or, later, his role as stuffy Uncle Harry, Lucy Carter's brother-in-law, on "Here's Lucy"?

His 11-year stint as Miss Ball's television sidekick ended in 1974 when "Here's Lucy" completed its run. But the two are being reunited in a one-hour show, "The Lucille Ball Special," on CBS Monday night at 8:30.

It's not a variety show, but a "Lucy" type comedy, with only the names of the characters changed. This time Miss Ball is Lucy Whittaker, and Gordon is her father-in-law ("Ed McMahon is my son," he points out).

Vivian Vance, Lucy's sidekick from "I Love Lucy," is also in it, as her best friend. Mary Wickes plays Aunt Millie, Mary Jane Croft is the mayor's wife and Steve Allen appears as himself.

GALE GORDON is reunited with Lucille Ball—in role of her father-in-law—in "The Lucille Ball Special," at 8:30 p.m. Monday on Ch. 2. Vivian Vance, Steve Allen, Ed McMahon and Mary Wickes also appear in the comedy involving an expected visit from President Carter.

The plot revolves around the expected coming-to-dinner visit of President Carter to the Whitaker home. As an ultraconservative Republican, Omar Whitaker (Gordon) wants no part of it.

Gordon's association with Miss Ball goes back to 1948, when he started appearing in the radio comedy "My Favorite Husband," with Lucy, Richard Denning and Bea Benadaret.

"When Lucy started doing 'I Love Lucy' on television, she wanted Bea and me as the neighbor couple, but we weren't available," Gordon said. The parts went, instead, to the late William Frawley and Miss Vance.

Gordon's first TV series was "Our Miss Brooks," in which he played the fat-headed Principal Osgood Conklin to Eve Arden's Miss Brooks. It began its TV run in 1952, but Gale earlier had played the part on radio.

A professional actor since 1923—he began at age 17 on the New York stage—Gordon performed in his first Hollywood movie in 1929, and appeared on the radio shows of Jimmy Durante, Joe E. Brown, Jack Haley and Jim ("Fibber McGee") Jordan in the 1930s and '40s. On "Fibber McGee," he was the inimitable Mayor La Trivia.

In addition to "Our Miss Brooks" and the two Lucille Ball series, Gale has been a regular on four other TV series. He played the loud-mouthed landlord, Heckendorn, on "Make Room for Daddy"; he was one of the brothers (Bob Sweeney was the other) on the 1957 show "The Brothers"; he was the ineffec-

They've got each other

Oliver Clark, Beverly Archer star in comedy series

By Jerry Buck
AP Television Writer

Oliver Clark was worried. He slouched in a chair in his dressing room trailer, propped his feet on a table and scratched his head.

"That's the important thing about a series — if they just give you time for things to settle down," said Clark, who co-stars with Beverly Archer in CBS' "We've Got Each Other."

"It's unfortunate we're hitting the networks at a time when it's up-front ratings instantly or out you go. It's too bad they have no patience. We're a quiet situation comedy and it takes a while for the audience to get to know you."

"We've Got Each Other," as you may suspect, is not exactly burning up the ratings chart. The new Saturday night show has been near the bottom, with the only good omen being that it has been moving up each week.

So the show is in trouble. Especially because the network competition is fiercer than ever, and, with ABC way out front, CBS could be inclined to simply ax the show rather than give it a chance to develop.

And that would be a shame. It's a good show and has the potential for becoming even better.

Clark poured himself a glass of red wine, a luxury on a stringent diet that has seen 120 pounds melt away in the past five years. He is now hovering around 200 pounds. He said, "I've done a lot of stage work, on Broadway and off, and we've gotten the kind of newspaper reviews that would guarantee a play a run of six years."

One review, declaring it the best new show of the season, was tacked to the wall next to a color picture of his therapy group from his days on "The Bob Newhart Show."

CLARK PLAYS a variation of the gentle soul who sought mental health on the Newhart show. But not as depressed and negative and a bit more assertive.

The concept of the show is that Clark works at home and does the cooking, while his wife, played by Miss Archer, is the office manager for an eccentric photographer. Where Clark is laid back, Miss Archer is more spirited, even acidic, and they are ably supported by Tom Poston, Joan Van Ark and Ren Woods.

Although it may sound that way, it's not a story of role reversal. He just happens to work at home and do the cooking and not much is made of it. Nor is he the cliché henpecked husband. The at-home humor comes from the byplay between his unassertiveness and her toughness, but he is not dominated by her.

Clark said some of his own characteristics were incorporated into the character by the show's creators, Jay Tarses and Tom Patchett.

"I have a whimsical sense and I'm not overly aggressive. I provide an intelligent reinforcement to a wife who has a sharper edge," said Clark, who in his own life is a bachelor.

"I'm not very ambitious. I do get very angry, but I'm not far from that character. I collect antique toys and we had a show where I come into possession of an old mechanical bank. I'm an amateur magician and we've got a show coming where I decide to become a magician."

CLARK, 39, GRADUATED from the University of Buffalo with a degree in English and drama. He went to New York and immediately produced an off-Broadway play. It was such an enormous flop he shuffled back to Buffalo.

He taught school for the next three years. He said, "I think some of our greatest actors are schoolteachers. I'll bet there are seven brilliant actors in every school."

"You have to play to an audience. True, you don't have a script, but you do have a syllabus you must get across with your acting. I was a terrific teacher, no modesty."

He remained active in local theater and decided to give professional acting a shot.

"I finished school in June, went to New York in July and got a show in August," he said. "It wasn't because I was a great actor. It was because I was a type. I was very fat then. I was 320 pounds most of my adult life."

After a number of Broadway shows he headed for Hollywood five years ago. A part in the movie "They Might Be Giants" landed him a role on the Newhart show.

"I lost 80 pounds between my first appearance and when they called me back to be a semi-regular," he said. "They had to change the jokes."

Between giving up food and giving up smoking, he said, "All I've got left is two glasses of wine a day."

A scene on the Newhart show called for him to stuff his face with cake. He said, "I hadn't eaten sugar for eight months. So I had them put the cake in a box. I was furiously eating the cake out of the box — and it was little pieces of brown-colored carrots."

Clark said he believes he could write a diet book because he said he understands the thinking of overweight people. He knows all the dodges and all the plays. He even has a title for it — "If It Tastes Good, Spit It Out."

He leads a bachelor life but says he dates occasionally. He is currently without a steady date. "My last girlfriend said she didn't like the pilot," he said wistfully, in what sounds like a line from the show.

On working with Miss Archer, he said, "I think we have a good combination." Inevitably, however, he added, "I hope they give us a chance."

"Brothers Grimm"

Sammy Cahn writes songs for musical

Associated Press

It's the custom for elderly songwriters to grouse that today's tuners aren't as good as in the old days. We now turn the floor over to Sammy Cahn, 64.

"Aw, I don't hold with that much," the four-time Academy Award winner said by phone from New York. "I think every generation has the right to put its own stamp on its own culture."

Lyricist Cahn, a songwriter since age 17, has 18 new tunes in one show arriving Wednesday night. It's a CBS music special called "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm."

A peppery man of sunny disposition and a favorite composer for such singers as Frank Sinatra, Cahn counts the tunes he's written in thousands, not hundreds.

The better-known ones range from "Three Coins in the Fountain" to "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen." In addition to his Oscars, he also got an Emmy in 1955 for "Love and Marriage," later a Sinatra hit.

A resident of Beverly Hills for 37 years, Cahn still maintains an apartment in his native New York, where he and a pal, Saul Chaplin, broke into the song business as a team.

It was there they first scurried about the hallowed halls of tunesmithing, the Brill Building in mid-Manhattan, knocking on publishers' doors, offering their wares and learning of rejection.

"We got turned down every day, but that's how we learned to write," laughed Cahn, who recently ended a stint at New York's Rainbow Room in a show that featured both his anecdotes and his music.

When he began his career, publishers ran things. Cahn was asked where he'd try today if he, at his current age, were starting fresh, had no reputation and never had a song recorded or published before.

"I'd try to find a recording artist who doesn't write his own material, which would be very difficult," he said, noting that most of today's pop singers prefer to write their own songs.

Why the change?

"I wish I could explain it, but I can't," he said. But he suggested that today a singer needn't be all that good to succeed, which helps composers with not-so-hot voices make it as singers.

The suggestion wasn't sarcastic, just realistic.

Cahn, now in the process of writing special material for a coming 50th anniversary salute of CBS by CBS, was asked the inevitable question: Which comes first, the words or the music?

"The phone call," he said, meaning the songwriting assignment.

Speaking of which, the old Hollywood musicals about songwriters give the impression they sit and wait until they suddenly are smitten by inspiration, then feverishly compose that big hit.

"Ah, that's all nonsense, Cahn said. "I'm often asked in my show, 'Do I need to be inspired to write a lyric?'"

"Well, since the gentlemen need to be inspired to pay me, the question is academic. You write when you're hired to. And you better be able to."

Minority owners in radio, TV few and far between

By Les Brown

1977 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Although the Federal Communications Commission has been seeking for about seven years to increase minority-group participation in radio and television ownership, broadcasting remains an industry overwhelmingly dominated by whites.

Of more than 8,000 commercial radio stations in the country, only 51 are owned or controlled by blacks, and a handful more by other racial minorities. KMDX in Parker, Ariz., is the only commercial radio station owned by American Indians.

In television, three commercial stations of the 725 on the air are owned by blacks, and two of those are in the American Virgin Islands. The third, WGPR-TV in Detroit, is a UHF station without a network affiliation, operating on Channel 26 there.

THERE ARE two black-oriented radio networks, the four-year-old National Black Network and the five-year-old Mutual Black Network, each with slightly more than 80 affiliates. Many of the affiliates are stations that play to black audiences but are stations owned by whites.

Both networks have become moderately profitable with their service of five-minute newscasts every hour and occasional other features, but they are dependent for their economic survival on a relatively few national advertisers who dedicate a portion of their budgets to reach a target market of blacks.

Neither is anywhere near the size of the general national networks—ABC, CBS, NBC and the Mutual Broadcasting System — nor do they have their earning potential.

THE SLOW progress of minority-group ownership, stressed by the Congress-sional Black Caucus and a number of public-interest organizations, has caused the FCC to accelerate its efforts to alter the racial imbalance.

Besides soliciting proposals from others, the commission recently put forth its own proposal that would require broadcast licensees to give 45 days' notice before entering a contract to sell their stations so that minority group businessmen might enter bids. Made uneasy by some of the proposals that have been submitted to the commission, particularly one calling for the removal of some existing licenses and making them available to minority-controlled companies — the National Association of Broadcasters has joined the commission's program to enlarge the minority-group ownership of stations.

Peter Falk back for start of new 'Columbo' season

By Jay Sharbutt
AP Television Writer

You may be wondering what's become of Lt. Columbo, the cop in the rumpled raincoat, the guy who starts to leave a suspect, then nails him with just one more question.

Well, on Monday night, NBC will air a 90-minute show, "Try and Catch Me." Peter Falk is the star, his raincoat is among the supporting players and this signals the start of a seventh "Columbo" season.

Uncertainty seems part of the series. In 1976, Falk gave reporters the impression that after he finished his 37th episode he planned to smoke his last Columbo cigar, leave the series and go act somewhere else.

"Naw, I didn't say that," the New York-born actor amiably rasped. "I said what would be heaven on earth, the best of all possible worlds, would be to do one or two 'Columbo' specials a year.

"But I said as far as continuing with the series on a regular basis, I can't be in two places at the same time. I can't make movies and shoot 'Columbo.'"

Indeed, he has been making movies. Last year it was Neil Simon's "Murder by Death," this year it's Simon's "The Cheap Detective," and next February he starts filming "The Great Brink's Robbery."

As for "Columbo," which in its first few seasons aired eight times a year in the now-defunct "Sunday Mystery Movie" slot, well, he did a few more last season. But there were doubts he'd return in 1977-78.

And Falk, who reportedly gets a tidy $500,000 per episode these days, admits he was among the doubters. But now he says there'll be five "Columbo" capers this season. Why the change of heart?

It didn't involve salary, he said, explaining that he's had no kick about his stipend the last three years. The big cause of doubt, he added, was finding first-rate scripts for the series.

"It's hard to get tremendous writing when the medium burns it up so quickly," the 50-year-old actor said. "It's very, very difficult. So now, here you got a show like 'Columbo,' with no action, no violence, so scripts were a problem."

The problem was solved, he said, when writer Richard Allen Simmons was hired to produce this season's shows. Falk has admired him ever since 1963, when they made a TV movie called "The Price of Tomatoes."

The flick, he said, was done in the Frank Capra style. It involved a truck driver and a very pregnant hitchhiker.

"I've spoken to Dick every year since 1971 about doing 'Columbo,' but he was always off writing movies," Falk said. "But this year, he said yes. So that's one of the big things that's happened."

"A second is a new arrangement with NBC and the studio (Universal) which permits me to go out and do anything I want to if I have spare time. Then I come in and shoot these things."

Falk, getting set to shoot a new Columbo thing when interviewed, was asked if he thinks he's finally gotten the best of all possible worlds.

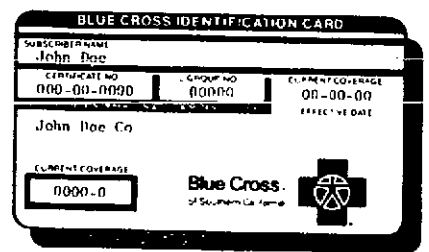

"Yes," replied TV's best-paid, worst-dressed detective. "Yes, I do."

PETER FALK returns in the first "Columbo" drama of the season Monday from 9:30 to 11 p.m. on Ch. 4. Mariette Hartley (below) plays a crime writer's assistant who goes in for belly-dancing.

The voice of Charlie

John Forsythe never gets to see the Angels

Associated Press

In every "Charlie's Angels," Charlie, the wealthy, hedonistic boss of the Angels, does out work by phone whilst dallying with well-built dollies. But his face is never shown.

ABC's press kit on the show doesn't even identify the actor who plays Charlie. This is called a gimmick in some circles.

The thespian, of course, is John Forsythe, the urbane Broadway and film star from Carney's Point, N.J., who began his career a few decades back as a public address announcer for the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

Forsythe says his cover-up commenced two seasons ago when Aaron Spelling, a friend and producer of "Angels," asked him to read a script for the two-hour pilot of the show. As a favor.

"I read it and was not overly impressed," the actor admitted. "But I agreed to do it. They paid me a modest fee and I thought it would be shelved and pushed into oblivion."

So much for prescience. The series seems to be doing OK in the ratings, but Forsythe remains the show's best-known unknown.

This is because, he says, Spelling from the start felt an element of mystery was needed, "and he said, 'Let's not have your name on it, let them wonder who the voice of Charlie is.'"

"And I said, 'Well, that sounds terrific to me,'" said Forsythe, the on-camera host of the syndicated "World of Survival" series and the off-camera voice of commercials touting Michelob beer.

"Well, it proved as big a secret as Pearl Harbor. But we've kept up whatever ruse there is, even though I'm not at all sure the whole world doesn't know Charlie is me."

"I'm constantly amazed at the show's ratings, all those people tuning in to listen to me," he mused, fully aware no one tunes in to see Kate Jackson.

Jacklyn Smith or Cheryl Ladd romp about.

Oddly enough, the man who plays Charlie the swinger considers himself one of Hollywood's most domesticated citizens.

The father of three kids, he's been married to the same woman for about 30 years, he says, and still lives in the same house he bought in 1957 when he moved to Hollywood to star in the "Bachelor Father" series.

His idea of Hollywood

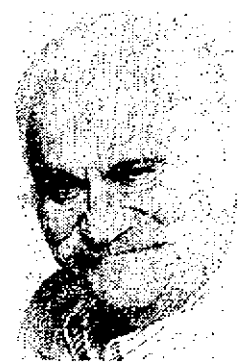

whoopie consists of tennis, wagering a few bucks on horse racing, "and modest dinners with good booze, good wine and good talk."

Another oddity: he's met Farrah Fawcett-Majors, now the best-known ex-star of "Angels," but never the three current main events of the series. He shoots all his segments separately, without them.

"They've invited me to numerous parties, but I've always been tied up somewhere, making a movie or whatever," he sighed. "But they drop me notes every now and then."

"When I go down into the bowels of 20th Century-Fox to record my things, there's always a little inscription from Kate or Jackie, saying, 'We love you, Charlie,' with little X's all over it."

"It keeps my day bright, too."

JACK KRUSCHEN plays the father of Lenny Markowitz (Adam Arkin) on the CBS comedy series "Busting Loose," which airs Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m. on Ch. 2. It is preempted this week.

RICH PEOPLE BUY NEW HOUSES SMART PEOPLE . . . REMODEL THEIR OLD ONES

When you buy new, you're paying an inflated price for a structure of unproven quality. But when you remodel, you're simply making something that you already know is good . . . better!

We at Alamo have been making Southland houses better for over 9 years. People depend on our remodeling services for several simple, but important, reasons:

SAFETY . . . every job is individually bonded. Protects you from labor or material liens and assures your job will be completed.

SERVICES . . . our creative designing ability is confirmed when you visit any of our beautiful showrooms. Of course, we give free estimates and home consultation.

EXPERIENCE . . . Alamo builds more jobs than 99% of the remodeling contractors in the United States. No business can do this unless they are selling a quality product at a fair price.

GALE GORDON

tual boor in "The Joan Caulfield Show," and he portrayed the irascible Mr. Wilson in "Dennis the Menace" (he replaced the late Joseph Kerns in that role).

Among his many roles, does he have a favorite? "They're all the same character — a blowhard," replied the 71-year-old actor.

Is Miss Ball good to work with? "For me, yes, because I love to work hard. She's a perfectionist. Some people don't like to work with her because they just want to sit on their butts.

"There was something special between us, too. There is a chemistry that just happens. You could give us a rough idea of an unfinished script and we could play it for laughs immediately. It's not just the years of working together — it's one of those magic things that's just there."

GORDON LIVES at Borrego Springs with his wife, former actress Virginia Curley, whom he wed 40 years ago this month. He met her on the "Death Valley Days" radio show, and "she was Mrs. Osgood Conklin on radio and the first year on television."

He said he performs in stage plays about seven months a year and that his wife often travels with him.

"I just got back from starring in 'Never Too Late' in Jacksonville, Fla., and before that I did it in Atlanta and New Orleans," the actor said. "Soon I'll be taking it to Edmonton and Regina until April."

He recently did a TV special with Jackie Gleason, Art Carney, Audrey Meadows and Jane Kean in Miami, which will be airing soon on ABC. It's called "The Honeymooners Christmas Special."

Gordon said he is happy to be a second banana on television. "I always aimed to be a character actor," he told me. "I wasn't pretty enough to be a leading man, but I was smart enough to know character actors last longer."

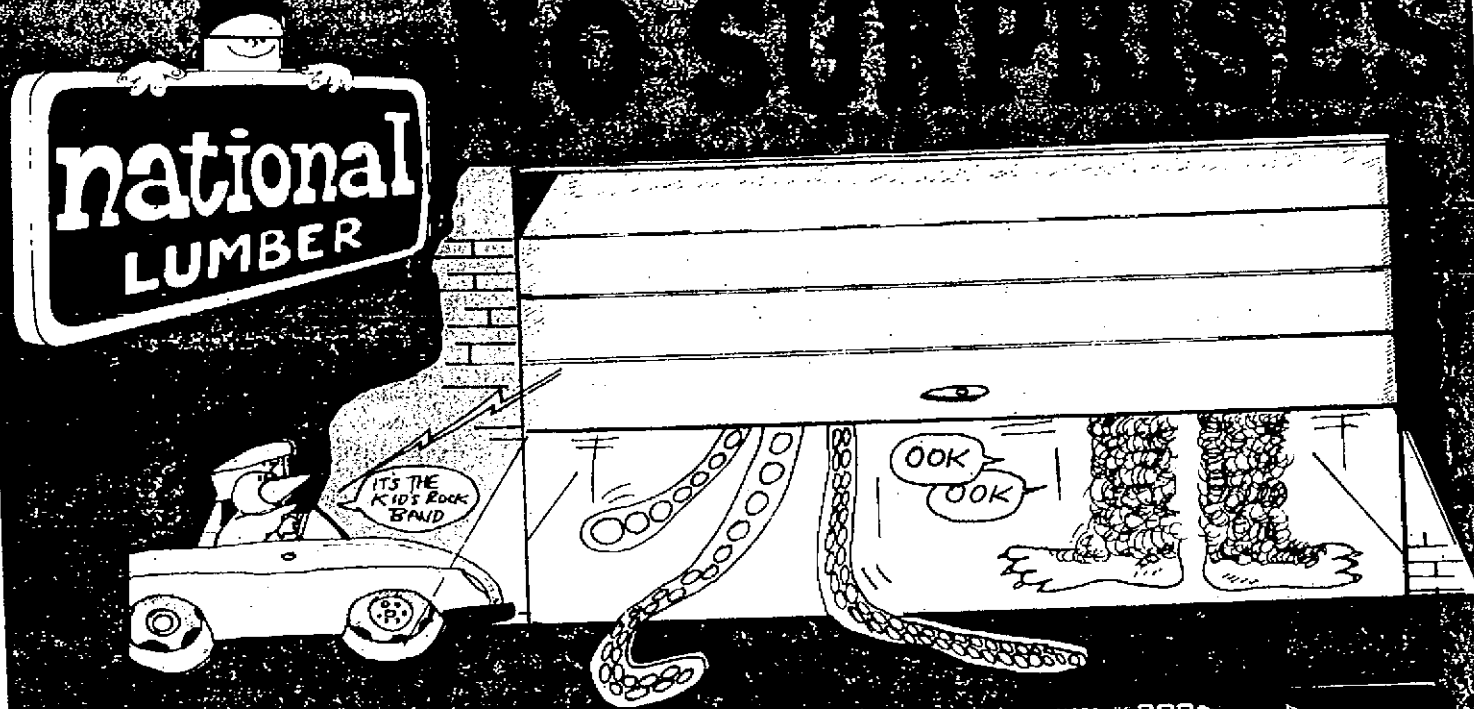

He has lasted 54 years, and has no thoughts of retiring.

Would he consider doing another series? Replied Gordon: "I wouldn't want to do another TV series unless it was with Lucy or someone I respected very much. I wouldn't want to be the star."
